TERRIFIC ELECTION REACTION COMING, SAYS WHEELER

'Even Money Bet Republicans Will Lose Their Majority in Congress Two Years Hence.'

'FALSE PROPAGANDA, 'GOT OVER,' HE SAYS

'Election by Intimidation, Won by Big Business'—Opportunity for Democracy as Liberal Party.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Washington Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15. — "It was an election by intimidation. Unless the American people have lost all political independence, there will be a terrific reaction. In my judgment that reaction will come within two years."

In this characteristically forceful language, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Progressive candidate for vice president in the recent campaign, today summed up his analysis of the election and his forecast of the political future. It occurred at the close of a remarkable interview with the Post-Dispatch correspondent, the first to be granted by either member of the Progressive presidential ticket since Nov. 4.

Wheeler showed no physical wear and tear from his 25,000-mile campaign tour. The twinkle in his blue eyes has not been extinguished by defeat. He draped his long legs over the corner of his desk, lighted a cheroot, and delivered his explanation of how it happened.

Business Campaign.

"To understand the Republican victory," he said, "you must first realize that the Republican campaign was conducted very largely by Big Business. Never in our history has a great political party turned the management of a national campaign over to private interests to the extent that the Republicans did this time. They put a millionaire at the head of their national committee. Throughout the country, Big Business men had charge of the campaign. They put out the propaganda that elected Mr. Coolidge.

"This propaganda was carefully planned and widely circulated. It consisted of a few ideas, most of which were false, but it proved extremely effective.

"The first of these ideas was that La Follette and myself could not be elected, and that a vote for us was a vote to throw the election in Congress. The second was that, if the election went in Congress, there would be chaos, hard times and unemployment. The third was that, unless Coolidge was elected, Gov. Bryan would get into the White House and the fourth was that Gov. Bryan was a man of very small caliber and unsound views.

The Song They Sang.

"This constituted the burden of their song, and they sang it everywhere. Business organizations distributed it among their members. Bankers and merchants repeated it to their customers. Employers passed it on to their employes. Everywhere workmen and farmers had it hammered into them that the only way to avert hard times, and the only way to assure prosperity, was to elect Coolidge. Millions were stampeded by the fear of unemployment and panic.

"As a matter of fact, there is small likelihood that the election of La Follette would have resulted in a panic. Certain gentlemen would have wanted a panic in that case, but they wouldn't have had the nerve to create one. Nor would throwing the election into Congress have resulted in the election of Bryan. On the contrary, it undoubtedly would have resulted in the election of Davis.

"We all know—and the Republicans knew best of all—that there were Republicans in the House who were prepared to vote for Davis to forestall the election of Bryan by the Senate. For that matter I think Davis would have received many Progressive votes in the House. Despite his Wall Street antecedents, his enlightened and liberal attitude during the campaign aroused much admiration among the Progressives. He was a better candidate than the Democrats had reason to expect him to be when they nominated him.

They Had the Money.

"But these explanations never caught up with the Republican campaign lies. They had the money, most of the newspapers,

PLAN TO REFUEL SHENANDOAH WHILE IN TOW OF SHIP

Success of Experiment Would Add to Value of Airship With Battle Fleet.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—In the near future the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy Department will attempt to refuel the airship Shenandoah in the air while under tow of a surface vessel.

This announcement was made today by Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the bureau. Admiral Moffett said that a sort of bridle would be rigged up to a tow line and attached to the mooring gear in the nose of the big rigid. A hose will be connected with the fuel tanks of the airship and gasoline pumped into them from the supply vessel on the surface.

"This is the next important test we will make with the Shenandoah," continued Admiral Moffet. "We are confident that she can be successfully refueled in this way. If the experiment comes up to expectation it will add materially to the usefulness of rigids with the fleet."

In this connection Admiral Moffett said that when a mooring mast was installed in the fuelship Patoka it was not intended to use that vessel as a floating base for the Shenandoah in the middle of the ocean. He doubts that any coupling so far developed would be able to hold a huge rigid to a mast on a ship rolling heavily in the open sea. On the contrary, it was intended to have a mobile mast which could be moved from place to place and to which rigids could tie up in smooth water for refueling while absent from permanent bases.

QUICK-THINKING FLAGMAN IN WRECK SAVES OTHER TRAIN

Crawls From Beneath Body of Woman Just in Time to Signal Engineer to Stop.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 15.—Pinned beneath the body of a woman passenger and made nearly unconscious by the shock of his fall, A. R. Davis, flagman of the Florida East Coast train which left the tracks at Wabasso Friday night, averted more serious results by freeing himself and successfully flagging a southbound train which was bearing down up the scene of the wreck. Five persons were killed and 17 injured in the wreck.

With ten minutes to spare, the flagman extricated himself, made his way the length of the wrecked train, obtained signal flares, and flagged the on-coming train.

The flagman who was standing on the rear of the train when the coach left the track, fell beneath a woman and the two were pinned under the debris of the wrecked car. His first thoughts were of the train, carrying perishables, which entitles it to run on passenger train time, and which at the last station had been reported ten minutes behind the passenger train. He found a fuse and lighted it just in time to stop the on-coming train.

$30,000,000 POWER PLANT

North American Co. to Build Huge Station at Avon, O.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Plans for early construction of a $30,000,000 steam electric generating plant at Avon, O., was announced today by F. L. Dame, president of the North American Co., which will finance the project through its subsidiary, the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. In connection with the expansion program, an offering of bonds is expected next week.

Forming a part of one of the Middle West's largest super-power systems, the new station, with a capacity of 400,000-horsepower, will be linked with the company's Lake Short plant in Cleveland.

A 3000-Year-Old Story

There is a quaint story about Methuselah which is one of the earliest recorded utterances about a better home.

It is said that he was urged to build a house of stone instead of living in a tent.

"How long have I to live"? asked Methuselah.

"Three hundred years," was the answer.

"Then I don't think it's worth while," rejoined the patriarch.

But he was wrong. A better home is always worth while and the change from a rented house to one of your own is the best move possible.

GANGSTERS TO GET 'JUSTICE' ON SPOT IN CHICAGO DRIVE

Picked Squads, Police Chief Says, Will Act in Alleys, Drink Places or Elsewhere.

GUNMEN JEOPARDIZE LIFE AND PROPERTY

Murder Problem of City Declared to Be Acute; Crime Commission to Act on Program.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—Gangsters, gang law and crime have reached a stage in Chicago that jeopardizes life and property. Civic organizations, aroused as never before, are calling on the police to drive all known criminals out of the city. Mayor Dever has promised action.

Chief of Police Collins today organized two squads of 20 picked men to operate in all parts of the city against gunmen. Orders were sent to all police stations to arrest all men known to have a police record. The Detective Bureau is to be reorganized and half the men eliminated.

"The special squads will not trouble about taking gangs to court, but will deal out justice in alleys, soft-drift parlors or wherever the gangs are found," said the Chief. "Such methods were employed in New York, and furnished work for hospitals and not lawyers. The bad men were driven out and came here."

Meanwhile, other steps were being taken seeking the elimination of the hoodlums who have had their own way for many years. The Crime Commission announced the calling of an antiercime conference for tomorrow afternoon. Consideration will be given to a definite program of action prepared as a result of six years of study of Chicago's crime situation. Later they will submit this report to the law-enforcing officers whom they have invited to join the conference.

"City Faces Emergency."

"The murder problem in Chicago is acute," said Charles R. Holden, president of the Crime Commission. "It is getting beyond control. The point has been reached where the city faces a great emergency. This serious situation has had the attention of the commission for a considerable period.

"It has now reached the time where it is vital that every official responsible for checking murder shall give his earnest, whole-hearted and unreserved co-operation to every other official sharing responsibility. It is a responsibility in which the police authorities, the prosecuting authorities and the courts are all a factor."

Chief Collins said some time ago that beer-running syndicates in Chicago were spending money at the rate of $1,000,000 a year to "fix" the law.

"Infamous Lie," Says Judge.

Superior Judge Joseph B. David today branded as an infamous lie the statement by Chief Collins that "rubber stamp Judges" hindered the police in the drive on crime or that "any Judge ever released a prisoner without justification."

Judge David ordered Assistant Corporation Counsel Joseph J. Thompson to arrest Louis Alterie, confidant of Dion O'Banion, on a charge of assault to commit murder. A policeman, testifying at the

COLBECK AND EIGHT OTHER EGAN GANGSTERS ARE ON THE WAY TO LEAVENWORTH TO SERVE 25 YEARS FOR STAUNTON MAIL ROBBERY

Gangsters Who Start Terms in Federal Prison Today

NO LIBERTY FOR THEM WHILE WAITING FOR DECISION ON APPEALS

FIVE TO BE TRIED AGAIN FOR $260,000 ROBBERY HERE.

No Time Off for Good Behavior for Colbeck and Four Others; None to Have Privilege of Parole Until Eight Years Are Passed in Leavenworth Prison.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

QUINCY, Ill., Nov. 16 (Sunday).—The Egan Gang of St. Louis "went west" early today, when "Dinty" Colbeck and his eight convicted associates were started, under heavy guard, for the Leavenworth Federal prison, to begin serving their 25-year sentences for the $54,000 Staunton mail robbery of May, 1923.

The gang met its Waterloo here yesterday when the conviction of all nine men was followed by immediate imposition of the prison sentences, fines of $4000 were assessed against all but one, and the costs of the case, a sum not yet fixed, against them all, and when they were ordered committed to prison at once.

The prisoners and their guards occupied a special car on the train leaving here at 12:53 a. m. The car will be routed via St. Joseph, arriving at Leavenworth at 9:27 a. m., and will be run directly into the prison grounds, so that the prisoners are expected to be behind the bars before noon.

The supersedeas, or appeal bond, under which convicted robbers used to remain at liberty and roam about committing new crimes, is a thing of the past in Federal Court, and the defense lawyers did not take the trouble to ask for it in this case. They will file appeals, but the convicted men will remain in prison while they are pending.

For Colbeck, leader of the Egan gang for three years past, and still Fifth Ward Democratic committeeman, and for his four nearest associates in the convicted group, the 25-year sentence means 25 years, with no time off for good behavior in prison. This is because Colbeck, Steve Ryan, "Chippy" Robinson, "Red" Smith and Oliver Dougherty are under indictment in the St. Louis $260,000 mail truck robbery case. The five will be taken from prison for the second trial of that case set for Jan. 13 next in St. Louis.

The Others Convicted.

None of the nine convicted men will have the privilege of applying for a parole until one-third of his sentence, or more than eight years, has been served. The four convicted, besides Colbeck and those most closely affiliated with the gang, were Gus Dietmeyer and "Cotton" Eppelsheimer, hangers-on of the gang; "Red" Lanham, president and business agent of the St. Louis Teamsters' Union; and Frank Hackethal of Mitchell, Ill., one of two local accomplices in the robbery at Staunton.

The other local accomplice, Thomas Saatkamp of Staunton, was one of the two witnesses whose testimony mainly convicted the group. Ray Renard, leader in the crime and now a prisoner in Atlanta Federal penitentiary, was the chief Government witness.

Jury Out Nearly 23 Hours.

The jury returned its verdict at 10:30 a. m. yesterday nearly 23 hours after taking the case. It found all the defendants except Dietmeyer guilty of all four counts of the indictment, and it found Dietmeyer guilty on the first two counts. The court had instructed that he should be acquitted on the third and fourth counts.

The second count on which all were convicted, fixed the uniform sentence of all. It charged "robbery with a deadly weapon, endangering the lives of those in charge of the mails." For this offense, a sentence of 25 years' imprisonment is mandatory.

The sentences on the other counts, pronounced by the court, were a total of 20 years and $4000 fine each for the others, and 10 years for Dietmeyer, but the added time is to be served concurrently with the 25-year sentences, hence it practically adds nothing.

Case of Dietmeyer.

There was less evidence against Dietmeyer than against the others in the Staunton robbery case, and, if that case alone had been considered, he probably would have gone free. But, under court's instructions, the jury considered evidence as to a previous unsuccessful venture at robbery of the mail in Staunton, in which Dietmeyer was involved. The jury was instructed that, if it found the successful robbery, on May 26, 1922, to be the continuation of the attempt made April 14, it might convict Dietmeyer on two counts in the Staunton case.

The first count charged robbery of the Staunton Postmaster and his clerk, and carried a maximum of 10 years. The third charged aiding and abetting in robbery and concealing the guilty, maximum five years and $5000 fine, and the fourth, possession of stolen money, maximum five years and $5000 fine. They were given the full time, but not the full fines.

There was no testimony that Colbeck, Smith or Dietmeyer took part in the actual robbery at Staunton. But on Renard's testimony that they had part in the plans and preparations, they were found guilty under a section of the Federal penal code which provides that whoever aids, abets, counsels, commands, advises or procures commission of a crime against the law of the United States is a principal in the crime.

The nine defendants sat motionless, with "poker faces" when they heard the jury announce their conviction. The jury was polled, and, the members affirming the verdict, Judge Fitzhenry called on the men to stand up. Colbeck first.

"Mr. Colbeck," he asked, "have you anything to say about this verdict?"

"No, sir," the gang leader and

PRESIDENT TAKES CRUISE IN COLD RAIN AND SNOW

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—President Coolidge left Washington in a cold rain and snowstorm this afternoon for one of his week-end cruises down the Potomac, on the Mayflower, which he has resumed since the election. The weather was not promising, and the party is not expected to venture far from the capital.

Accompanying the President were Mrs. Coolidge, Commissioner Blair of the Internal Revenue Bureau, and Mrs. Blair; Herbert L. Pratt of New York, a classmate with the President at Amherst, and Mrs. Pratt, and these three members of the Farm Commission which he recently appointed, R. W. Thatcher of the Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva, N. Y.; Dean W. C. Coffee of the Minnesota College of Agriculture and President William Jardine of the Kansas College of Agriculture. The new Farm Commission will hold its first meeting on Monday.

BRITAIN AND JAPAN CLASH OVER OPIUM RESTRICTION PLAN

England's Delegate at Geneva Parley Charges Tokio Had Broken Off Private Negotiations.

CERTIFICATES OF IMPORT ATTACKED

Conference Apparently Far From Agreement—China Gives Support to U. S. Proposal for Curb.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Nov. 15.—Charges and countercharges embittered today's session of the International Opium Conference on Far Eastern opium problems, and, although the Conference should have finished its work tonight, so that a report on its conclusions might be presented to the general conference to open Monday, it seemed as far from agreement as when the sessions began a fortnight ago.

China charged that if the Great Powers had not adopted effective measures to reduce opium smoking in the Far East, such as rationing and the registration of smokers, it was because they did not wish to do so.

England charged Japan with attacking the British Government during the discussion over the Japanese proposal that countries exporting opium should recognize the import certificates issued by other countries, and furnish opium when the documents declared that the opium is for legitimate purposes. Sir Malcolm Delevingne, speaking for Great Britain, disclosed that private negotiations concerning exportation and transshipment of opium have been going on between London and Tokio, and he expressed astonishment that Japan should raise the question at Geneva.

Rupture of Parley Threatened.

Replying to the Japanese delegate, he indicated that Japan had broken off these negotiations, preferring to bring the question before the Conference. The debate became so heated it looked for a time as if the conference would be disrupted. M. Sugimura announced that Japan would never sign an opium convention unless it was built on good faith, and he refused to vote on the question whether the next meeting of the Conference should be held tomorrow or Monday, saying: "I shall not vote because I have said my last word."

Sir Malcolm insisted that Great Britain could never agree to unlimited shipments of opium on the mere strength of import certificates, and referred to the case of one of the Far Eastern countries, where high officials were arrested for complicity in an opium scandal.

He questioned whether Great Britain could continue to have confidence concerning the export of opium under such conditions, maintaining it would be violation of The Hague opium convention.

That the country to which Sir Malcolm referred was Japan was made clear when Sugimura jumped to his feet and said the guilty Japanese officials had been properly punished. He declared that Japan could produce evidence of crimes committed by officials of other Governments in connection with the opium traffic, but would not do so at Geneva because it was bad politics.

Demands Japanese Information.

The Indian delegate declared that India as an opium exporting country would always reserve the right to refrain from exporting when it had no special agreement with other countries. He continued: "The Japanese representative has made a threat. If Japan possesses unfavorable information concerning the officials of other Governments, she should disclose it or should never have alluded to it."

Sugimura then charged that India's interest in the opium problem was "mainly economic," and insisted that the discussion was being carried to a low level. If Japan was to be suspected when she desired opium shipments for legitimate purposes then no accord reached at Geneva would be signed by Japan.

M. Sze, for China, arose and smilingly said that all the trouble came from secrecy in the subcommittees and that the conference might be saved if what went on in the subcommittee rooms could be known by all the delegates. Amid great confusion the conference adjourned.

China Supports America.

The National Anti-Opium Association of China presented to the conference a petition which supports the original American proposal that the production of opium and narcotic drugs should be limited strictly to medical and scientific purposes. It insists that the welfare of the whole human race is threatened by the rapid increase in the use of nuarcotics.

The petition, signed by the president and secretary of the society at Shanghai, attributes the unhappy recrudescence of the opium evil in China to the prevalence of civil strife and the neglect of law and to the increased importation of narcotics from other lands. It declares that numerous Chinese immigrants and traders living in the Straits Settlement, the East Indies and other non-Chinese territories, have become the victims of opium and narcotics.

After affirming the will and intention of these nations to eradicate the production and distribution of opium in the near future, the petitioners asked the conference to obtain an agreement among all the nations to limit the production of opium and its derivatives, to the amount required for medical and scientific purposes. This, they declare, would help greatly not only the Chinese people but the people of other lands in the struggle to restrict the practice of opium smuggling to inurables and thereby insure the disappearance of the habit within a definite period.

The conference took no action on the Chinese petition but passed to the consideration of articles of the draft convention projects. Japan opened her campaign to obtain the registration and rationing of all smokers as the most effective method of attaining the complete suppression of opium smoking.

Great Britain Favors Rationing.

Great Britain offered a submotion favoring registration and rationing as the best method short of total prohibition by which the suppression of smoking finally could be achieved and recommending that all the governments endeavor to adopt this system as soon as possible.

France insisted on keeping the resolution down merely to directing the attention of the Government to the results obtained by registration.

Alfred Sze, for China, pleaded that obligatory registration should be instituted by January, 1928.

RENARD'S WOUNDED VANITY LED TO UNDOING OF THE EGAN GANGSTERS

'Ladies' Man,' Who Used Perfume, Couldn't Stand Prison With the Others Out, So He 'Snitched.'

Conviction of "Dinty" Colbeck and his Egan gangsters and others—the heaviest blow ever struck at a St. Louis gang by the courts—was the direct result of a desire for revenge by a member of the gang, Ray Renard, in prison for another crime. He imagined, possibly not without good reason, that he had been abandoned to his fate by his pals.

Renard had been used to a gay life, as were Colbeck, Ryan, Robinson, Dougherty, Smith and Lanham, each of whom was sentenced yesterday at Quincy to 25 years in the penitentiary for mail robbery.

In the parlance of the underworld, Renard was "there with the molls." In other words, he was a "ladies' man," or believed himself to be attractively endowed, and he could not suffer the solitude of long years of confinement in silence in the light of his former associates in crime being at large in full enjoyment of the fruits of liberty.

One of the convicted gangsters at Quincy gave this reason for Renard turning "snitch": "He was very vain. He used large quantities of perfume. His racket was to shine up to the ladies. His ambition was to be a heartbreaker, but when they tightened him up in that stirhouse, it broke his own heart. Then he babbled."

In other words, Renard's vanity was wounded when he was locked up in the penitentiary, and, imagining himself abandoned by his former pals in crime, he committed the unpardonable sin of the underworld and "talked."

That is the Egan gang's own version of how Renard had come to shatter precedent in the underworld code, and when he became the informant of the Government it brought upon him the epithet "snitch," the ugliest word in the lingo of the underworld. Notwithstanding that this vulgar jargon reeks with profanity, to the gangster "snitch" is its meanest word—a word that is not spoken, but hissed through gritting teeth, and it has been the death sentence of many a man who has talked overmuch to the police.

Not only that, the opprobrium attached to that word has sealed the lips of dying gangsters in the past, thus baffling police investigation of numerous killings, and it had become an accepted belief in police circles that gangsters never "snitch."

For a long time after Renard had informed against the gang, Colbeck and others, particularly Oliver Dougherty, were loath to believe that he would turn against them. That sort of thing wasn't in their code. "You've got him wrong," they would insist. "He's an all right dude."

Imagine the consternation in their camp when official word did come out that the Government would depend on Renard to make its mail robbery cases in St. Louis and Quincy.

How Renard approached Government officials with his proposition to "squeal" is one of a sequence of events following the $260,000 downtown mail truck robbery here April 2, 1923, and comes into the story after he was sent to Federal prison for seven years for a freight car robbery.

A few days after the mail robbery Postoffice Inspectors and others at work on the case were informed that John H. Niedringhaus, a local stock salesman, was trying to peddle securities such as were described as being among the loot. Niedringhaus was arrested in a broker's office trying to sell a list of the stolen securities, and it was the work of only a few hours to get a confession from him that he was selling the securities for "Whitey" Doering, Egan gangster.

In a raid on Doering's home, in Richmond Heights, considerable of the loot was recovered, and Doering, David Weissman, Steve Ryan and "Chippy" Robinson were indicted. Doering and Weissman were tried and given prison sentences, 30 and 25 years, respectively. Doering appealed from the conviction and while at liberty under bond was killed in a shooting affray. No action was taken on the other indictments at the time.

Renard Jumped His Bond.

Last April, a year after the mail truck robbery, Renard was due to begin serving a seven-year sentence for theft from an interstate shipment. It was found that he had jumped his bond, but one day he was turned over to Federal officers by Colbeck, and was forthwith sent to prison.

Colbeck had procured bondsmen for Renard, and Ryan and Robinson were in danger of being surrendered on their bonds unless Renard was brought back.

A search was instituted by the gangsters, and he was located in his mother's home by Dougherty and Ryan. He had been in Mexico, his mother informed them, and had just returned to St. Louis.

Ryan sat outside in his car and Dougherty went in to see Renard. The latter was in bed when Dougherty stepped into the room. Near the bed was Renard's pistol and a box if cartridges, which he attempted to reach, but Dougherty stopped between him and the pistol.

Sits Up and Shakes Hands.

"Hello, Ray," said Dougherty, extending his hand.

Renard was sitting up in bed.

"If I thought you meant that I'd feel better," said Renard, nervously taking Dougherty's hand.

Renard at the moment feared that Dougherty had come to kill him.

"I mean it, Ray; I am your friend," said Dougherty. "But you've got to come in—come in today. Otherwise our bondsmen will desert us all. They won't take a loss on your bond.'"

"I'd go in, Oliver," said Renard, "but you've got a couple of carloads of men outside ready to bump me off if I step outside."

Dougherty reassured Renard and had the latter telephone Colbeck. When reassured by Colbeck that everything was all right, Renard then surrendered, and was sent to the Federal Prison at Leavenworth.

Boys Raised $100 For Him.

Before being taken away to begin his seven years Renard was given about $100 that had been raised for him by the gangsters, and after he had been in prison a few weeks Dougherty sent him some clothing. Friendly letters passed between him and Dougherty for some time and then the correspondence was dropped by Renard.

That was about three months following his incarceration, and shortly thereafter the Federal grand jury here returned a new set of indictments against Ryan and Robinson and also indictments against Colbeck, Smith, Dougherty, Walter Kelly, the blind lawyer, and others.

It was subsequently disclosed that these indictments were based on a confession obtained from Renard in the Leavenworth prison. The facts came out at the trial of the gangsters here three weeks ago, on the local mail robbery charge, which resulted in a hung jury.

Renard, languishing in prison and longing for the free and easy life that he had enjoyed as a member of the gang, voluntarily wrote a letter to Horace L. Dyar, employed to prosecute the mail robbers, asking Dyar for a conference. At this conference Renard told of the local mail robbery and also of the Staunton mail robbery in which he was a principal, and it was this information that resulted in the indictments at Quincy and convictions there yesterday.

Renard has made a splendid witness at both trials, here and at Quincy. He told a straightforward, convincing story in each case, and the hung jury in the case here was a great surprise probably to a majority of the persons who followed the detail of the evidence.

Expect Him to Become "Hero."

Now that Renard has told all and had his revenge, what? He has a sentence of seven years, but most likely will be released long before that has expired in view of his valuable services as a witness. He is also under a sentence of two years in the State courts for carrying a concealed weapon.

Assuming that the higher courts sustain the convictions at Quincy, Renard will be at liberty many years before any of the men his evidence put behind the bars will be out.

One of the convicted gangsters said Renard probably would return to St. Louis and set himself up as a hero for being the Government's star witness.

"He can have all that kind of glory he wants," said this gangster, "but I would prefer a long stretch in the stirhouse to being a—well you know what I mean."

He meant "snitch," which was plainly indicated by the expression of disgust that clouded his features when he alluded to the hateful word.

HARRY BOYD GIVES BOND ON JACK DANIEL CHARGE

Former Secretary of George Remus Surrenders After Leaving Atlanta Prison; to be Tried Here.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 15.—Harry Boyd, of St. Louis, former confidential secretary for George Remus, "bootlegger," surrendered to United States Marshal Borthwick today, immediately after serving nine months and 18 days in the Atlanta Federal penitentiary, on three charges of conspiring to violate the national prohibition act. He was released on a $5000 bond signed by himself to appear in St. Louis in January to answer another indictment.

Boyd and Remus, with a number of others, were sentenced for their part in the operation of Death Valley farm near here, from which liquor was distributed throughout this section of the country.

The St. Louis indictment charges 17 persons including Remus Boyd, Mrs. Remus, William Mueller, a former nightwatchman at the Remus home, and William J. Kinney, a Missouri Deputy Internal Revenue Collector, with conspiracy in the looting of the Jack Daniel Warehouse here from which 893 barrels of whisky were "milked" in September, 1923. At drug store prices this liquor would have brought $1,800,000.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, D. G. Johnson, 609 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill., is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

FATHER OF WIFE OF RHINELANDER RECORDED COLORED

Naturalization Records Show Father-in-Law of Prominent New Yorker Admitted That Race.

BRIDE'S SISTER MARRIED NEGRO

Marriage License of George Jones' Daughter, Emily, States She and Husband Are Colored.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Records in the Naturalization Bureau of County Clerk Ellrodt at White Plains give indisputable evidence that George Jones, father-in-law of Leonard Kip Rhinelander, scion of a prominent New York family, is a colored man.

It has been denied after the marriage to Rhinelander of Jones' daughter, Alice Beatrice Jones, who gave her age as 23, had become known, that the father of the bride was colored. The record, beside showing that Jones gave testimony before the court that he was colored, also sets forth that age of the bride is 25 now instead of 23, as she swore in the application for a marriage license.

The first papers under the naturalization law were issued by the City Court of Mount Vernon and were signed by Hiram J. Collins, clerk, on March 30, 1895. The oath of allegiance was signed on May 24, 1912, before Franklin Montross, as special county clerk. The citizen papers were granted by Supreme Court Justice Joseph Morschauser at White Plains on May 24, 1912.

In his declaration to become a citizen of the United States of America Jones set forth "O, George Jones (colored man), declare on oath that it is bona fide my intention to become a citizen of the United States and to renounce forever all allegiance to any foreign Prince, potentate or sovereignty whatever and particularly to the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland."

Jones swore that he was born on May 12, 1859, at Lestershire, England, and arrived here on the Majestic on March 19, 1891. The petition for naturalization gave the names and ages of Jones' daughters as follows:

Emily Elizabeth, born Dec. 4, 1895; Alice, born June 19, 1899; Grace Marie, born July 19, 1903.

Among the records in the County Clerk's office, the marriage licens issued to Mrs. Rhinelander's sister, Emily, also was found today. It gives Emily as "colored" and also her husband, Robert David Brooks. It states that the ceremony was performed in New Rochelle on March 15, 1915, by J. B. Boodie, and that in applying for the license Miss Jones said she was a waitress, lived at the Pelham road address, that her father was George Jones and her mother Elizabeth Williams, both born in England. Her age was then 19.

Brooks said he was 22, colored, the son of "E" Brooks and Mollie Williams, both born in the United States.

Colbeck and His Gangsters to Go to Prison at Once

Dougherty Betrays Emotion.

The only one who betrayed a trace of emotion was Dougherty. His face seemed troubled and his voice broke slightly when he responded. He knows what a prison sentence means, for he has served three terms as a convict.

Judge Fitzhenry might have deferred pronouncing sentence if he had chosen. Instead, after promptly overruling motions for a new trial, the Judge pronounced sentences, prefacing this action with a denunciation of the robbery.

"This crime," he said, "is one of the most dastardly I've ever known of, except, of course, crimes involving human slaughter. Fortunately, there was none of that in this offense. These defendants, however, are entitled to get all the law provides.

"There is no opportunity for taking a stand in middle ground. There are no mitigating circumstances of any kind or character, so that these defendants will be given all that the law provides for them.

"They had a fair trial. The jury was sequestered and guarded, and could not be influenced by anything of an extrinsic character, and I may add that the defendants have had the benefit of every device known to the law for their protection.

"The defense was conducted with a high degree of professional skill from first to last. Nothing was left undone."

Immediately after the verdict was returned Tom Rowe Jr., of defense counsel, presented motions for a new trial in behalf of all the defendants, which had been prepared in advance. Rowe contended that Renard, as a felon, was an incompetent witness. Judge Fitzhenry replied that under the existing statutes he was competent.

A 30-day period was granted for the filing of a bill of exceptions by defense counsel, to pave the way for an appeal.

Nine Men in Handcuffs.

Court adjourned after sentences were pronounced and the defendants were remanded to the custody of United States Marshal McClure.

The nine men were handcuffed before being led from the Federal Building, and marched down the hall under heavy guard.

Lanham, who was leading the way, manacled to a deputy marshal, waved his free hand as he started down the steps, and called a farewell. Colbeck and Hackethal, Robinson and Smith, Ryan and Dietmeyer, Dougherty and Eppelsheimer composed the manacled pairs that followed.

In front of the building about the patrol wagon about 100 persons had gathered to watch the well-dressed defendants, who, but for their manacles, might have been a crowd of young business men going on a mission of relative unimportance. When the last had got into the patrol the door was shut and locked, detectives and deputy marshals climbed on the running board and rear step and the patrol moved off to jail.

The Man Who Got $1500.

The convicted men were preceded, on their trip to the jail, by Saatkamp, the Government witness who got $1500, as he and Renard testified, for "tipping off" the gangsters as to the time of arrival of mail shipments of money at Staunton.

During the trial Renard and Saatkamp were kept in seclusion and under heavy guard in a room on the third floor of the Federal Building. The Post-Dispatch correspondent, who chanced to discover the place before the trial began, was pledged to secrecy until the trial was over. Renard was taken away Friday night, and presumably has been returned to Atlanta prison, where he is serving seven years for theft from an interstate shipment.

Saatkamp seemed in a very happy frame of mind as he was taken from the building, and stopped in the corridor to shake hands with a woman employed in the building, who said she had never met him. Plans for the disposition of the indictment still pending against Saatkamp have not been announced. It has been expected that he would go free in consideration of his testimony.

While the convicted men were in a room at the rear of the courtroom, before being taken to jail, the Post-Dispatch correspondent knocked on the door, and Dougherty responded and called to Colbeck, "Come on out, Dint."

Appearing just as cheerful as he had before convicted, and wearing his derby on the back of his head, Colbeck stepped to the door. In response to an inquiry concerning his "feelings," he said, "All right," and grinned.

"You heard what I just said in the courtroom when the judge asked me if I had anything to say," Colbeck continued. "I told him, no, sir, that we had a fair trial and if the jury saw fit to convict, there's nothing we can do about it.

"In Tight Places Before."

"Anyhow, I've been in tight places before. I went 'over the top' in France and I didn't cry then—and I won't cry now."

Colbeck lifted his eyebrows when asked what change would take place in the Fifth Ward political situation, with him gone.

"Of course, I won't be there," he replied with a laugh. "I'm going to Leavenworth. But I won't lose my citizenship." He intimated that he would at least name his successor as committeeman.

Steve Ryan waved a greeting to the reporter, and shook his head emphatically to indicate he thought the verdict was severe. "Dint" Eppelsheimer winked, instead of waving, but also shook his head. Dougherty and the others were coldly silent and quiet.

Jury Had Difficult Time.

The jury, which took the case at 11:50 a. m. Friday, had considerable difficulty in reaching its verdict, twice called on the Court for additional instructions, chiefly as to the weight of the alibi testimony offered in behalf of Lanham and Dougherty. The Court repeated the instruction, previously given, that an alibi, when established by complete proof of innocence, and that alibi testimony must be received with caution, being the weakest defense manufactured and the hardest to disprove. The jury also asked if it might find some of the defendants guilty and some not guilty, and was told that it might do so, that it might convict or acquit all the defendants and disagree as to others.

Judge Fitzhenry called newspaper reporters to his chambers one day night and ordered that under no circumstances were they to question the jurors, regarding the outcome of their deliberations.

The personnel of the jury, the members of which were farmers, follows: E. O. Yeldell, Clayton farmer; Monte Simms, Ballwin farmer; J. K. Kincaid, Affton farmer; Clifton Smith, Jackson ville, laborer; Arthur Conlee, Jacksonville, draftsman; George Hamphen, Warsaw, farmer; Charles Leroy Parker, Taylorville, publisher; J. W. Platt, Lake Fo farmer; Raleigh Randall, Clinton retail shoe salesman; James Burns, Greenfield, livestock man; Guy Coultas, Jacksonville farmer; and Charles Curtis Kampsville, farmer and fruit grower.

Judge Fitzhenry's father-in-law, H. R. Rankin of Bloomington, died Friday at 2 p. m. and word of his death was conveyed to the Judge while he waited for the jury.

Would Defend Policeman.

Attorney Rowe, who represented "Red" Lanham and who was the St. Louis police officers summoned to testify in behalf of their client and the general defense, said when shown a dispatch stating these officers would be the subject of an inquiry by the Police Board that he would gladly defend them free of charge.

RECORD OF NINE GANGSTERS ON WAY TO PRISON

THREE of the nine men convicted at Quincy yesterday have been convicted previously of crimes of violence, and two have served penitentiary terms. The activities of the different members of the group have been:

"Dinty" Colbeck, political manipulator and proprietor of a resort which served as the Egan gang's rendezvous.

Oliver Dougherty, Egan gangster, burglar, has served three penitentiary terms.

"Red" Smith, Egan gangster, bank robber; served one penitentiary term.

"Chippy" Robinson, Egan gangster, highwayman; served Workhouse term for robbery.

Steve Ryan, Egan gangster, known as a bank robber, but no previous conviction.

"Cotton" Eppelsheimer, Egan gang hanger-on.

Gus Dietmeyer, Egan gang hanger-on.

"Red" Lanham, slugger. President and $5000-a-year business agent of the Teamsters' Union. He was one of the most highly paid labor organizers in the United States, and, besides his salary, had the use of an automobile and a liberal expense allowance.

Lanham has been arrested frequently as the head of "wrecking crews," or gangs of sluggers, during strikes. At such times the police have had standing orders to permit no one to ride in Lanham's automobile with him. Lanham was questioned as to the accidental killing of a woman by a bullet fired at a nonunion driver during the milk wagon drivers' strike. On another occasion he was arrested for assaulting a physician and his wife, both of whom he dragged from their car and pummeled after a collision with his machine.

INFORMATION OF WAR SOUGHT

General Staff Historians Appeal to A. E. F. Officers and Men.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The War Department issued an appeal to wartime officers, field clerks and enlisted men of the army in France requesting that they forward to the department any papers they may have which would throw light upon the participation in the war of units to which they were assigned. "No wartime papers should be thrown away," the appeal declares. "Even an informal note or a rough sketch may be the key to an important situation."

The papers are desired in order that the historical section of the general staff may complete a series of monographs covering the participation of the American forces in the various operations of the World War and also that all orders, reports, diaries, memorandums, maps, telegrams, messages, informal notes, etc., bearing upon activities or operations may be with the records of the proper units on file in the Adjutant-General's office.

ONE-DAY MAYOR PROVES A GOOD SCOUT ON JOB

Augustin Jones Helps Janitor Get a Raise, Signs Nine Paroles and Wins Support of Aldermen.

NEW "POLICE CHIEF" A LOYAL SUPPORTER

Boy Scouts Help Direct Traffic and Sit in for Business Executives to Aid Community Fund.

The administration of "Mayor" Augustin Jones, which closed last night—he was inaugurated as Boy Scout Mayor of St. Louis yesterday morning—is viewed by political critics as having been singularly successful.

Disgruntled office seekers may point out that the Mayor spent virtually half his term shaking hands, but is that unusual in a Mayor? Other detractors may assert that the Mayor really did nothing except sign a proclamation and nine parole papers and smell the flowers sent by admiring friends.

Moreover, one must mark the complete accord between Mayor Jones and his Board of Aldermen, the legislative body, meeting in the board chamber at city hall, had under consideration a measure which it considered most important. Should the salary of Janitor Mitchell Gray be raised.

The debate was furious. It was argued by those who favored the administration's viewpoint, that Janitor Gray had kept the brass railing in the board chamber clean at all times and had dusted the light globes over each Alderman's desk. He should be rewarded.

But the radical wing of the party, composed of several 15-year-old Boy Scouts, asserted that they had found specks of dust on their desks, and that they must await the report of the Bureau of Municipal Research as to the efficiency of Janitor Gray.

Aldermen Like Their Work.

At this juncture, when the board was in a deadlock, Mayor Jones appeared and urged co-operation. The motion to raise Janitor Gray's salary carried, and thus the administration was upheld. So much did the Aldermen like their work that they voted down a motion to adjourn.

"But that's all the business we have before us," protested the real President of the Board, Walter Boun.

The youthful Aldermen were in law-making mood. Cynical observers said that they showed the same tendency to make laws for the sheer sport of it as their elder principals. Once more the calm wisdom of Mayor Jones and the leadership of Russell Holbrook, President of the Board of Aldermen, carried the day. The board reluctantly adjourned.

The Board of Public Service, meeting in the chambers where the final board meets, approved an appropriation of $100,000 for a Boy Scout service house in Forest Park.

Much credit for the success of Mayor Jones' administration is due Scout James Beely, 16 years old, of 4935 Maryland avenue, Richmond Heights, who acted as Chief of Police. His dealings with the press were particularly noteworthy.

"No News," Chief Beely Says.

"There is no news," he told reporters. "You must await further developments." When asked what he thought of the conviction of Dinty Colbeck and his gang at Quincy he expressed gratification. Then he looked mysterious and busied himself with mail and telephone.

His "men," serving as traffic policemen on the downtown streets under the tutelage of regular cops, kept traffic on the jump. A slight tendency to blow whistles every two seconds was the only drawback complained of by motorists against the young cops. It could not be determined whether the Boy's experience shattered boyish illusions or more firmly fixed the ambitions of those who stood on the corners

Augustin Jones Helps Janitor Get a Raise, Signs Nine Paroles and Wins Support of Aldermen.

NEW "POLICE CHIEF" A LOYAL SUPPORTER

Boy Scouts Help Direct Traffic and Sit in for Business Executives to Aid Community Fund.

The administration of "Mayor" Augustin Jones, which closed last night—he was inaugurated as Boy Scout Mayor of St. Louis yesterday morning—is viewed by political critics as having been singularly successful.

Disgruntled office seekers may point out that the Mayor spent only half his term shaking hands. But is that unusual in a Mayor? Other detractors may assert that the Mayor really did nothing except sign a proclamation and nine parole papers and smell the flowers sent by admiring friends.

Moreover, one must mark the complete accord between Mayor Jones and his Board of Aldermen, the legislative body, meeting in the board chamber at city hall, had under consideration a measure which it considered most important. Should the salary of Janitor Mitell Gray be raised.

The debate was furious. It was joined by those who favored the administration's viewpoint, that Janitor Gray had kept the brass railing in the board chamber clean at all times and had dusted the light globes over each Alderman's desk. He should be rewarded.

But the radical wing of the party, composed of several 15-year-old Boy Scouts, asserted that they had found specks of dust on their desks, and that they must await the report of the Bureau of Municipal Research as to the efficiency of Janitor Gray.

Aldermen Like Their Work.

At this juncture, when the board was in a deadlock, Mayor Jones appeared and urged co-operation. The motion to raise Janitor Gray's salary carried, and thus the administration was upheld. So much did the Aldermen like their work that they voted down a motion to adjourn.

"But that's all the business we have before us," protested the real president of the Board, Walter Dunn.

The youthful Aldermen were in a law-making mood. Cynical observers said that they showed the same tendency to make laws for the sheer sport of it as their elder principals. Once more the calm wisdom of Mayor Jones and the leadership of Russell Holbrook, President of the Board of Aldermen, carried the day. The board reluctantly adjourned.

The Board of Public Service, meeting in the chambers where the final board meets, approved an appropriation of $100,000 for a Boy Scout service house in Forest Park. Much credit for the success of Mayor Jones' administration is due Scout James Beely, 16 years old, of 1115 Maryland avenue, Richmond Heights, who acted as Chief of Police. His dealings with the press were particularly noteworthy.

"No News," Chief Beely Says.

"There is no news," he told reporters. "You must await futrher developments." When asked what he thought of the conviction of Monty Colbeck and his gang at Quincy he expressed gratification. Then he looked mysterious and sealed himself with mail and telephone.

His "men," serving as traffic policemen on the downtown streets under the tutelage of regular cops, got traffic on the jump. A slight tendency to blow whistles every few seconds was the only drawback complained of by motorists against the young cops. It could not be determined whether the Boy's experience shattered boyish illusions or more firmly fixed the traditions of those who stood on the corners to emulate Joe Schneider. It was noted, however, that along toward noon the boys were not waving their arms as briskly as in the early morning hours.

The scouts were not authorized to make arrests, but several of them were stationed on corners where traffic policemen had occasion to hand a summons to a careless driver.

Aside from taking the places of executives in the city administration, the scouts were distributed among business houses and various institutions. Many of them were traveling delegations and several groups called on Mayor Jones at the city hall to extend best wishes for his term.

Another Slogan Tip.

The Mayor issued a proclamation naming yesterday as Boy Scout day and officially opening the campaign of the Community Fund for its 1923 budget. The parole papers he signed were those for nine prisoners in the city workhouse whose pleas for clemency had been approved by the grown-up board which has such matters in hand.

Whatever are Mayor Jones' political ambitions, he carefully suppressed any announcement. City hall officials pointed out that he had disproved the theory that it must be Kiel or chaos, so well did things run without Mayor Kiel's presence. If a slogan is needed for the Boy Scout administration, it might be "Jones or Groans."

The Boy Scouts took over the town administrations of Kirkwood and Maplewood also, acting under the sponsorship of the officials of these suburbs. The idea for Boy Scout day was put forward to aid the Community Fund campaign.

INCOME TAX PUBLICITY FIGHT LAUNCHED BY BROOKLYN CLUB

Mass Meeting to Be Called to Organize Protest Against Public Inspection of Returns.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—An organized protest against the public inspection of income tax returns was launched today by the Comittee on National Affairs of the Union League Club of Brooklyn.

On the ground that the practice legalized by the Revenue Department was a direct violation of the Fourth Constitutional amendment on search and seizure, the committee said, it had the Club's authority to apply for leave to file a brief, amicus curiae, to any suit the Attorney-General may bring to test the publicity provision of the law and to take any steps necessary to organize a demand for its repeal.

Charles F. Kingsley, chairman, announced that the comittee would call a mass meeting of Brooklyn and Long Island residents to organize such a demand.

"We condemn the publicity provision of the income tax law as destructive of privacy and a denial of the fundamental right of citizens to keep their affairs to themselves," said Kingsley. "Income tax publicity has been the cause of much envy, humiliation and unhappiness. If you destroy the right of a person to keep his affairs to himself, you destroy his right of happiness to the extent that privacy is necessary to his happiness. Nothing in the way of legislation could go further toward restricting the freedom of the individual, and limiting his rights than the action of Congress in opening his books."

20 TONS OF OBSCENE BOOKS SEIZED IN RAID IN PARIS

Literature in Brothers' Establishment Was Destined for England and America.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—Working in collaboration with a commission appointed by the League of Nations, the Paris police have discovered what they believe to be the headquarters of a European organization for publishing and distributing salacious literature. In a secret room rented in a tailor's establishment on the Faubourg St. Honore by two brothers, Georges and Roger Briffaut, the police seized 20 tons of obscene books destined chiefly for England and America.

Five motor trucks were required to cart away the mass of publications. The Briffaut Brothers had been carrying on their traffic for years and their profits had amounted to more than a million francs yearly. Both had chateaux in the country. Feeling that they were suspected, lately, they had doubled their precautions to avoid detection. Once before, believing themselves shadowed, they requisitioned all the taxicabs in a certain street in order to prevent detectives following them if it was necessary for them to escape. They possess branches in the provinces with centers for publishing thousands of photographs and engravings.

Arrested on Lottery Charge.

Flynn Story, a United Railways conductor, was arrested and released on bond Friday evening after the police gambling squad had confiscated 2000 weather lottery tickets in his home, 2804 Arlington avenue. The tickets were priced at $1, and 25 to 10 cents and offered capital prizes as high as $600 and daily prizes up to $100 to holders of tickets whose numbers corresponded with numbers in the temperature readings published in daily newspapers. Story made no statement.

MARJORIE SCHNEIDER'S TRIAL POSTPONED BY PROSECUTOR

Driver of Car When Nephew of Mrs. Ogden Reid Was Killed Still in Seclusion.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 15.—Ward Church, prosecutor of the town of North Haven, announced tonight that he would not try the case of Marjorie Schneider on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated, on Monday morning, as he had announced. Miss Schneider was the driver of the car which figured in the mysterious accident in which Charles Rogers, nephew of Mrs. Ogden Mills Reid, was killed, on Nov. 1, the night of the Yale-Army game after a party at the Long Island Inn at Wallingford.

After rejecting Coroner Eli Mix's theory that Rogers met death when his head came into contact with a telephone pole as he was peering out of the car to observe the road ahead through the fog, the prosecutor investigated. The North Haven authorities have unearthed two articles of cloth believed by them to have been used to staunch the blood flowing from Rogers' head fallowing an assault. The police intimate they have evidence not known to the Coroner prior to his finding.

Church said he was continuing the case, not dropping it.

Miss Schneider is being kept in seclusion. Several of the principal witnesses have vanished.

INTENSIVE DRIVE FOR COMMUNITY FUND OPENS TODAY

6000 Volunteer Workers, Largest Unit Enrolled Since War, to Seek $1,751,521 for Charities.

FOUR SOLICITING GROUPS AT WORK

Members of Employe Division Asked to Contribute Day's Pay — Chairman Addresses Workers.

Intensive solicitation in the Community Fund's third annual campaign in St. Louis and St. Louis County begins today. By Nov. 24, when the solicitation comes to a close, it is expected to raise $1,751,521.15, the sum sought to provide current operating expenses for 50 social service and charitable organizations in the city. About 6000 volunteer workers are engaged in the campaign.

A dinner at Hotel Statler last night at which the General Employe Division of the Community Fund workers was the guest of the hotel management brought the fourth big soliciting committee into the campaign. John H. Holliday, chairman of the committee, presided and Rev. R. H. Schuette, pastor of Grace M. E. Church pronounced the invocation. There was music by the Sixth Regiment Band from Jefferson Barracks.

The principal address was by J. Lionberger Davis, who, speaking on the relation of the Community Fund to the worker, pointed out the aid hospitals and other social agencies in the Community Council give in constructive service to needy families. The Community Fund's goal is larger this year, he explained, because of the unexpectedly large demand for assistance from unemployed workers, due to a situation over which the community had no control.

To Give Day's Pay.

All workers in the Employe Division will be asked to contribute one day's pay and as much more as they can afford to the Community Fund. Chairman Holliday explained. He pointed out that the organization would not solicit within plants and industries but that the canvas would be made by the workers themselves.

Other speakers were Thomas N. Dysart, chairman of the Executive Committee of the campaign, Harry B. Wallace, general chairman of the Community Fund, William H. Danforth, chairman of the Publicity Division, Chauncey B. Adams, chairman of the auditing division and Mrs. George Gellhorn, chairman of the Information and Appeals division.

At Community Fund headquarters at Hotel Statler yesterday afternoon was received a special delivery letter enclosing a $5 bill. It was from Augustin Jones, the Boy Scout, who yesterday was acting as Mayor of St. Louis.

"Enclosed," said the accompanying letter, "you will find part of my day's salary as Acting Mayor of the City."

Proclamation by "Boy Mayor."

"As the whole amount was due to the arrangement with the Community Fund and since the Community Fund is doing such great work, I think that this is not only a donation to your fund, but your due."

One of Scout Jones' official acts as Acting Mayor was to issue a Proclamation calling attention to the drive and its purposes, issued when he took office at 9 a. m. yesterday.

Preceding the employe's division into the campaign were the Individual Subscriber Division, the largest in the soliciting organization and comprised of the "shock troops" or experienced campaign workers, which launched its effort with a dinner Friday night, and which will have to raise more than $1,000,000 of the campaign goal the Special Gifts Committee and the County Division, which began their task earlier in the week, and the Colored Population Division, with Daniel W. Bowles, chairman, which at a dinner at the Pine Street Y. M. C. A. Friday evening began its canvas of the negro districts. In the campaign this year the largest group of volunteer workers ever assembled except for war work in St. Louis has been enrolled.

ONE KILLED, 3 INJURED, IN WRECK OF B. & O. FLYER

Capitol Limited Derailed at Wenerton, Md.—Company Blames the Engineer.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 15.—One man was killed and another badly injured when the Capitol Limited of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, to Chicago from Baltimore and Washington, was derailed late today at Wenerton, Md. Two postal clerks were slightly injured.

G. W. Griffern of Washington, fireman of the train, was fatally injured, and A. J. Ross, engineer, of Baltimore, was seriously hurt.

In a report issued tonight, the railroad company placed the blame on the engineer, who "disregarded speed restrictions through the cross-over, as indicated by the signals and as fixed by standard instructions."

WORLD FLYERS DUE IN ST. LOUIS THIS AFTERNOON

St. Louisans to Gather at Lambert Field to Pay Homage to Six Noted Army Aviators.

COMING IN PLANES USED ON LONG FLIGHT

Expected to Arrive About 2:45 P. M. — Aircraft Evolutions to Entertain the Waiting Crowd.

Lambert-St. Louis Field this afternoon will be a mecca where St. Louisans will gather to pay homage to the six army aviators who made the first 'round-the-world trip in aircraft, and who are scheduled to arrive there about 2:45 p. m.

The flyers will come in the planes which they used on their world flight. Remaining here until Wednesday, they will fly that day to Dayton, O., where the planes will be placed on exhibition permanently.

Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, commander of the world trip, and his aid, Lieut. L. P. Arnold, will surely arrive at the field in the flagship, Chicago, it is announced.

The other four will come, barring unforeseen conditions. They are Lieuts. Leigh Wade, Eric Nelson, H. H. Ogden and John Harding. These four flew from Houston to Fort Worth, Tex., yesterday, after having told Joseph O'Neil, vice chairman of the St. Louis Reception Committee, over long-distance telephone before leaving Houston, that they planned to make a nonstop jump of about 700 miles from Fort Worth to St. Louis today. They are in the New Orleans and Boston II.

Aircraft Evolutions.

While spectators are awaiting the world flyers three Scott Field airships and a group of airplanes of the local National Guard air unit and the Flying Club will perform evolutions and stunts at Lambert-St. Louis Field. When the visitors' craft are sighted these will fly to escort them in. The airships will be the TC-5 and the smaller TA-2, and a new one, not previously flown over St. Louis, the TC-3, which has the number of a previous ship. Meanwhile the Sixth Infantry band from Jefferson Barracks will play.

Lieutenant-Colonel John A. Paegelow, commandant of Scott Field, made a special study yesterday of weather conditions for this vicinity and announced that excellent flying weather was indicated for today.

There will be a ceremonious reception to the world flyers when they land. Mayor Kiel will welcome them and present a key to the city. Carl F. G. Meyer, chairman of the Reception Committee, will augment the welcome in the name of the Chamber of Commerce and business interests generally.

Bouquets for Flyers.

Bouquets of flowers from Shaw's Garden will be handed the flyers by Miss Mary Virginia Collins, reigning Veiled Prophet Queen, and a number of her maids of honor. The flyers will be made honorary members of the St. Louis Council, Boy Scouts of America, by 50 scouts, headed by Augustin Jones, who acted as Mayor of the city yesterday in behalf of the Community Fund.

Leaving the field, the flyers will be taken to Hotel Chase in automobiles over the following route, which the committee hopes will be decorated by American flags on stores and homes: Natural Bridge, Lucas and Hunt and St. Charles roads; Easton avenue, Union and Lindell boulevards.

There will be on-way traffic on Natural Bridge road between Lucas and Hunt road and Lambert-St. Louis Field this afternoon, under direction of city traffic policemen. Only west bound traffic will be allowed between noon and 3 p. m. and only eastbound after the reception. Jefferson Barracks soldiers will be in charge of parking automobiles on the field, and will drive cars to their places. There will be no admission charge.

No Program Tonight.

There is no program for the flyers for tonight or tomorrow and they will be left to make their own plans. The only public meeting for them after today will be a joint luncheon of the City Club and the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday at the City Club, when the flyers are expected to make brief talks relating their experiences.

Movement of the flyers from Hotel Chase to the City Club will be in the nature of a noonday procession. Their automobiles will be driven on Lindell, Locust and Twelfth boulevards, Washington avenue, Broadway and Locust street to the club. Tuesday night a formal dinner to the flyers will be given at the Racquet Club, to which members of the Flying Club, St. Louis Chapter of the Aeronautical Association of America, and St. Louis Air Board have been invited.

Until the flyers depart by air for Dayton, their planes will be at Lambert-St. Louis Field.

"Miller or Monarchy" to Oppose "Kiel or Chaos"

Friends of Former Police Board Head Prepared to Attack "Perpetuity" of Mayor in Office.

"Miller or Monarchy" has ranged itself in battle formation opposite "Kiel or Chaos" in preparation for the spring mayoralty campaign. Friends of Victor J. Miller, former president of the Police Board, are prepared to attack the tenure of office "in perpetuity" by Mayor Kiel, just as Kiel's friends are seeking to show that Miller in the Mayor's office would mean only municipal chaos.

The campaign gives early promise of being a battle of slogans as well as issues. One may well expect to soon hear "Koeln or Collapse," if Collector Edmond Koeln invades the field, as he is being persistently urged to do. Artists of alliteration are still finding trouble in working out a slogan for Louis P. Aloe, former president of the Board of Aldermen, but he will be in the race with or without a slogan.

Miller Says He Will Run.

On the Democratic side one need not be surprised if "Byrnes or Bust" is thrown out for the public to seize upon. James W. Byrnes was defeated by Kiel in 1920. The slogan-makers have not as yet come to the assistance of W. Frank Carter, Lawrence McDaniel or Ben G. Brinkman. The game is young.

Miller stated yesterday to a Post-Dispatch reporter that he would run and that he would have no statements to make until after the first of the year. His friends expect him to make a great race in view of the fact that he carried St. Louis by 8100 over Governor-elect Sam A. Baker and Lieutenant-Governor Hiram Lloyd in his unsuccessful race for the gubernatorial nomination last August, without organization support.

A year ago Miller would have had considerable difficulty in getting the support of committeemen, but they now find a peculiar situation confronting them. Miller has proved that he can get votes and and many of the precinct workers under the committeemen are saying that they find a definite sentiment for Miller in many quarters. In the primary he carried 18 of 28 wards.

The Miller batteries will train on Mayor Kiel's 12-year service and compare it with the monarchial system.

Auto Deaths an Issue.

One feature of Miller's fight to combat the chaos charge against him will be a charge that the 159 automobile deaths so far this year might have been prevented in a material degree by law enforcement through the city courts. His supporters point out that the office of Mayor carries with it appointment of the two Police Court Judges. Miller, his supporters say, would fill these offices with men who would fine speeders heavily and send careless drivers to the workhouse, with maximum sentences for second-offenders. They believe this plan would materially reduce accidents and eliminate one chaotic condition.

Issues of the campaign from Miller's point of view are extension of the transportation system, proper expenditures of funds derived from the bond issue and full value to the city for every dollar expended.

The primary will be held March 6 and the election April 7.

and virtually all the Big Business institutions on their side. They succeeded in fixing the idea in the minds of a majority of people that the only way to avoid all sorts of dreadful possibilities was to elect Coolidge. The idea 'got over' and it stuck.

"Mr. Coolidge doesn't want to make any mistake about his election being an act of God. He owes his election to Big Business. Big Business furnished the brains, the energy and the money for the campaign, and Big Business expects to be repaid.

"Of course," Wheeler continued, shifting one lean shank over the other, "there is bound to be a reaction. You can frighten people in a short campaign but you cannot keep them scared to death indefinitely, and you cannot keep them from eventually using their eyes and their reason.

What the Rest Will Get.

"I don't expect an era of unprecedented prosperity for anybody except the large interests which were so bent on electing Coolidge and Dawes. I expect the rest of the country to be fleeced by those interests with a little more boldness and a little more thoroughness than they have been. And I fully expect the people who were stampeded by prosperity talk to wake up to the fact that they were swindled.

"What sort of a government would this be if a few business men could control every national election merely by announcing that, unless their man was elected, they would precipitate hard times? Well, I don't think they can do it very often. It's a good trick until it's been worked a few times. You can't fool a majority of the people all the time, and when the American voter discovers that he has been fooled he's usually a pretty angry voter, and he doesn't forget who fooled him.

"Right now," exclaimed Wheeler, rapping the desk for emphasis, "I think it's an even money bet that the Republicans will lose their majority in Congress at the election two years hence."

Democratic Opportunity.

What did he think of the future of the Progressive movement? Would there be a new political party as a result of the election?

"The future Progressive movement, in my judgment, depends entirely on what the old parties do in the next two years—and particularly on what the Democratic party does," he replied.

"This is the Democratic party's big opportunity. The Republican party has now definitely become the Tory party of the country. It admits that it represents the Big Business interests, and in the last campaign, for the first time, actually boasted of it. The Democratic party, if it chooses, can become the great liberal party of the country. If it becomes more progressive, if it throws off its bourbon leadership, if it espouses progressive principles, then, in my opinion, it can absorb most of the Progressives of the country and can win at the polls four years from now.

Business "Steady" Girl.

"If it takes the other course, choosing to remain conservative, and trying to win the support of the Big Business interests away from the Republicans, it will disappear outside of possibly eight or nine states in the solid South and its place as one of the two major parties will be taken by a Progressive party.

"I have always been a Democrat. I have always been hopeful that the party would adopt progressive principles permanently, as it has occasionally in the past. But the time has come when it must make a permanent choice. Right now it occupies an anomalous position, and nobody, including its own partisans, knows just what it does stand for.

"Really," said Wheeler earnestly, "the Democrats have only one choice. So far as Big Business is concerned, there isn't any place for the Democrats to go but out. Big Business has decided upon its 'steady' girl. Morgan, Stotesbury, Mellon and Rockefeller are hardly likely to be caught flirting with the Democratic party when they have such a dependable and successful one of their own. Setting aside all considerations save those of a political nature, I should think the Democratic leaders would see that the only future for the party lies in espousing the cause of the masses against those who exploit them. The exploiters are in absolute control of the Republican party."

Progressive Showing.

But wasn't Wheeler disappointed by the showing made by progressive candidates and progressive issues in the campaign?

"We polled nearly 5,000,000 votes," he said.

"When that many people are willing to go out in the face of threats of unemployment and hard times, and in defiance of party allegiance, and vote for an independent presidential ticket in order to register their convictions, it seems to me that the progressive cause is very much alive. We had virtually no press, little organization and no money. We had no way to combat the lies they spread about us. Yet more people voted for us than voted for the Republican ticket 12 years ago.

'No, sir, I'm not one bit depressed about the Progressive cause. When you think of the falsehoods they circulated about our war records, about our attitude toward the Constitution, about our attitude toward the railroads; when you realize that our only reply was by word of mouth from the platform, and still recognize that nearly 5,000,000 voters saw through the smoke screen and voted for us, I think you must concede that the progressive issues are live issues.

Didn't Fight Merely to Win.

"Personally, I have no regrets for the course I took. A man doesn't fight for the right merely to win. Just being on the right side, even if it is a losing side, is worth a good deal. I'd rather lose fighting for the people than to win fighting for Wall street."

The writer asked him if he expected the Democratic party leaders in Congress to attempt to discipline him for leaving the party and joining his fortunes with La Follette in the campaign. The man from Montana laughed.

"I haven't heard anything, but I hardly think so," he said. "I suspect they are too busy worrying over the disciplining which they got in the election to worry about punishing me."

Wheeler is not an egotist, and he didn't say this, but one got the idea that he was ready to forgive the party any time it decided to come over and do the right thing.

FIRE IN LEATHER PLANT CAUSES DAMAGE OF $30,000

Damage estimated at $30,000 was caused early yesterday by a fire in the plant of the Midwest Leather Co. at 208 Walnut street, which spread to adjoining buildings, occupied by the Delbridge Mathematical Book Co. and the Standard School Supply Co.

Capt. Cornelius Combs of Engine Co. No. 2 suffered a fracture of the left shoulder during the fire. He was carrying a hose up a stairway when the water pressure caused him to be thrown backward.

BLIND VETERAN, NOW A RABBI, VISITS CITY

Michael Aaronsohn, 28, Has Plan for Union of Hebrew Congregations.

Undiscouraged by the loss of his sight, Michael Aaronsohn of Cincinnati, veteran of the Argonne, returned to the United States after the armistice, and continued his studies in a Government school for the blind. Today, Rabbi Aaronsohn is in St. Louis, furthering his dream of a union of American Hebrew congregations, whereby each of the congregations throughout the United States will co-operate in the work of religious education.

While Rabbi Aaronsohn was a student at the Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati he formulated plans for a union of Jewish congregations. The war interrupted his college career, and in the Argonne he received a wound which made him totally blind.

"The war was but an incident in my life," said Rabbi Aaronsohn. "It could not change my ambitions. War is not the stirring, searing thing that some would have us think. I have been more frightened addressng an audence than I ever have at the front."

It is Aaronsohn's purpose to stimulate an interest in religion that may lead to a universal realization that men the world over are brothers. "Religion in its purest essence, not dogmatic creeds, but a simple belief in God and goodness may accomplish a permanent peace," he stated.

Rabbi Aaronsohn, who is 28 years old, was a Sergeant Major in the infantry. The Union of American Hebrew Congregations will hold its biennial convention in St. Louis next January, he announced. The union boasts of 300 congregations, which includes many prominent Jewish citizens. Aaronsohn will remain in the city a month, speaking at every temple here.

CANCELS GRANTS TO JAPANESE

Governor of Lower California Revokes Big Fishing Concessions.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICALI, Lower California, Nov. 15.—Gov. Abelardo Rodriguez of the Northern District of Lower California announced here today that he had canceled all of the extensive fishing concessions held by Japanese on the coast of Lower California.

Bloomington Church 100 Years Old

By the Associated Press.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Nov. 15.—Methodist churches of Bloomington and Normal celebrate tomorrow 100 years of continuous organization. Dr. W. H. Whitlock, for 50 years a minister, will tell at a meeting service what he remembers of the pioneers who met in the McLean County Log Cabin Courthouse for services. D. R. Schultt of St. Louis will preach at night and Dr. J. S. Dancey of Rockford speaks Monday night at a centennial banquet. The first church has now grown to four large congregations.

GANGSTERS TO GET "JUSTICE" ON SPOT IN CHICAGO DRIVE

hearing of a petition for a mandamus to compel the Mayor to issue a license to Daniel Leblang, owner of the Northern Lights Cafe, asserted that Alterie was present at the time John Phillips, gangster, was slain by another officer in a fight with seven customers of the cafe.

"Alterie is the man who said he would shoot it out with the slayer of Dion O'Banion," the Judge remarked. "Perhaps he'll be allowed to shoot things out in the penitentiary."

Neither Mayor Dever nor Chief Collins would comment upon Judge David's statement.

Previously the Mayor had personally called upon the Chief and ordered him to organize a squad of 12 "honest and courageous men" whose chief duty would be to watch over known gangsters. "Get the gunmen," the Mayor ordered, "even if you have to rearrest them every 40 minutes."

Sixty-four persons, carrying concealed weapons, were arrested today.

Municipal Judge Borelli advocated a gunman's court to hear cases dealing with gun-toting charges. Chief Justice Harry Olson said he favored the step and would put it into practice if it did not prove too costly.

Morals and Good Business.

Julius Rosenwald, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., announced that the big wholesale house had discontinued the sale of every form of firearms. It had been the previous policy of the firm to sell only to authorized officers of the law but even to them revolvers will not be available. Mail order pistols have been repeatedly blamed by the police for a large percentage of the recent murders.

Rosenwald said: "Back in 1916 our company began to limit the sale of revolvers and pistols to those entitled to use them, such as Sheriffs, police officers, Game Wardens, express and bank messengers and officers of the militia and National Guard. Our action in limiting sales of firearms and finally discontinuing them altogether is based on our desire to maintain the public good will. We feel that the moral side of all public questions is the right side, not only because we want to be right but because it is good business."

FRENCH THROWING UP TARIFF WALL AGAINST GERMANY

Believe They Have No Issue to Debate in Trade Agreement Until Importations Are Shut Off.

BELGIUM STRIKES OUT FOR ITSELF

Declines to Agree to Close Preferential Duty With Paris and Three-Cornered War Is On.

By ARNO DOSCH FLEUROT
Paris Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—A tariff war between France and Germany, between France and Belgium and between Belgium and Germany is on. The French Ministry of Commerce began the revision today of all French tariff schedules with the intention of equaling the Belgian increases of from 20 to 50 per cent just announced and to meet the German tariffs which run in the cases of luxuries, which interest France the most, from 300 to 1000 per cent.

Instead of a series of commercial treaties facilitating commerce between France, Belgium, Germany and England, high tariff walls and a prohibitive protectionist system which will also affect America is foreseen before Christmas. France wants an arguing point in her commercial treaty negotiations with Germany and so does Belgium. The negotiations between France and Belgium and France and Germany have not been as hopeful as has been announced. According to the French, there is a double hitch in them.

Belgium Negotiates Alone.

The French wanted the Belgians to agree to a close special preferential tariff agreement so both could drive a bargain with Germany for similar trade agreements, but Belgium decided at the last minute it could not afford to do this, and must negotiate alone and exclusively in her own interest with Germany.

The Belgians want to bring back prosperity to Antwerp by making it again a bigger port, for Antwerp suffered most in the war. Belgium for this reason revised all her tariffs upward in preparation for her meeting with Germany. Thereby she abandoned her agreement with the French.

Simultaneously the German delegate to the economic conference, Treulenberg, returned from Germany with a renewed demand from Germany that the French remove the 26 per cent general import tax which the French put into effect Oct. 1 to equalize the British recovery act tax. The arguments of Treulenberg were strong because Reparations Agent Parker also showed himself opposed to the tax in a letter to Minister Luther in which he informed the Germans they ought not to continue to compensate the exporters who were hit by this tax. He showed he considers the tax as an infringment on the powers of the transfer committee.

Germany's Argument.

The French, while not admitting Parker's argument, find the tax is actually useless as a bargaining point with Germany. Treulenberg further declares it is impossible to give Alsace Lorraine preferential tariffs, because the nations who have most favored nations agreements, including the United States, would demand the same.

Believing that they have no issue to debate unless they have a high tariff wall over which to talk, the French admit they are deliberately going in for prohibitive protection to shut off German importations into France, until it is possible to come to agreement. Meanwhile the general scaling up of tariffs will cut into all American importations into France. Although their purpose is to coerce Germany, the products which Germany does not send to France will be hit.

Britain and Germany Said to Plan Trade Agreement.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

BERLIN, Nov. 15.—Just as in the reparations tangles of the days before the Dawes plan, Germany is playing Britain against France—this time in the legitimate endeavor to emerge once more as a powerful commercial nation. With a deadlock of the negotiations with the French, the word has now gone out that an agreement with Great Britain will be reached within several days.

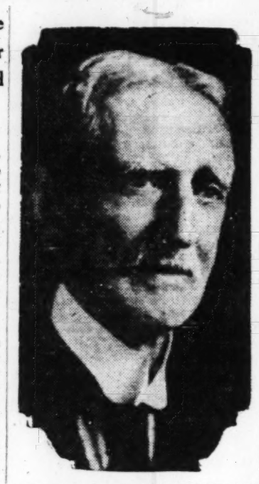
Yet Britain upholds the system which has, in the Reich's opinion, caused the deadlock of the French negotiations—the 26 per cent recovery act. This provides that from all German exports 26 per cent shall go to the Government on the reparations account. The Germans maintain this is unfair, because the Dawes plan was devised when only Britain had this provision. It undoubtedly is a brake on German exports.

The report of the agreement with England is extremely vague in character, and it is offset by the news of an Anglo-French agreement to maintain the recovery act. By endeavoring to rush the English into an agreement, the Germans hope the French will fall into line for fear Britain will dominate the German market.

Simultaneously negotiations are on in Moscow for an expansion of the Rapallo treaty. What Germany wants now is that the end of this year shall also mark the end of the restrictions imposed by the treaty of Versailles on trade, so that they will once more have an equal status with other nations in commercial competition with reciprocal customs privileges.

Marmaduke, Confederate Naval Hero, Dies at 82

Native Missourian, Whose Father and Elder Brother Were Governors, Had Adventurous Career.



HENRY HUNGERFORD MARMADUKE.

Henry Hungerford Marmaduke, 82 years old, soldier of fortune and last Confederate survivor of thhe historic battle between the ironclads Monitor and Merrimac, will be buried today in Arlington Cemetery at Washington, D. C. A native Missourian, he was the son of one Governor of Missouri and the brother of another.

Bearing the scars of many battles, the man who helped suppress a South American rebellion at the age of 63, succumbed yesterday to the infirmities of age. He was a bachelor, and the last of a Missouri family of six brothers and three sisters. His father was M. M. Marmaduke, Governor of Missouri in 1844, and his elder brother, John S. Marmaduke, was elected Governor of Missouri in 1884.

His only surviving relatives are nieces and nephews and a sister-in-law, Mrs. Leslie Marmaduke, of 5284A Waterman avenue, St. Louis.

Born in Saline County.

Marmaduke was born in Saline County, Mo., but spent most of h's life in Washington, where he went at the close of the Civil War. In 1902, he was hired by the Government of Colombia to command its navy, fought revolutionists for six months, and returned to Washington, declaring he was "too old for adventuring" and settled in a Government berth as agent for the collection of Confederate records. He was retired four years ago because of his age.

Marmaduke left Missouri at the age of 16 to enter the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis in 1858. His Confederate sympathies prompted him, at the outbreak of the Civil War in 1861, to quit the academy and became a midshipmen in the Confederate navy, serving first with the fleet at New Orleans.

Hero of Historic Battle.

Soon he was assigned as a gunner to the historic Mergimac, when it was fitted out as the first ironclad war vessel in history. In the memorable encounter between the Merrimac and the Monitor at Hampton Roads, March 8, 1862, the decisive battle of the war, Marmaduke directed a gun crew of 14 men throughout the combat, although seriously wounded. His bravery in this encounter was officially recognized by Admiral Buchanan.

Following the destruction of the Merrimac, Marniaduke was assigned to the Shenandoah and later to the Albermarle, and was on the latter vessel when it was destroyed by one of Lieut. Cushing's torpedo boats.

In 1865, he was placed in command of naval batteries on the James River in front of Richmond. At the fall of Richmond he commanded a company in the naval brigade and was wounded and captured in the battle of Sailors' Creek. When the war closed he was in the Federal prison on John's Island. Two of his brothers had been killed in action.

Becomes Soldier of Fortune.

For several years he was a dining car superintenndent until his appointment as superintendent of consular bureaus of the South American republics. He was in this post in 1902 when the Colombian Government extended an alluring invitation to him to man the warship Bogota, a rebuilt yacht, with a crew of American daredevils.

At Seattle, Capt. Marmaduke of the Colombian navy gathered his crew, some of whom had fought for half a dozen different countries, and sailed in September as a merchantman to San Francisco. There he hoisted the Colombian flag, and arrived off the Colombian coast in the middle of October.

Delighted With Rebel Chase.

The pursuit of Colombian rebels delighted him, he averred. He had never seen Colombia before and it developed that the rebels had most of the country's war vessels. Marmaduke chased rebel ships up and down the 600-mile coast and directed the operations of vessels which the rebels had not seized. The Bogota had three engagements with the rebel fleet and two of Marmaduke's soldiers of fortune were killed.

When the war was over and won, in January, 1903, Marmaduke was honorably discharged with thanks and started back to Washington, stopping over to visit a brother in St. Louis.

"I went for adventure and I got it," he said in an interview then. "But I'm through with adventuring. I am getting a little past the age for that."

He kept his word and adventured no more. His health remained good until about a year ago, when he began to fall rapidly. His burial today will be with proper military rites in the Confederate section of Arlington Cemetery.

GIRL SUES C. P. SENTER FOR $10,000, CHARGING ASSAULT

Miss Katherine Elsasser Alleges She Was Bruised and Humiliated.

Charles P. Senter, 1 Beverly place, president of the Senter Commission Co., was sued yesterday for $10,000 by Miss Katherine Elsasser, 1718 California avenue, for an alleged assault committed upon her Oct. 7 at the Coliseum. Her petition sets forth that she was bruised and also suffered a nervous shock and was humiliated as a result of the attack.

Miss Elsasser declined to discuss the suit. Senter declared the suit is entirely without foundation.

CITATIONS FOR GENERAL WOOD

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Secretary Weeks announced today approval of two citations for gallantry in action, carrying with them silver stars, awarded by an army board to Major-General Leonard Wood, retired, because of incidents in Cuba when he was Colonel of the First Volunteer Cavalry (the Rough Riders). The specific dates and places mentioned in the citations are Las Guasiams, June 24, 1898, and Santiago, July 1, 1898.

ARREST OF ST. LOUISAN SOUGHT AFTER FATAL AUTO ACCIDENT

Warrant Issued for Arthur Marlault In Illinois, Following Death of Mrs. Buck.

A warrant was sworn out at Nashville, Ill., yesterday for the arrest of Arthur Marlault of St. Louis, who is alleged to have driven the automobile that is said to have crowded another driven by Mrs. Olive Buck, of 6063 Kingsbury boulevard, St. Louis, off the road near Addieville, Ill., Thursday night, resulting in her death and injuries to her husband, A. W. Buck, and Dr. and Mrs. J. T. Funkhouser, 3912A Lafayette avenue, who were in the Buck car.

Funeral services for Mrs. Buck will be held at 3:15 p. m. tomorrow from the funeral chapel at 2707 North Grand boulevard and burial will be in Valhalla Cemetery.

KNOCKS ROBBER DOWN IN DEFENSE OF WIFE IN HOLDUP

Architect Routs Highwayman Who Attempts to Take Diamond Ring in West End.

Two young highwaymen, with a revolver, tried to hold up Mr. and Mrs. William P. McMahon at Arundel place and DeMun avenue, St. Louis County, at 8 o'clock last night. While one of the men tried to remove Mrs. McMahon's diamond ring, McMahon swung his right fist against the robber's jaw and knocked him down. Then he ran up the street shouting for help while the would-be robbers fled in the opposite direction and escaped.

McMahon is an architect in the Title Guaranty Trust Building. He and his wife were walking from their home, 34 Aberdeen place, to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Heineman at 41 Arundel place when the holdup occurred.

GIOLITTI FIRM IN OPPOSING FASCISTI

Denounces Restrictions on Press and Appeals for Better Treatment of Italians.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

ROME, Nov. 15.—After a debate lasting three days, the Government of Premier Mussolini was given a vote of confidence last evening. The vote was 315 to 6, with members of the opposition absent. Former Premier Giolitti was among the deputies who voted "no."

The vote was given on a measure endorsing Mussolini's foreign policy only. In course of his speech upholding the measure, Mussolini said:

"I am favorable to the admission of Germany into the League of Nations. I think Germany ought to have a permanent place on the council of the League.

"My foreign policy has always been carefully prepared from a moral and economic, as well as a political viewpoint. Since I have been at the helm our foreign policy has been independent of London and Paris. Italy needs a long period of peace. She has a war debt of a hundred billion lire. I have secured Fiume and Jubaland for Italy, both of which were sore spots when I assumed power.

German Trade Pact.

"I have raised the country's prestige because foreign powers now seek our friendship which formerly they snubbed. I attach great importance to the current negotiations for a trade pact with Germany for both economic and political reasons. Whenever a question of foreign policy crops up I use this test 'is it for Italy's advantage or not?'"

Giolitti spoke, favoring Italy's foreign policy in general terms, but condemning the domestic policy.

"I am against press restrictions," he said. "I am against the proposed reform statutes and appeal to the present Government not to treat Italians as if they deserved no liberty."

Opposition Stands Firm.

Earlier in the day the Government apparently was undecided whether to call for a vote on the foreign policy alone or on both domestic and foreign policies. The Deputies in opposition promptly let it be known they would not vote to sustain Mussolini in his domestic policy and finally announced they would not sustain him at all.

They are expected to issue an explanation of their action in withdrawing today. Giolitti had declared from the beginning he would vote against Mussolini. Considerable importance is attached here to a conversation the night before between Giolitti and former Premier Orlando.

Emphatic denials were made in official quarters today or rumors published in newspapers abroad that the Government is in danger. A certain tenseness in the present situation is admitted, but no special precautions, it was said, have been either required or taken.

MRS. MORGAN NEAR DEATH

Condition of Financier's Widow Unchanged, Physician Says.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—After a comfortable night's rest Friday, Mrs. Frances F. Morgan, widow of J. Pierpont Morgan, appeared to be in much the same condition today as the day before. It is believed she is near death.

Her three daughters, Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, Mrs. Juliet Pierpont Hamilton and Miss Anne Morgan, are at her bedside at her country place, Cragston, Highland Falls, N. Y. Her son, J. P. Morgan, sailed from England on the Berengaria today. Dr. Frederick Dilney of this city, who is attending her, held out little hope for her recovery. She has been sick four days. Physicians have made public no diagnosis.

BONDSMAN LOCKED UP FOR TRYING TO TALK TO PRISONER

Karl Preissle Arrested at Station for Violation of Department's Rules.

Anxiety to talk to a negro prisoner, being booked at Central District police station yesterday afternoon, landed Karl Preissle, 32 years old, of 3965 Russell avenue, a professional bondsman, in the hold-over, from which he was released only after furnishing a $10,000 bond. Preissle was booked on the general charge which is placed against those the police department wishes to hold.

The arrest came as a climax to a continuing series of minor difficulties between police officers and professional bondsmen, who have been so active of recent months that their presence has become a nuisance around headquarters, according to Chief of Detectives Hoagland. Attempts to talk to the prisoners, according to Chief Hoagland, have interfered with the transaction of regular business.

Yesterday Preissle was presenting for approval a $10,000 bond offered in the case of a prisoner held on a suspected-of-robbery charge when Detective Sergeant Ira Cooper brought in a negro prisoner to be booked as a pickpocket suspect. While the prisoner was before the desk seregant Preissle attempted to talk to him and was warned away by Cooper.

Later Cooper turned away and Preissle again spoke to the prisoner, and Cooper placed Preissle under arrest. His bond, furnished by Jack Rubenstein, 210 South Twelfth street, is returnable in Judge Ittner's court Monday.

Chief Hoagland said the arrest of Preissle marked a determination on the part of police to make professional bondsmen follow the regular procedure in application for permission to see suspects held by police.

HELD AS DRIVER OF AUTO THAT INJURED PEDESTRIAN

Robert Brooks, 17, Arrested After Passer-by Took License of Machine He Had Borrowed.

Robert Brooks, 17 years old, 2735 McCausland avenue, was arrested yesterday, and charged with being the automobile driver whose machine struck Henry Klapp, 58 years old, of 220 South Fourth street, at Fourth and Walnut streets last Thursday, taking Klapp to within about two blocks of city hospital and then leaving him to shift for himself. Klapp is at city hospital suffering from a fractured skull and internal injuries.

A pedestrian, who saw the accident, took the machine's license number and on hearing that the driver had escaped, gave it to the police. The license was traced to Thomas Smith, 4981 Odell avenue, who told police he had lent his car to Brooks on Thursday. Brooks was charged with felonious wounding and leaving the scene of an accident, and his case given to the juvenile authorities.

Anton Sache, 69 years old, of 1240 South Seventh street, was struck by a truck of the Mertz Automobile Radiator Co. of Belleville, at Walnut street and Broadway, yesterday afternoon. He was taken to city hospital, where he is suffering from a fractured skull. The driver of the truck, Harvey Mertz, 21, of Belleville, was charged with felonious wounding.

WOMAN PATIENT SHOOTS SELF TO DEATH IN HOSPITAL

Widow, Despondent Over Illness, Ends Life in Missouri Baptist Sanitarium.

Mrs. Nettie Marquis, 51 years old, a widow, of 2805 North Eleventh street, shot herself to death in her room at the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium, where she was a patient, at 2:35 p. m. yesterday. She entered the hospital Monday to be treated for an organic disease, and in notes left to her sons, Lee, Roy and Clay Kerley, 1508 Branch street, indicated she believed her disease incurable.

The report of the shot, fired from a revolver, was heard by a nurse, who ran to Mrs. Marquis' room, finding her dead across her bed.

One of the two notes left was dated Aug. 24 of this year, and was addressed to her sons, and said that she could stand her affliction no longer, and hoped God would forgive her. The other note, also addressed to her sons, but not dated, told them she could never get well, and informed them she had saved $25 which would go toward making the "fund" a bit bigger.

WOMAN FALLS DEAD ON CAR

Mrs. Freda Ronkie Had Been Employe of Y. W. C. A. 10 Years.

Mrs. Freda Ronkie of 222 Miller street fell dead in a South Broadway car at 7:30 p. m. Friday, while on her way home from the Central Y. W. C. A., where she was cashier in the cafeteria. With her at the time were her daughter, Lillian Ronkie, and a sister-in-law, Miss Minnie Ronkie. Death was due to heart disease.

Mrs. Ronkie had been employed in the Y. W. C. A. for 10 years and was widely known among its members. She is survived by her daughter and an aged mother. Funeral services are to be held from an undertaking establishment at 2331 South Broadway, probably on Wednesday.

Auto Injuries Fatal to Woman.

CARBONDALE, Ill., Nov. 15.—Mrs. Clara Scott, 62, died today of injuries suffered in a peculiar automobile accident three weeks ago. A guard railing at the side of the State highway just south of here penetrated the car in which she was riding from the radiator to the back of the machine. The car remained upright and was not otherwise damaged.

$6,000,000 OF 4 PCT. ROAD BONDS SOLD AT $98.15

Fund Commissioners Accept Bid of National City Co. for Series E of $60,000,000 Issue.

FORMER OFFER WAS FOR $28,751 MORE

Syndicate Headed by Burr & Co. Offered $5,918,345, but Bid Was Rejected as Too Low.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 15.—Another $6,000,000 of the Missouri road bonds were sold late today by the State Board of Fund Commissioners. The issue went to a syndicate of five companies, headed by the National City Co. of New York, for $5,889,594, which is $110,406 under par. They brought an average of $98.159 on each $100, it was explained. The sale makes a total of $25,000,000 of the $60,000,000 issue that has been sold.

Today was the second time that bids were received by the board on this issue. The first bids were opened by the board Nov. 3, and a syndicate headed by George H. Burr & Co., of New York, offered a total of $5,918,345, which was $28,751 more than the amount for which the bonds sold today.

Members of the board of fund commissioners felt at that time, it is understood, that the price was not satisfactory, so re-advertised the issue for sale today.

The $6,000,000 issue bears interest at the rate of 4 per cent a year. It is known as series "E" of the $60,000,000 road bond issue voted in 1921. It was said that the condition of the bond market on such bonds is not as good now as it was several months ago. The first $2,000,000 of the issue sold today will mature in 1935, the second $2,000,000 in 1936 and the third $2,000,000 in 1937.

State Treasurer Thompson pointed out that, although the bonds sold for $110,406 under par, their sale today will really result in a saving for the State. He explained that while other issues of the bonds sold brought higher prices, they bore interest at the rate of 4½ per cent a year instead of 4 per cent as those disposed of today. He added that the State would thus save interest payments on the bonds sold today and would make up for the amount under par that they brought.

The other five bids on the issue today were announced as follows:

Syndicate headed by the George H. Bury and Company of New York, $5,885,348 (this was the syndicate that made the high bid on Nov. 3, which was rejected; Syndicate headed by the Federal Commierce Trust Company of St. Louis, $5,882,350.

Syndicate headed by the William R. Compton Company of St. Louis, $5,881,800.

Syndicate headed by the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, St. Louis, $5,873,940.

Syndicate headed by the Estabrook and Company, New York, $5,862,065.

HOAGLAND CHECKS OFFICERS' TESTIMONY

Chief of Detectives Calls for Transcripts of Evidence in Gangsters' Trial.

As the first step in his investigation of the conduct and testimony of five St. Louis Police Department officers, who testified for the defense Wednesday in the small bribery trial at Quincy, Ill., Chief of Detectives Hoagland has asked the Court for transcripts of the officers' testimony.

In the meanwhile the Chief has several clerks searching the department files for records of arrests of Ray Renard, former Egan gangster and convict, who testified against his former associates at the trial. The point is that police witnesses for the defense did not testify that Renard had been an Egan ite, which would have helped the Government's case. It is expected the records will show various arrests of Renard in company with Egan gangsters.

One such instance is recalled, a year or more ago, when Renard and Edward Linehan, Egan gangster, arrested together but released when they explained they were looking up defense witnesses in a robbery case pending against them. The next day Linehan's car, riddled with bullets, was found in a lot on Goodfellow avenue, near Natural Bridge road. Renard had been "shown up" to detectives as an Egan ite, when arrested on suspect, it is recalled at Police Headquarters.

Chief Hoagland hopes to submit his report in the inquiry to Chief of Police O'Brien, who ordered it, in time for the latter to hand it to the Police Board on Tuesday.

The policemen who testified for the defense were: Sergt. Peter Gauley, who testified in support of "Red" Lanham's alibi, and Patrolman who told of Renard's bad character—Capt. William Stinger, Lieut. William Walton and William Murphy and Detective Sergt. Leo Ising.

Word has been brought here that a roadhouse party near Quincy, at which "Dinty" Colbeck was host, one night early last week, after the trial had started. Chief Hoagland was asked yesterday if he knew wether any of the St. Louis policemen attended that party. He replied: "I read of it in the Quincy papers, but I'm sure none of the St. Louis officers were in attendance." He will maintain of this in his inquiry.

ELECTION BOARD JOBS DEMANDED FOR BIG VOTE HERE

City Committeemen, Irked by Loss of Power at Polls Under Present System, to Demand a Change.

SAID TO HAVE BAKER'S PROMISE

G. O. P. Ward Leaders Also Will Insist Governor Let Them In on Naming Police Commissioners.

The Republican City Committee is prepared to go to Governor-elect Baker and demand the patronage it believes it deserves by reason of the 42,919 plurality which it assisted him in rolling up in St. Louis. This includes the right to a voice in naming the personnel of the Election and Police Boards.

The committee is particularly interested in naming the Election Board. The board, headed for the last four years by John B. Edwards, has not met with the approval of partisan politicians. It has ignored their requests too often.

Committeemen have always wanted to name the judges and clerks of election in the precincts of their wards. They have asserted that, in the interest of their parties, it was necessary to have men known to them personally, so far as possible, count the ballots. They desired men living in the precinct where they served, on the theory that they knew the residents of it and could detect any attempt at fraudulent voting.

Restrictions Lifted in 1921.

Prior to 1921 the election law made it mandatory upon the board to select its judges and clerks from lists supplied by the committeemen and provided that the men must reside in the precinct wherein they served. The law passed in 1921 removed these restrictions and provided merely that the judges and clerks must be registered voters in the election at hand.

The board seized upon the new law and refused to accept lists offered by committeemen. It went further. It brought judges and clerks from sections of the city not remotely connected with the locality in which they served. They were men whose politics was ascertained, but who did not depend upon it for a livelihood and owed no loyalty to either the Republican or Democratic City Central Committees.

Pledge Obtained From Baker.

When Baker was in St. Louis shortly before the election, leaders of the Republican committee sought and received an audience with him. They say they obtained from him a promise to give consideration to their suggestions for Election and Police Board appointees, with the proviso that they recommend only men of high character.

The committee promised to do this, but its members have privately expressed the opinion that the present board, and particularly Edwards, will not be reappointed. The committee contends he must be replaced by one who will show some consideration for the City Committee's wishes.

Edwards has always taken the position that with a challenger in the polls all day and two watchers at night, while the votes were being counted, each committee was fully protected. His statements in reply to committeemen were that the board was responsible for clean elections and that it, therefore, should assume responsibility for the judges and clerks. The only way to do this safely lay in appointments directly by the board. He further said that with committeemen running for re-election every two years, judges and clerks appointed repeatedly by them might have an interest in the matter and that the possibility of such interest must be removed.

Oppose Goldstein Power.

For two years this condition has existed and the committee is anxious to see the era of arbitrary Election Board domination pass. The law merely permits the board to ignore committee recommendations for election officials and does not say that it shall do so. Politicians hope to obtain the appointment of men who will not ignore the letter of the law, but will waive accepting the spirit of it.

The committee is not in accord with the belief in some quarters that Nat Goldstein, Nineteenth Ward Committeeman, will have considerable strength with the Baker administration. It would prefer that Baker take the recommendation of the more forceful figures in the committee without seeking or taking counsel from any one man. Goldstein, however, was one of the original Baker men in St. Louis and supported him in the primary, while the bulk of the committee stood with Lieutenant-Governor Hiram Lloyd. The fly in the ointment is that, while Goldstein was an open Baker advocate, his ward in the primary went for Victor J. Miller, 1184 to 710 for Baker.

Others High With Baker.

It is expected that Louis P. Aloe, former president of the Board of

The fly in the ointment is that, while Goldstein was an open Baker advocate, his ward in the primary went for Victor J. Miller, 1184 to 710 for Baker.

Others High With Baker.

It is expected that Louis P. Aloe, former president of the Board of Aldermen, and Edward W. Foristel and John S. Leahy, attorneys, will have considerable influence with Baker. They were in constant touch with his campaign in the closing days and were really responsible for his denunciation of the Ku Klux Klan.

However, the City Committee will demand recognition. St. Louis saved the governorship for Baker and the City Committee wants Baker to "save" it from another such board as has controlled elections for the last four years.

TWO SYMPHONY CONCERTS FOR CHILDREN THIS WEEK

First of Dual Series Under Director Ganz to Be for Public School Pupils Wednesday Afternoon.

Two Symphony Orchestra concerts for children will be held this week, inaugurating a dual series of concerts for the youth of the community this winter.

One series is that for children of the public schools, for which the Board of Education arranged with the orchestra management. The other is under the auspices of the Symphony Society, and will be for children of various private and parochial schools, pupils of Clayton schools, and individuals.

The public school concerts will be held in the community center auditorium at Grand boulevard and Vista avenue. The first will be at 2 p. m. Wednesday. Remaining concerts in this series will be on Dec. 17, Jan. 14, 1925; Feb. 18 and March 11.

Concerts in the orchestra's own series for children will begin at 3 p. m. Thursday, with the succeeding ones on Dec. 11, Jan. 15, 1925; Feb. 5 and Feb. 26. They will be held at the Odeon.

The latter series is an innovation in the city's musical life. The public school series supplants the concerts of the orchestra given for the last three winters under the auspices of the Post-Dispatch which paid for them. Announcement of the series was made by the Board of Education last July. It being specified in the arrangements that at least 65 musicans should play in these concerts.

First Concert Wednesday.

Conductor Ganz, in effect, will be a member of the public school music faculty. He will intersperse numbers on the programs with remarks explanatory of the music and the instruments played.

Wednesday's concert will be for all pupils of the fourth quarter of the eighth, or highest, grade of the public grammar schools. They will be given free tickets by their teachers. Lower classes of the older pupils will be admitted to the succeeding concerts.

Tickets for the series under the orchestra's auspices may be obtained at the Symphony Society offices in the Odeon Building. The price is $2.50 for the five concerts for a parquet seat, $1.25 for a balcony seat and $30 for a box, seating six. Parents acting as escorts for children may attend. This series was arranged by a committee of women of which Mrs. Charles M. Rice was chairman.

More than 60 pupils of Clayton High School will attend this series, as the result of efforts by Miss Rosé G. Fraley, supervisor of music in the Clayton schools. By corresponding with parents she arranged for motor bus transportation between the suburb and the Odeon, at a cost of 25 cents per person per round trip.

Programs for both series have been arranged with the idea of making the music of definite educative value, with the concerts progressive in educational tendencies.

Program Announced.

The program for Wednesday's public school concert follows: Overture to "Pique Dame," (Von Suppe), second movement from Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, Beethoven's "Hymn of Peace" (sung by the audience), a demonstration of string instruments, "Blue Danube" waltz (Strauss), "America, the Beautiful" (Samuel Ward), sung by audience.

The public school programs were arranged by Conductor Ganz and Eugene Hahnel, supervisor of music in the public schools. This year, for the first time, pupils will be given credits for proficiency in musical knowledge.

Thursday's program for the second series follows: Overture to "Oberon" (Weber), second movement of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, demonstrtaion of various string instruments, including playing of several selections; "Malaguena" (Moszkowsky); "In the Land of Hope and Glory" (Elgar), sung by the audience, and Rakoczy march from "Damnation of Faust" (Berlioz). The chorus to be sung by the children is set to the air of Sir Edgar Elgar's noted march, "Pomp and Circumstance."

STUDENTS TO BUILD AIRPLANE

New York University Men Will Enter Pulitzer Meet.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Students of New York University will build an airplane for the air meet in conjunction with next year's Pulitzer trophy race. An aero club has been formed to carry out the plan, composed of undergraduates and faculty members, including Prof. Alexander Klemin, who heads the department of aeronautics at the university.

But though the work of building will be supervised by Prof. Klemin, all work of construction of the plane will be done by the students who have at their disposal the entire facilities and equipment of the engineering college. It is thought the airplane will cost only $350.

SUES HAIR BOBBER FOR $5000

Woman Alleges Clippers Caused Infection of Skin.

Alleging that germs were transferred from a pair of clippers to her scalp while she was getting her hair bobbed, Mrs. Lillian Hartman, 32 years old, a clerk in the Title Guaranty Building, yesterday filed suit against Mrs. Ethel M. Thornton, proprietor of the St. Louis Academy of Beauty Culture at Eighth and Pine streets.

It is alleged that the clippers were not sterilized and as a result plaintiff suffered an infection which has rendered her "unable to enjoy the company of her many and various friends because of the humiliation caused by her disfigurement." The petition states that Mrs. Hartman visited the beauty parlor April 16 and while one attendant was curling her hair another clipped her neck.

Taylor was the son of the late Justin R. Taylor, one of the founders of the Rutledge & Taylor Real Estate Co. He is survived by his widow and a daughter, Marthatha Jane Taylor.

FRANK WEEKE TO GO TO TRIAL ON DEC. 3

Brother of Republican Politician Is Charged With Volstead Act Violation.

Frank Weeke, brother of "Hank" Weeke, Republican politician, will go to trial Dec. 3, in Federal Court, on a charge of violating the Volstead Act. The date was set by Federal Judge Faris yesterday after he had overruled four motions to suppress evidence in the case.

Weeke and the prohibition agents, who visited his butcher shop at 2308 Cass avenue, when the evidence was seized, testified for Judge Faris' benefit. Weeke contended the search warrant was improperly obtained and served. He asserted the agents, in obtaining the warrant, had no information that he was violating the law, and in serving it merely slapped the paper down on a meat block and then began looking around.

The agents reported finding seven stills in a shed in the rear of the shop. Weeke admitted ownership of an 800-gallon still, but said it was dismantled, adding he had never operated any still. As to the other stills, he said they were merely "scrap copper."

Group Chief William Goshorn, who was in the raiding party, testified that Weeke, when the warrant was served on him, asked, "Do you know who I amg" Goshorn said he did not, so Weeks informed him 'I'm Hank Weeke's brother." Nevertheless, the raid was completed.

Weeke has anohter criminal charge pending against him in this connection. Under an old internal revenue law, he is charged with setting up and failing to register his still. Also, he is being sued civilly for failure to pay taxes on the still. The punishment for the charge on which he will be tried Dec. 3 ranges from six months in jail and a $1000 fine, to two years in the penitentiary and a $2000 fine.

DEMOCRAT TO CONTEST BROOKHART'S SEAT IN SENATE

Steck Alleges Sufficient Votes to Elect Him Were Cast but Not Counted.

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 15.—Daniel F. Steck, Democratic candidate for the United States senatorship against Senator Smith W. Brookhart, in the recent election, today announced a contest for the seat, which would be made on the ground that sufficient votes were cast for him to overcome the Senator's small majority, but apparently had not been counted by election judges.

Senator Brookhart leads Steck by 750 votes, with the official county canvasses completed.

Steck's statement said that in Iowa about 950,000 votes were cast, and, according to reports of the various election boards, less than 500,000 for United States Senator. Reports from many localities in the State show that a great many ballots in which the voter attempted to exercise the choice for Unied States Senator were not counted by the local election boards," Steck's statment said. "Also, reports show that in many instances votes which should have been legally counted for myself for United States Senator, were, through a mistaken view of the law by election boards, counted for my opponent. These two classes of votes aggregated many thousands, more than sufficient to change the result on the returns as made. The contest will, of course, be decided by the United State Senate itself, the Constitution making that body he sole judge of the election and qualification of its members."

DEMOCRATS AIM FOR CONTROL OF CONGRESS IN 1926

Reorganization Plans Include Party Newspaper to Be Issued Weekly and Educational Campaign.

20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Democrats are rallying from the election and will begin to reorganize their forces for a congressional victory in 1926. Upon the arrival of Representative Cordell Hull of Tennessee here next week, the Democratic leaders of the House will get together to launch a drive against the Republicans. The first step will be toward collecting money to conduct an educational campaign. They hope to be able to establish a party paper to be issued weekly.

The plan of the Democrats is to oust the Republicans from the control of Congress two years from now, and then organize for the 1928 fight. By sticking to Congress temporarily they can escape the embarrassment of the William G. McAdoo problem expected in the next presidential situation. The McAdoo boosters will commence their campaign later on.

Shaver's Successor.

Some of the Democrats interested in bringing about harmony for 1926 are Senators Caraway of Arkansas, Fletcher of Florida, Geore of Georgia, Overman of North Carolina, Smith of South Carolina, Underwood of Alabama, and Representatives Cordell Hull, Tennessee; Oldfield, Arkansas; Pou, North Carolina; McClintic, Oklahoma, and Garrett, Tennessee.

Talk about the resignation of Clem L. Shaver, as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, has brought suggestions here as to his successor. Some of these under consideration by various groups and individuals are: Senator Claude A. Swanson of Virginia; Senator W. J. Harris, Georgia; Senator Pat Harrison, Mississippi; Senator Thomas J. Walsh, Montana. In the last pre-convention campaign Swanson supported Senator Glass for the presidential nomination; Harrison helped to swing a majority to John W. Davis, and Harris and Walsh were McAdoo supporters. Senator Pittman, Nevada, is also mentioned among those likely to be considered.

Plan to Get Out Dead Wood.

A quiet, but determined movement to reorganize the Democratic committee headquarters from bottom to top is actually under way in Washington. The plan, as suggested by those behind the program, is to "get out an accumulation of dead wood which has been collecting for years, and have a new deal altogether." The purpose avowed is to put in a "more vigorous crowd."

The McAdoo people are active in this subrosa drive. They believe that the best way to make the committee "function properly" is to man it with McAdoo supporters.

MRS. HARDING'S CONDITION CONTINUES TO BE GRAVE

Latest Bulletin From Her Bedside Says She Was Stronger and More Cheerful at Midnight.

By the Associated Press.

MARION, O., Nov. 15.—Mrs. Florence Kling Harding, widow of the late President, seriously ill at White Oaks farm here, is growing weaker each hour, a bulletin issued by Dr. Carl W. Sawyer, her physician, at 8:30 tonight said. The physician, however, expressed the belief that she would survive the night.

"Mrs. Harding has slept most of the day," the bulletin read, "and has also taken a small amount of nourishment. Regardless of this, she is very exhausted and weak tonight. She has failed perceptibly during the day."

At midnight Dr. Sawyer issued the following bulletin:

"Mrs. Harding has been comfortable up to midnight. She was stronger and more cheerful."

A bulletin issued by Dr. Sawyer at 8:15 a. m. said: "Mrs. Harding slept very little last night, but is holding her own this morning. Heart attack less in severity. Her condition is just about the same as yesterday."

At Trinity Baptist Church, where a centennial celebration is being held this week, the large audience today, after hearing a tribute paid to President Harding by the pastor, the Rev. George M. Landis, stood for several minutes in silent prayer for Mrs. Harding's recovery. President Harding for many years was a trustee of Trinity Church.

Dr. Arnstein was accompanied by Dr. Klemperer, scientific aerodynamic research worker, and eight other experts.

STUDENTS FROM 38 STATES ENROLLED AT WASHINGTON U.

Students from 38 States and seven foreign countries are enrolled at Washington University this year, according to a survey based on an enrollment of 5513 at the beginning of this semester. Of this number, about 80 per cent are from St. Louis and its environs within 25 miles, 81 per cent are from Missouri and 64 per cent from St. Louis.

The enrollment this year shows an increase of 664 students over last year, when 36 States and six foreign countries were represented.

8064 BALLOTS WERE IMPROPERLY MARKED

Count Showed 273,316 Votes Were Cast but Electors Received Only 265,252.

A difference of 8064 between the total number of ballots cast in the election Nov. 4, and the number of votes counted for the various presidential candidates, shows that nearly that many voters were unable to manipulate the blanket ballot successfully.

The total number of ballots cast was 273,316, showing that 90 per cent of the city's voters went to the polls. But the presidential electors of all tickets received a total of only 265,252.

4149 Ballots Rejected.

The precinct election officials' reports showed that 4149 ballots were rejected as spoiled, meaning that they were marked in such a manner that they could not be counted for any candidate, or else not marked at all. A ballot which showed a correct marking for even one candidate was counted for that candidate, and was not included among the rejects.

Besides the rjects, the figures show, there were 3915 ballots which were not counted on the presidency. This was, in most cases, because the voter had failed to make a cross at the head of the ballot, and had not taken the alternative method of marking the presidential electors with crosses. These ballots, however, were marked for some or all other offices on the ticket, as shown by the fact that they were not rejected outright.

Presumably, almost everyone who took the trouble to vote at all meant to vote on the presidency, but one in every 33 persons failed to get his (or her) vote counted for a presidential candidate.

La Follette's Strength.

Comparison of Senator La Follette's St. Louis vote of 28,758 with the vote of Brandt, Socialist candidate for Governor, which was 8523, showed that La Follette got, in addition to the normal Socialist vote, about 20,000 other votes. It does not appear that any appreciable part of the Socialist vote went to the Socialist Labor candidate, for the Socialist Labor ticket polled but 308 votes, as compared with 815 for the same ticket four years ago.

Brandt's vote for Governor was 1186 less than the Socialist candidate for the same office polled four years ago.

Seventeen voters, who must have been in a somewhat confused state, marked crosses at the top of the ticket at the right-hand side of the ballot, which was labeled "Progressive," but which had no presidential electors and no State candidates—nothing but a few local candidates. Their votes were counted presidentially, for the Progressive ticket, in other words, for a party name only. The Progressive ticket polled about 800 votes on its distinctive local candidates. The La Follette party in Missouri bore the name of Liberal.

PROPOSES ELEVATED SPEEDWAY FOR AUTOS IN NEW YORK

Citizens' Union Head Also Would Bar Motor Vehicles From Central Park.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—A proposal to take Central Park out of the age of gasoline back to the age of crinoline, when men wore pantaloons and women hoops, and the times were mid-Victorian without knowing or paying any particular attention to the fact, was made today by William J. Schieffelin, chairman of the Citizens' Union, at the autumn luncheon of the Municipal Art Society.

Schieffelin suggested all gasoline-burning vehicles be banished from the park and the leisurely Victorias of another day restored. He said a few slow-moving sightseeing cars should be allowed, if they were driven by electricity.

Trees in Central Park have suffered so from the exhaust fumes of automobiles that speed along the drives they "remind one of the shell-torn forests of devastated France" in some places, Schieffelin declared. He said the park ought to be restored to its pristine freshness of atmosphere and serenity of spirit and be in truth "a wide open space, where red-blooded she-women" could take their children "for a breath of God's pure air and an hour of relaxation."

Relief for the city from growing traffic congestion and air pollution by exhaust fumes might be had by means of an elevated marginal speedway circling Manhattan, Schieffelin said. This would be used only by motorists in a hurry to get up or downtown and desirous of avoiding cross-town interference.

Shot Down Resisting Attack on "Raiding Parson" at Door of Their Home in Georgia.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 15.—Shot as she lay on the ground after firing on a group of men attempting to abduct her husband Thursday night at their home in Haralson County, Mrs. Robert Stewart, wife of the "Raiding Parson," of the North Georgia Methodist conference, died this morning. Her husband was not at her bedside when she died, having returned to his home earlier.

Moonshiners are said to be responsible for the attempted abduction of the minister. He recognized five men in the attacking party and will swear out warrants for their arrest.

Mrs. Stewart was brought to a hospital here yesterday, paralyzed from the shoulders down as the result of a bullet wound in her back.

Officers of Haralson County were reported today as active in the search for the men participating in the attack on the Stewart home.

The minister was known in his community as the "Raiding Parson" as a result of his activities in the moonshine camps.

The shooting occurred when three automobiles drove to the door of the Stewart home, asking that the minister accompany them on a "liquor raid," and when he refused, suspecting a ruse, he said, the men attempted to force him into the automobile. Mrs. Stewart, hearing the scuffle, seized her husband's revolver and fired two shots into the crowd, the fire being returned and striking her down.

The minister had recently been connected with efforts to bring about arrest of "bootleggers."

During the World War he was stationed at times in Gallipoli, Egypt, Palestine and Syria.

DEPUTIES ORDERED TO 'WING' PLANES BAGGING DUCKS

Two Sharpshooters on Watch for Aviators Who "Scoop" Wild Fowl With Nets.

Two sharpshooting deputy game wardens have been armed with long range rifles and posted near the mouth of the Missouri River with orders to "wing" two airplanes, the pilots of which have been "scooping" wild ducks out of the air by means of nets let down from the undercarriage of their planes.

The order declaring "open season" on the aircraft in question was issued yesterday by State Game and Fish Commissioner Wielandy upon receipt of affidavits from St. Louis business men that they had witnessed one of the aviators capture or cripple all but two of a flight of 30 ducks in one "scoop." One plane has been seen swooping into flights of wild fowl at the mouth of the Missouri River, and the other is said to operate farther up the Mississippi River, according to the affidavits in Wielandy's hands.

Wielandy characterized the action of the aviators as "most unsportsmanlike and detestable." "Such practice constitutes interference with migratory flight, and is a violation of both Federal and State game laws," he said. "If continued it will spoil the sport of duck hunters in this vicinity, for the fowl will avoid migratory flight along airlines where they are so molested."

Wielandy said he had cautioned his deputies against deliberately wounding the aviators. "Our purpose is to force a landing in order that we may learn their identity," he said. "The men I have detailed for the purpose are both experts with a rifle and, if the planes come low enough to get in a flight of ducks, my men will be enabled to send a bullet through the motor."

Wielandy said he would also request Col. Paegelow, commandant of Scott Field, and Capt. C. Ray Wassell, commander of the National Guard Air Unit at Bridgeton, to caution members of their organizations against engaging in any similar practice.

Houghton Returns to Berlin.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Alanson B. Houghton, American Ambassador to Germany, who sailed today on the Leviathan, explained that Europe had "turned the corner" and was on the way to normal conditions. He predicted that America would be directly affected through the increased demand for grain, meats and manufactured goods. "With the new German elections we shall probably see the eradication of the radical group," Houghton said. "Communism is not a German production and its increase there was an outgrowth of discontent during the post-war years."

TWO NEW MOTORBUS ROUTES OPEN TODAY

Peoples' Co. to Begin Operation on Union Boulevard and Page Avenue.

Two additional bus routes begin operation this morning, and Richard W. Meade, president of the People's Motorbus Co., announced that the extension of a third would become effective Wednesday morning.

The Union boulevard and Page avenue routes are those opened today. The Union boulevard route runs north from Lindell boulevard to a loop over Lillian, Thrush, Thekla, Partridge and West Florissant avenues. The Page avenue line runs east from the Lucas and Hunt road on St. Charles Rock road and Easton avenue, south on Hamilton avenue to Page avenue, east on Page avenue to Vandeventer avenue, south on Vandeventer avenue to Washington boulevard and east to Eads Bridge.

The Kingshighway line will be extended from Arsenal street, its present southern terminal, to Gravois avenue. The northern half of this route will be from Southwest avenue and Kingshighway to Penrose avenue. Because of the macadam pavement in Kingshighway south of Arsenal, single-decked pneumatic-tired busses will be used on the southern half of the route from Southwest avenue to Gravois avenue.

The new Scanlan avenue garage will be opened today, with a capacity of 70 busses. One hundred and twenty busses are now in the service of the People's Motorbus Co.

TIGERT DENIES MILITARISM

Replies to Criticisms on Education Week.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—John J. Tigert, Commissioner of Education, in a statement today, replied to criticisms voiced by some organizations that a "militaristic" aspect would be given American education week exercises through American Legion participation.

Many organizations have been invited equally to participate, Tigert said, adding that "efforts" to make it appear that the legion has been given precedence were "insidious attempts to discredit the laudable interest that the legion has taken in education." "In the information that has gone out from the Bureau of Education," he said, "we have been careful to make it clear that we are not dictating a program. I believe the program is a clean cut and constructive one worthy of support by the American people. Every kind of propaganda has been injected into the public schools. Is it possible that anyone would contend that the teaching of patriotism or Americanism in the public schools is intolerant?"

SCIENTIFIC SURVEY MADE OF GANGS

University of Chicago Man, Telling What He Found, Says Gangsters Die Young.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15. — A scientific survey of gangs and their purposes has been made by Prof. Frederick M. Thrasher of the University of Chicago. He lived among gangs for months and formed an intimate relation with them. He came in contact with 1313 clubs and gangs.

"The geographical location of the gang centers is in the slums," Prof. Thrasher said.

Among the gangs he found many different orders, each with its mysteries, secret signs and hand shakes.

One of the most notorious is the order of "Rollers of the Dinos," a group of gangsters who fleece drunkards, one member throttling a victim while another goes through his pockets.

"The Risky Night Riders" he found to be a mixed gang from the boarding house district, mostly boys and girls under 21, who assemble for immoral relationships. Closely related to the "Riders" are "The Gang Shags," a group who pounce upon folk arriving home late at night.

Syndicates the Worst.

The criminal syndicates were found to be the worst. They are country-wide organizations of certain gangs, having branches in outlying towns, who terrorize the countryside.

"The advent of the speedy automobile has sent many gangs from the city to the rural districts," Prof. Thrasher said.

A classification of meeting places shows that of the groups surveyed 579 met in streets and alleys, 147 in vacant lots, prairies, on the lake front, canal and river banks, 368 in club rooms, rented or donated, and 184 in pool rooms and soft drink parlors.

"Strangely enough," continued the professor, "membership lists of the South Side have included sons of some reputable families in good neighborhoods."

In addition to the patronage from officials of the bad gangs, support has come from breweries and saloons.

Cradles of Crime.

While some of the organizations were found to be a basis of neighborhood spirit and of progress, most of them, Prof. Thrasher said, act as the cradles of crime. Politicians, realizing the power of these gangs, have tried to ingratiate themselves with them, he said. Even Aldermen establish connections with them and get jobs for the gang members in return for votes, Prof. Thrasher reported.

Vital statistics of Chicago's underworld show that the bad die young in gangland. The average, computed from the last 20 deaths of gangsters and gunmen, is 28 years old.

OPEN VERDICT IN DEATH OF TEACHER

Mother Tells Coroner's Jury Miss Anna Casey Often Read by Gas Light.

A Coroner's jury yesterday returned an open verdict in the death of Miss Anna F. Casey, 37 years old, a teacher of mathematics at Central High School, who died of asphyxiation at her home, 5222 Minerva avenue, Friday. An autopsy showed that death was caused by carbon monoxide gas.

Mrs. Johanna Casey, mother of the teacher, testified she found the body at 10:30 a. m. when she went to her daughter's room to awaken her. The body was on the bed and gas was escaping from a wall jet. Miss Casey frequently used the gas light in preference to electricity to read and sew, as it seemed easier on her eyes, the mother said.

Mrs. Casey said her daughter returned home at 4 p. m. Thursday from a visit to a physician and went immediately to her room, explaining that she was tired. She had been in ill health since last summer, but had never given evidence of despondency. The only other evidence introduced at the inquest was a letter from Dr. John W. Larimore, in the University Club Building, stating that Miss Casey was suffering from nasal catarrh, but was not seriously ill.

Miss Casey was a graduate of the University of Chicago. Before being transferred to Central High School a year ago, she had taught at Soldan and Ben Blewett Junior High School. She was granted a sick leave when school opened in September, and did not return to her duties.

FALL FLOWER SHOW AT COLISEUM TO END TONIGHT

All Exhibits Winning Prizes in the Competitive Events to Be on Display.

The Fall Flower Show which opened last Tuesday at the Coliseum will close tonight with a display of all the exhibits winning first prizes in all the competitive events.

Judging of the various exhibits was concluded yesterday when the Jensen Floral Co., was given first premium for the best arranged basket of roses. The Mullanphy Florists won second prize, and the Oppermann Floral Co., third. Mrs. E. H. Simmons, of St. Louis County headed the committee of women acting as judges.

The sweepstakes cups were awarded yesterday. F. H. Weber won the retail florists' prize, having five first premiums. W. A. Rowe, of Kirkwood, with a total of 32 winners took the cup offered for the best display of plants, and Louis Baumann for the best landscape exhibit.

The show this year is considered more successful than those of former years, both in point of attendance and in variety of the exhibits. Many new flowers made their first public appearance at the show.

In accordance with the custom which has prevailed for a number of years, the thousands of flowers on display will be distributed today among the charitable and benevolent institutions of the city.

GEN. LEONARD WRIGHT COLBY, VETERAN OF 3 WARS, DIES

Nebraskan Served as Assistant Attorney-General Under President Harrison.

By the Associated Press.

BEATRICE, Neb., Nov. 15.—Gen. Leonard Wright Colby, veteran of the Civil, Indian and Spanish-American wars, Assistant United States Attorney-General under President Harrison and for a generation a leader of the Southern Nebraska bar, died today, following a long illness.

Gen. Colby was 78 years old, a native of Ashtabula County, O., and was graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1871. He was Judge of the Eighteenth Judicial District of Nebraska and served in the State Senate two terms. He was a private in Company B, Eighth Illinois Infantry, in the Civil War, and later served in the Sioux Indian campaign, commanding a brigade of Nebraska troops. He was a Brigadier-General in the U. S. Volunteers in the Spanish-American War, organizing the Cuban-American Volunteer legion in 1897.

BURLEY GROWERS VOTE TO CUT OUT THE 1925 CROP

Tobacco Growers of Ohio, Missouri, Indiana, Tennessee and Kentucky Represented.

By the Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 15.—Burley tobacco growers representing Ohio, Indiana, Missouri, Tennessee and Kentucky, meeting here, voted to "cut out" the 1925 burley crop late today. West Virginia, a burley producing sate, was without representation.

Seventy-six percent of this year's production voted for the cut-out proposal, it was said.

The approval of the cut-out was made unanimous by a rising vote after a poll on the proposition had been tallied and announced.

Hardware Dealers to Meet Here.

The Missouri Retail Hardware Dealers' Association will hold its annual convention at Hotel Statler Jan. 26, 27 and 28. More than half the space allotted for exhibits has been subscribed for, and the committee in charge predicts the convention will set a record for attendance.

JAVA EARTHQUAKE DEATH TOLL ESTIMATED AT 300

Six Villages Completely Isolated by Floods and Earth Still Trembles.

By the Associated Press.

BATAVIA, Nov. 15.—The death toll in the earthquake which shook the central portion of the Island of Java last Wednesday is estimated in official circles at 300, although private reports indicate that as many as 600 persons may have perished.

Six villages are completely isolated by floods. The damage to private property at Wonosobo exceeds 200,000 guilders (normally $120,000). The earth is still trembling from slight shocks. It is generally accepted here that the earthquake was not of a climatic nature, but due merely to the shifting of earth layers.

SUES MEAT MAN FOR $60,000

Youth Alleges He Was Beaten and Then His Arrest Caused.

Thomas Wiltshire, 5516 Vernon avenue, proprietor of a meat shop, was sued yesterday for $60,000 damages by John J. Rogan Jr., 19 years old. It is alleged that on Nov. 5 last Wiltshire assaulted and beat Rogan and then had him arrested on a charge of petit larceny. The Prosecuting Attorney, it was stated, refused to issue an information in the case, but before this decision was reached Rogan says he was deprived of his liberty for five hours.

Rogan's attorney explained that young Rogan while passing through an alley in the rear of Wiltshire's home found a small automobile accessory, of little value, which happened to belong to the defendant.

EXPLOSION DAMAGES PLANT OF EDWARDSVILLE NEWSPAPER

Steam Table, Used in Drying Matrices, Blows Up—Girl Slightly Injured.

Damage estimated at $5000 was caused yesterday to the machinery and building of the Edwardsville Intelligencer, an afternoon daily newspaper, when a steam table used in drying matrices exploded.

The force of the explosion shattered all windows in the building, a one-story structure, and blew out partitions between the mechanical department and the business office. Miss Johanna Hentz, a clerk, who was seated at her desk in the front of the building, suffered a slight injury to her right leg when a heavy piece of metal, blown through the roof of the mechanical department, came through the ceiling of the business office, grazing her. Ten employes in the mechanical department were uninjured.

The loss is not insured.

To Elect Brandegee's Successor.

By the Associated Press.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 15.—Representatives John Q. Tilson and Schuyler Merritt are candidates for the Republican nomination to the late Frank B. Brandegee's office as Senator. Delegates to a state convention here on Nov. 24 and 25 to pick the candidate were chosen in caucuses held throughout the state last night. Senator George McLean will be temporary chairman of the convention.

The Perfect Market-Place

An Extraordinary Deal

—For Ten Only—

Ford and Dodge Owners

Here is a chance to exchange your Dodge or Ford for a high-powered Jewett in one of the most profitable deals you have ever made in your life.

It's limited to ten Dodge or Ford owners. Only ten can get it. The eleventh will be out of luck. It's only the first ten that can get a late model Jewett in a way that is unusual, simple and profitable.

Here's an Offer That Will Astound You

Here is the low down. We have ten standard Jewetts — fine, high-powered cars, that will more than take you there and bring you back. They'll give you a thrill and enjoyment of the use of an automobile such as you perhaps never dreamed was possible. And we're going to sell these cars to ten Dodge or Ford owners under a plan that will involve no cash transaction.

The Jewett Six Excels In Performance

More than 1200 St. Louis owners have discovered that no other car in its class performs as well as the Jewett Six. To their dismay, owners of much higher-priced cars than Jewett have found that Jewett outpulls them on hills and passes them on level ground. Owners know that Jewett riding is comfortable riding and that Jewett has more power in proportion to weight than any other car in or near its class. That's the kind of car we make such a marvelous trading proposition upon.

We'll take your Dodge or Ford "as is" and we'll mark up to your credit an amount so close to the original cost that it will surprise you. Then, the difference we will spread out over a long enough period so that you will never feel it.

Be One of the First Ten—Don't Lose This Chance

Of course it's unusual. Certainly a dealer who sold all his cars on that basis would lose money. But this is more than selling an automobile—it's a merchandising opportunity that comes to a man once in a lifetime. For you it means a 50 horsepower Jewett to enjoy this Winter and for many seasons to come, and we are willing to take the loss so we can add ten more Jewett owners to the hundreds who already drive these cars in St. Louis.

It must be thoroughly understood that this is limited to ten Dodge and Ford owners. We will not, under any circumstances, extend it. It will be the first ten who get here or telephone they are coming.

FALL DEFENDED IN OIL SUIT ARGUMENT

"No Conspiracy Until Politicians Gave Birth to It," Says Doheny Attorney.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 15. — Completion of the trial of the Government's suit to cancel leases and contracts held by the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Company in the Elk Hills, Cal., naval oil reserves, on the ground of conspiracy and fraud, was sighted today, with the agreement of counsel to place the case in the hands of Judge Paul McCormick not later than Tuesday evening.

The short session today was taken up with the continuance of arguments by Frank J. Hogan, chief counsel for the defendant company, whose address was not completed when court adjourned until Monday. Continuing his attack on the plaintiff's charge of conspiracy, Hogan said:

"The facts show beyond the peradventure of a doubt that there never was and that there was no thought of any conspiracy in this matter until the politicians gave birth to it."

Hogan dwelt at length on a defense for Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of the Interior, who, it is charged, received a bribe of $100,000 from E. L. Doheny, head of the Pan-American interests.

Referring to a mass of evidence, Hogan argued that Fall played only a perfunctory part in negotiations for the contracts and leases. "All Secretary Fall did in this matter was to agree with the Navy Department," the attorney declared.

Hogan attacked the opposing counsel for not calling to the witness stand A. W. Ambrose, chief petroleum technologist of the Bureau of Mines, who had been subpenaed by the plaintiff. Hogan said the Government had not dared to put Ambrose on the stand "lest the whole truth come out and destroy its case."

H. L. PARKER APPROVED MESTON AS PRESIDENT

Chairman of Emerson Electric Co. Board of Directors Gives Deposition in Suit.

The name of Thomas M. Meston, president of the Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co., 2024 Washington avenue, who ended his life with poison in his office on Nov. 23, 1922, was mbentioned Friday at the taking of depositions in a receivership suit against the company by Charles R. Meston, a brother.

The witness, H. L. Parker, 70-year-old chairman of the board of directors, was asked: "Did you ever interfere with Tom's authority or duties?"

"Never," Parker replied.

"You considered him an efficient and competent officer?"

"Decidedly."

Parker said Meston's various duties were added to when the connection of his brother, Charles, with the firm was severed in 1919. "By reason of his good hard work," Parker said, Meston's share of "extra salary" was also increased.

The "extra salary plan," as explained in yesterday's Post-Dispatch, was one by which directors and executives shared in the net profits of the company. In 1920, for example, President Meston received $19,350 "regular salary" and $13,396.49 "extra salary," a total of $32,746.49.

A verdict of suicide was returned at the inquest into Meston's death. An examination showed the presence of cyanide of potassium in his stomach. Friends and business associates attributed his act to failing health. He was 51 years old and had been with the company since 1897.

Mrs. Gertrude Phillips Meston, his widow, is one of the defendants in the suit. She and 11 other persons holding 3039 shares of common stock intervened as defendants and denied allegations made in the petition of her brother-in-law, Charles M. Meston. The latter owns 1150 shares of common. Parker controls 5026 shares out of a total of 10,000.

The Emerson company, which is engaged in the manufacture and sale of electric motors, fans and appliances, was organized in 1890. The original stockholders were J. W. Emerson, A. W. Meston and Charles R. Meston. The latter declares his serious illness in November, 1919, was accepted as an opportunity to oust him as director, a position which he has been unable to regain.

FILES SUIT FOR $30,000 AGAINST ESTATE OF UNCLE

Miss Ivy J. Freker Bases Claim on Work as Housekeeper for Henry W. Freker, a Carpenter.

Miss Ivy J. Freker yesterday filed suit for $30,000 against the estate of her uncle, Henry W. Freker, a carpenter, who died Feb. 3 last. She bases her claim on an alleged contract made Aug. 1, 1916, whereby it was agreed that she was to keep house for him in consideration of his leaving his whole estate to her at his death.

The petition sets forth that plaintiff carried out her part of the agreement, living with her uncle at his home, 1938 Montgomery street, until he died. She performed such services as cooking, sweeping and sewing for him, and nursing him when he was ill; also collecting rents and attending to other business matters for him, it is alleged. However, at his death it was found that he did not leave a will.

He was not married and his estate, if Miss Freker's suit fails, will be divided under the law in thirds, two parts going to two brothers equally and the remaining part in equal shares to four children of a deceased brother. Miss Freker is one of the latter heirs, according to Clarence A. Weindel, her attorney. The suit values the estate at $30,000, consisting of realty. Louis A. Freker as administrator is named defendant.

SALM SAYS WIFE WILL JOIN HIM SOON IN PARIS

Asserts She Is Still Ill; But Boy Is Doing Well; Silent on Mother-in-Law.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—Millicent Rogers Salm will sail from New York in about three weeks to join her husband, Count Salm, he informed the New York World and Post-Dispatch today.

"She is still rather weak, but the boy is doing excellently and there will be no cause for delay on his account," said the Count. "I shall await my wife in Paris."

The result of the conservations between Salm and his mother-in-law, Mrs. H. H. Rogers, is being kept secret behind the smiling silence that governs both.

MAN LEAPS TO DEATH FROM THIRD-FLOOR HOTEL WINDOW

Robert Levi Had Told Clerk He Had Lost All His Money and Did Not Care to Live.

Robert Levi, 50 years old, a hatmaker, was killed at 5:30 a. m., yesterday, when he leaped from the window of his third-floor room at the University Hotel, Sixteenth and Pine streets, to the sidewalk 40 feet below. His neck was broken and his skull crushed.

Levi, who had lived at the hotel for two years, often was despondent. Two weeks ago he told the room clerk that he had lost all his money in a business venture and no longer cared to live.

$60,000 PLEDGES FOR NEW JEWISH EDUCATIONAL CENTER

Workers endeavoring to raise $150,000 for a Jewish Educational and Social Center, to be built at Page boulevard and West End avenue, reported at a meeting held yesterday that $60,000 of the sum has been been pledged.

The purpose of establishing the "center" is to provide religious instruction and recreation facilities for approximately 5000 Jewish children living in the vicinity of the proposed institution. A canvas of 3500 Jewish families in that neighborhood revealed that only 500 children were receiving religious training. Recreation facilities were also found to be inadequate.

More than 200 men and women are engaged in collecting funds for the "center," and interest is said to be general among the Jewish population of the city.

Senator Greene Recovering.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15. — Senator Frank L. Greene, Republican, of Vermont, who was shot Feb. 13 last by a Washington dry agent, who was chasing a bootlegger, is regaining his strength. In a letter to Senator Simmons of North Carolina, congratulating him on his re-election, Senator Greene said: "My condition has improved steadily, and I hope to be able to do some work in the coming session. I can talk fairly well now, and the doctors say that some day before long I will speak as well as ever. Then look out for me."

EGYPTIAN PREMIER AND CABINET QUIT

Zagloul, Nationalist Leader, Had Been Object of Attack by Extremists.

By the Associated Press.

CAIRO, Nov. 15. — Zagloul Pasha, the Egyptian Premier, announced in the Chamber of Deputies today his resignation as Premier and that of his Cabinet. He assigned reasons of health for his withdrawal. The chamber, after receiving the resignations, adjourned until Monday.

The Cabinet of Said Zagloul Pasha, Egyptian Nationalist leader, took office Jan. 28, last, after the Zagloul party elected an overwhelming majority of the Deputies. He has been the object of attack by extremists among his party who argued a more determined stand in dealing with England over the question of the Egyptian Calif and the continuation of military forces in Egyptian territory.

Last summer Zagloul went to Europe and late in September proceeded from the continent to London, where he held extended conferences with Premier MacDonald in an effort to reach an understanding over the pending questions. It was announced in London last month, however, that because of the attitude of the English Premier an agreement between the British and Egyptian Governments had been found impossible.

On his return to Cairo late in October Zagloul Pasha declared it was his intention to keep up the fight for the country's complete independence, insisting upon the question of principle, "not a single soldier had been on Egyptian soil." The British attitude in the negotiations was explained as based on unwillingness to abandon Great Britain's share in the protection of the Suez Canal.

FOUR-YEAR-OLD BOY KILLS HIMSELF WITH REVOLVER

Child Takes Father's Weapon From Shelf When Brother Is Playing With Toy Pistol.

Alfred Mason Jr., 4 years old, of 207 South Main street, East St. Louis, accidentally shot himself through the abdomen yesterday morning when playing with his father's revolver. He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis, where he died.

Alfred's brother, Kennett, 2 years old, had a toy pistol and Alfred, wanting one too, took the revolver from a shelf. It was discharged, the bullet passing through his body and lodging in the wall.

Neighbors said that the father, Alfred Mason Sr., who is a foreman on the Illinois Central Railroad, had left the revolver, a .30-caliber German Luger, with Mrs. Mason for protection while he was at work. Mason was away when the accident happened.

THREE MEN GET ABOUT $1600 IN HOLDUP OF TAILOR SHOP

Adolph M. Schilly, secretary-treasurer of the Standard Clothing and Tailoring Co., 4019 Chouteau avenue, two clerks and two customers were forced to lie on the floor there at 7:30 a. m. yesterday, when three armed robbers entered. Another man, who was trimming a show window, was overlooked by the robbers and obtained a good description of them for police.

The robbers looted an open safe in the office of money which had been obtained from a bank to cash checks of Frisco Railroad shopmen. From Schilly's desk they took $100 in cash and $15 worth of street car tokens. Altogether, between $1600 and $1800 was stolen. The robbers escaped in an automobile driven by a fourth man.

Laborer Dies in Street Car.

Ignatz Waitkus, 50 years old, a laborer at the Armour Packing plant in East St. Louis, died suddenly, presumably from heart disease, at 5:30 p. m. yesterday while returning home from work on a Stockyards street car, on Collinsville avenue, near State street.

MAIL CLERK TELLS OF $2,000,000 RONDOUT ROBBERY

Identifies Two of the Six Confessed Robbers as Pair Who Threw Pouches From Car During Holdup.

WOMAN SAYS ONE RENTED GARAGE

'We Are Out After Money,' Witness Quotes Gang Leader at Trial of Three Alleged Plotters.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15. — Roy B. Roach of Watertown, Wis., clerk in the mail car that was robbed of $2,?,?,000 in securities and currency at Rondout, Ill., last June, today identified Willis Newton and Herbert Holliday, two of the six confessed robbers, as those who removed the mail pouches from his car.

The clerk, testifying in the trial of William Fahy, former postoffice inspector; James Murray and Walter McComb, gave the first account of the actual robbery, tracing the movement of the mail from the time it left Chicago until it disappeared in the robbers' automobile, 40 miles north of the city.

Holliday also was named by another witness, Mrs. Elizabeth Bolger of Chicago, who rented her garage to him May 1. He gave the name of Hart, she said. Holliday has admitted that the loot was hidden in this garage for 10 days following the robbery.

Took Bullets for Torpedoes.

The shooting after the train stopped, when the robbers threw bombs and opened fire at the first resistance, he thought was torpedoes exploding, Roche said. Then there were voices outside, but he and his fellow clerks went on with their work. Two other clerks entered his car as he walked to the door, and just then there was a flash.

"There was a sudden flash in front of me," Roche testified. "I heard a report and the glass in the door crashed. We three ducked and went to the center of the car.

"Out After the Money."

"Then there was a rapping on the west door with some hard object. We opened and someone said: 'Come on out, you fellows, and keep on coming.' We piled out. There was a man on each side of the door and each had a revolver. One asked for the clerk in charge.

"Phillips said, 'I am he.' The robber took him into the car and said: 'Where is your registered mail? We are out after the money and we are going to get it. You boys are behaving sensibly. I am sorry I had to shoot one of your buddies. He got off with a shotgun and we had to shoot him.'"

The robber quoted by Roche apparently referred to Willie Newton, one of four Newton Brothers, who have pleaded guilty with Brent Glasscock and Herbert Holliday. Willie Newton was shot by one of the train robbers by mistake, according to Government agents.

Robber Guarded Mail Clerks.

Roche said he heard the robber ask Phillips where the Milwaukee, Minneapolis and St. Paul Reserve Bank shipments were. Asked where he was at that time, Roche answered:

"I was standing outside with my face against the side of the car. One robber was guarding us."

Then the robber inside the car started throwing out mail pouches. Several times the robber threatened Phillips, accusing him of withholding information about the mail, Roche said.

After the robber had stopped throwing out pouches, the robbers ordered the mail clerks to the robbers' automobiles, the clerks marching along with their hands raised.

Wanted to Kill Them.

"What will we do with them?" somebody said, according to Roche, and another answered: "Kill them!"

But the leader of the robbers said "No," ordered the clerks to load the automobiles with the mail sacks and then directed them to march up the track ahead of the engine and to "step lively."

"And we did," Roche said.

Willis Newton was the man who first entered the mail car with Phillips, Roche said. Another robber who entered the car, he added, was Holliday. He said he had, previous to his testimony, identified both men.

Roche identified the mail bags in which a $500,000 shipment of bonds was shipped from the Treasury Department at Washington and consigned to the Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank.

Official Vote in St. Louis County.

The official St. Louis County election returns, made public yesterday at Clayton, make no changes in the unofficial returns announced the day after election. The Republicans won all county offices by large majorities. Of the eight State Constitution and legislative proposals, all but No. 6, relating to workmen's compensation, were approved. The county's presidential and gubernatorial vote was: Coolidge, 26,744; Davis, 16,114; La Follette, 5049. Governor—Baker, 27,-800; Nelson, 17,769.

GRAND JURY RECALLED TO HEAR LOONEY CASE CHARGES

Rock Island Publisher, Jeweler, Editor and Clothelr Wants Allegations Sifted.

By the Associated Press.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Nov. 15.—On request of the defendants, the September grand jury was ordered recalled today by Judge W. T. Church in Circuit Court to consider the chanrge made by Anthony W. Billburg and George Holsapple, under sentence to the penitentiary for 14 and 20 year terms for the killing of John Connor Looney, against John W. Potter, publisher of the Rock Island Argus; John M. Colligan, his managing editor; Jacob Ramser, jeweler, and Thomas Paege, clothier, whose bonds of $10,000 each were furnished by 12 of the leading business men of the city.

The order of continuance to next Monday of the preliminary hearing was dismissed at request of the defendants, who desire that the charges be immediately sifted by the grand jury and rumors involving them be set at rest for all time.

Young Looney was killed in a duel in the heart of the city between rival underworld gangs headed by John Looney and Anthony W. Billburg. Two previous grand juries have heard and ignored the evidence contained in the Billburg and Holsapple affidavit on which the four men have been arrested. All four emphatically deny the allegations in the affidavit and assert they have perfect alibis.

FALL INTO ELEVATOR SHAFT FATAL TO 64-YEAR-OLD MAN

Henry Eichelkamp, 64 years old, of 3943 Sherman place, died yesterday of a fractured skull suffered in a fall into an elevator shaft.

He was found Tuesday at 7:45 a. m. at the bottom of the shaft in the factory of the Theodore Barrelmeyer Furniture Co., 2615 North Fifteenth street, where he was employed. He was removed to the Lewright & Whitener sanitarium, 2101 East Grand boulevard, where he died without regaining consciousness. Police are investigating the accident.

MANY NEW ENTRIES PROMISED FOR ST. LOUIS HORSE SHOW

Will Open At Coliseum on Monday Evening, Nov. 24, and Continue Six Days.

The management of the St. Louis Horse Show which opens at the Coliseum Monday evening, Nov. 24, promises a list of entries which will include many horses not shown here in previous years. The show will run for six days.

George H. Calvert of Pittsburg has entered three horses. O. H. Gray of Minneapolis will show Marcheta, a saddler. The Lehman and Hardt horses from Chicago will be on hand again this year as will a good representation of talent from Kansas City.

August A. Busch Jr., president of the local show and Joseph Rankin will attend the American Royal Horse Show at Kansas City this week to select additional entries for the St. Louis show. An effort will be made to avoid the repetition of too many names on the entry lists from year to year.

Among the St. Louis horsemen who will show are Dr. W. C. Gadsby, W. W. Krenning, Elmer Musick, Fred W. Holekamp, J. M. Cronley, George W. Vest and Festus J. Wade, Jr.

FREED OF DRY ACT CHARGE

Fairmont City Man Acquitted After 19 Hours' Deliberation.

The jury in the Federal Court at East St. Louis, hearing a case in which the violation of the Volstead act was charged, deliberated 19 hours in an overnight session before a decision was reached. A verdict was returned yesterday morning before Federal Judge English and the defendant, John Boris of Fairmont City, was found not guilty on three counts, charging possession of a still, maintaining a common nuisance and manufacturing of intoxicating liquor. The case was tried in three hours.

Prohibition agents testified they had raided premises owned by Boris on July 11 last and had found a still in a shack there. Boris testified that he had leased that part of his property to another man.

Prince Arrives, Seeking Work.

YALE DEFE...

Scott Kicks Field Goal For Old Eli

St. Louis Boy Sends Ball Between Goal Posts From 44-Yard Line—Bunnell Goes Over for Touchdown.

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 15. — The Bulldog clipped the Tiger's claws and blasted his dream of a ... three championship this afternoon in the Palmer stadium. Before a colorful crowd of close to ...,000 and under drab skies, Yale unleashed a mighty machine that smashed its way to victory by a score of 10 to 0 and toppled Princeton from the heights it scaled a week ago by crushing Harvard.

Yale's triumph came as an upset almost as startling as Princeton's march trough the Crimson ranks, for the Tiger had entered the fray a favorite. As a result the Blue, now apparently at the top of the stride, will be favored to conquer Harvard next Saturday.

Yale concentrated all her scoring today in the third period, when Harry Scott, St. Louis boy, booted a remarkable drop-kick for a field goal from the 44-yard line and ... giant lineman, scored a touchdown on a forward pass from Kline after Bunnell had put the ball within scoring distance with a brilliant 45-yard run back of a punt. But Yale threatened in every other period and was within three yards of another touchdown, stopping the Tiger line to pieces when the final whistle blew.

Eli Goal Never in Danger.

The Elis not only displayed defensive driving in their attack but put up a brilliant defense in which ... and Captain Lovejoy were the outstanding figures. Ted Williams, Jake Slagle, Charley Weekes and the other backfield aces who had run wild against Harvard, were checked repeatedly.

So thoroughly was Princeton's attack stopped that the Tigers never threatened the Eli goal and, in fact, were only once in Yale territory during the entire game. Yale, however, beat Princeton at the latter's own game, for the Elis ... the jump at the start and held the upper hand throughout the game. The system of calling signals that had bewildered Harvard had no terrors for Yale, which displayed uncanny skill in figuring out the Tiger plays and tackled with deadly sureness. Behind this forward wall, the Blue had a powerful set of backs, with Eddie Cottle, Bunnell and "Ducky" Pond occupying stellar roles.

Tiger Defense Stands Out.

Princeton's stubborn defense, with Bob Beatty and Captain Stout outstanding figures, was the only feature in the Tiger play.

Princeton not only was sluggish in attack, but contributed to her own downfall by loose handling of the ball. It was a fumble by Weeks, which Pond recovered early in the third quarter, that started the Blue on its winning way.

STANFORD TROUNCES MONTANA, 41 TO 3

By the Associated Press.

PALO ALTO, Cal., Nov. 15.—Stanford University defeated the University of Montana, 41 to 3, here this afternoon.

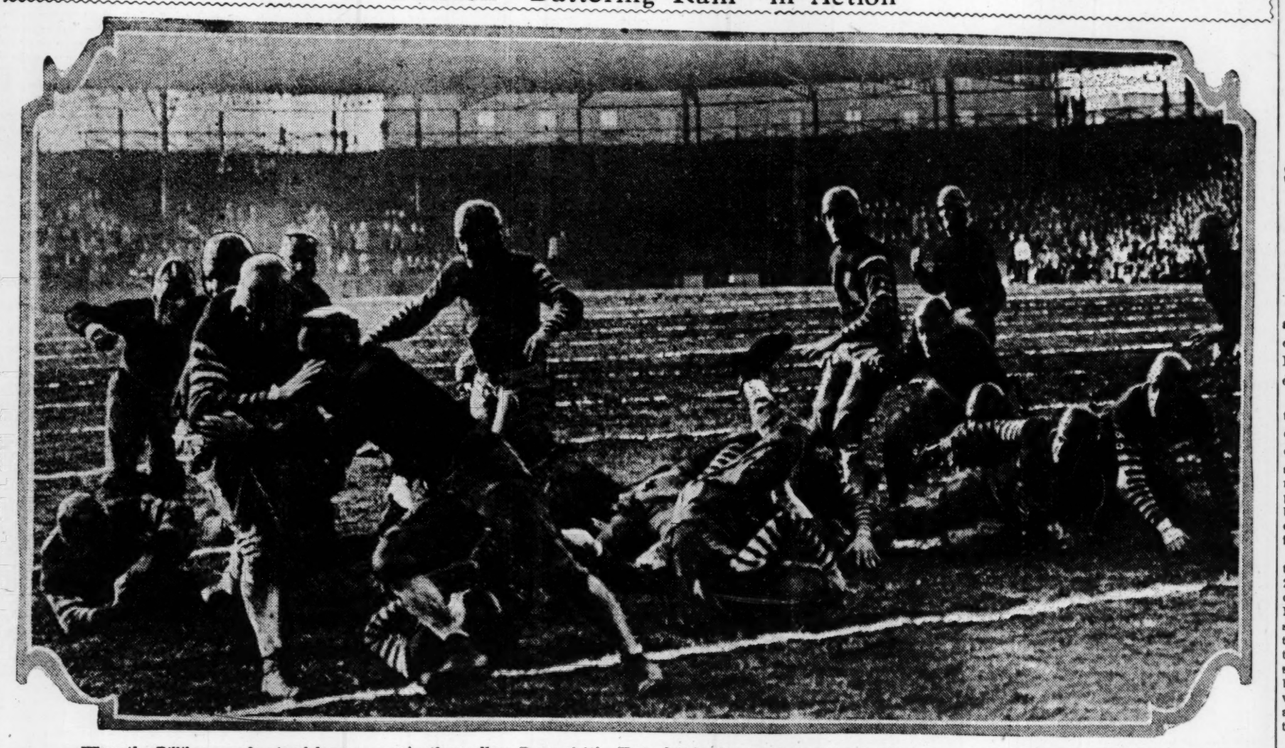
Although beaten overwhelmingly, Montana not only fought hard but played spectacular football. The Grizzlies completed some long-range passes. Once, taking advantage of "breaks," they got the ball on the Stanford eight-yard line. Another time they carried it to the Cardinal team's one-yard line. Both times Stanford showed its stalwart defense by holding for downs.

Billiken "Battering Ram" in Action



When the Billikens need a touchdown or a gain they call on Ramacciotti. Yesterday in the second quarter the Billikens worked the ball into Oglethorpe territory. Oglethorpe was leading, 6 to 0. Ramacciotti was called to carry the ball. He chewed off two yards. They called on him again and this time he smashed through the line for the needed yardage and a touchdown that tied the score. The photographer caught the Battering Ram going over the Oglethorpe line.

Scores by Karst And Stanton Win For the Billikens

Ramacciotti Held to One Touchdown by Oglethorpe —Score Is 18-6.

The St. Louis University football eleven gained another victory yesterday afternoon by defeating Oglethorpe University of Atlanta Ga., in an intersectional contest, 18 to 6. Coach Savage said after the game he rated the visitors one of the best machines the Billikens have faced this season.

Oglethorpe started with a rush. Playing like men striving to uphold the honor of the South, the Petrels went down the field in straight rushes in the first quarter for a touchdown with a display of power that took the Billikens off their feet.

Fullback Kilgore and Capt. Maurer, all-Southern halfback, two of the best players who have appeared here, ran with reckless abandon for repeated first downs. Kilore, a tall, rangy youth, with terrific drive carried the line back several yards with each thrust. Maurer, a tow-headed Georgia cracker, flashed in and out with daring charges and proved exceptionally elusive. The plucky back was given a big ovation when he left the field in the last period.

Ramacciotti Is Stopped.

Coach Savage, who had started the less experienced linemen, threw in his veterans when the Petrels had reached the 20-yard line. The new line did not hold, however, and a touchdown was soon gained.

Except for the first period, the Billiken defense was invulnerable. Schwartz, the Billiken's "iron man" tackle, played one of the best game of his career and repeatedly threw the plunging backs for losses. Eddie Amarel, end, was instrumental in thwarting many plays. O'Toole and Stanton played well together, especially in the last quarter when the visitors, baffled, resorted to a passing game and, O'Toole crowding the ball out of the passer's hand, played it right into tSanton's grasp and the alert end ran 55 yards to a touchdown.

Ramacciotti, St. Louis fullback, failed to star for the first time. The Petrels played him hard and threw him for losses or held him to small gains. Only once did he get away, and then or a 20-yard smash through tackle.

O'Reilly Proves Star.

The burden of the attack fell on Savage's youngsters. All of them, playing their first year of varsity football, responded well and accounted for the bulk of the St. Louis gains. O'Reilly, at quarterback in place of Capt McKenzie, despite his lack of weight, was the outstanding line smasher for time and again a forward broke

Minnesota Stops Grange And Hands Illinois First Defeat of Season, 20 to 7

Big Ten Dope Upset by Gophers — Grange Scores Team's Only Touchdown—Schutte of Minnesota Stars as Ground Gainer.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 15.—Minnesota stopped "Red" Grange today and Illinois' Big Ten Conference championship aspirations when a tumbling, rejuvenated Gopher eleven pounded its way to a 20 to 7 victory over Zuppke's men.

Out of the realm of improbability and rated even more remote by many, the Gophers snatched a victory through the brilliant attack of a backfield whose pace was set by Clarence Schutte, left half, and an all-around defense that was superb.

Only in the first period did things look dark for Minnesota. In that session the much-feared Grange made a 10-yard dash around his left end for Illinois' only touchdown. After that he was only a menace that did not materialize.

Grange Retires After Injury.

Near the close of the third period, an injury when he was tackled forced Grange out of the game. But long before that Minnesota had established its superiority by two touchdowns in the second period and another in the third, and in the final period the Gopher threatened.

In every department it was a new Gopher team that brought about the downfall of Grange and the Illini, and the 30,000 Maroon and Gold rooters went frantic with joy as their cohorts fought the Zuppke men off their feet.

Even at the end of the first half, however, with Minnesota leading, 14 to 7, there seemed a feeling of insecurity among the Gopher followers, for they remembered Illinois' comeback at Chicago a week ago. But when the third period was well under way the Gophers had definitely marked themselves superior.

Star Thrown For Loss.

In net result, aside from his touchdown, Grange was not much help, for while he advanced the ball from scrimmages a total of 24 yards, he was thrown for losses totaling 23 yards. His best run was a 25-yard return of an intercepted forward pass.

Things looked dark for Minnesota at the outset, for on the first Illinois scrimmage, McIlwain dashed 19 yards through right tackle. Then Captain Cox broke through and threw Grange for a seven-yard loss.

It was the fine defense of the Minnesota line that repeatedly stopped the Illini attempts either in line plunging or end running, for through to stop an Illinois play almost before it could get started.

In results as measured in yardage gained from scrimmage and in first downs, the Gophers' superiority is shown, for Minnesota gained 351 yards from scrimmage and lost 16, while Illinois gained 102 yards and lost 32. On first downs, the Gophers led with 15 from scrimmage on straigh plays and one on an Illinois peanlty, while Illinois made three in carrying the ball, two on forward passes and one by a Gopher penalty.

In forward passing, Illinois tried 16, completing six for a total gain of 83 yards, Minnesota intercepted 3 and the others were incomplete. Minnesota tried seven passes, six were incomplete and Grange intercepted the other.

Tribute to the Gopher team, particularly the line, was paid by Coach Bob Zuppke o fthe Illini before he left for Urbana tonight, declaring the Gophers' line "outplayed Illinois just like Chicago did," and "that accounted in a large way for Minnesota's 20 points."

"Minnesota won the game on its

Grange, Injured, Is Done for Season, Physicians State

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 15.

HAROLD "RED" GRANGE, the Illinois backfield star, suffered injuries in today's game with Minnesota that probably will disable him for the rest of this season, attending physicians said tonight.

Tackled for a 10-yard loss late in the third period, Grange's shoulder ligaments were strained an X-ray examination showed, and physicians said the injury "almost certainly" would keep him out of any further games this season.

Physicians at the University of Minnesota Health Service lightly taped up Grange's right arm and he departed for Urbana at 7 p. m. with his teammates. Grange resented intimations that unnecessary roughness on the part of the Gophers caused the mishap.

"I am unaware of any dirty playing on the part of any Minnesota player," he said.

PENNSYLVANIA AND PENN STATE ELEVENS PLAY SCORELESS TIE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15.—Pennsylvania's football eleven entered the ranks of tied but undefeated teams today when it played a scoreless tie with the strong Penn State College squad on Franklin Field. A mixture of rain and sleet fell throughout the game, which made Franklin Field slippery and uncertain and the ball so soggy that it resulted in some fumbling and poor punting.

Al Kruez, Pennsylvania's fullback, tried four times unsuccessfully at placement goals when within striking distance of the State goal line.

Notre Dame Wins Over Nebraska By 34 to 6 Score

Rockne's Regulars Crush Cornhuskers After Second Team Yields Touchdown.

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 15.—The four horsemen of Notre Dame and their teammates ran roughshod over Nebraska in their game here today, burying the Cornhuskers under a 34-to-6 score and avenging the victories Nebraska scored over Coach Rockne's warriors in 1923 and 1922. The defeat was the worst drubbing a Nebraska eleven ever received from Notre Dame. The contest was witnessed by a capacity crowd of 26,000 spectators.

The famous Notre Dame backfield, consisting of Crowley, Layden, Don Miller and Stuldreher, making up the quartette of cavalrymen, swung into action late in the first period, just before Nebraska crashed over with a touchdown, and carrying the fight to the Nebraska territory, smashed the line for big gains and ran around the ends as they pleased, in addition to revealing a sensational forward-passing attack.

Regulars Go in Early.

Coach Rockne followed his practice of starting a team of shock troops composed of second-string players, but when Nebraska pounded the ball dangerously close to Notre Dame's goal Rockne gave the signal for eleven new players to take the field. Layden, Crowley, Miller and Stuhldreher yanked off their sweaters and raced into the game behind a complete new line. From then on the contest was one-sided.

Nebraska's only score was made in the first period when the Cornhuskers played their best and pounded the ball through the Notre Dame second string players. With the ball on the 15-yard line, Layden went into the game to relieve Cerney at fullback for Notre Dame and fumbled a pass from the center on an attempt to punt, the ball rolling to Notre Dame's four-yard line, where Nebraska recovered it. The Notre Dame team was unable to keep Myers from going over after a couple of smashes at the line. Bloodgood failed to kick goal.

Cornhuskers Crushed.

In the second period, Notre Dame started a march that resulted in two touchdowns. A long forward pass, Stuhldreher to Crowley, put the ball on Nebraska's two-yard line, and Stuhldreher went over for a touchdown, Crowley kicking goal. A few minutes later Don Miller cut through cen-

Tigers Rip Holes In Pikeway Line And Gain at Will

State University Eleven Takes Kickoff and Scores Touchdown After Steady March the Length of the Field—Reserves Finish Game.

By Arthur Schneff,

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 15.—The University of Missouri Tigers took a step nearer to the Missouri Valley Conference championship when they clawed to pieces the invading Washington University eleven on Rollins Field here this afternoon. The score was 35 to 0, and was the most decisive victory gained by Missouri over the Pikers since 1908.

Only the courage and determination of the Red and Green warriors kept the powerful Tiger machine from rolling up a larger score. The Pikers fought every minute of the game and at no time played carelessly or indifferently, but they were facing a splendidly equipped team which was superior in every phase of the game.

Late in the second quarter after the Tigers had amassed a lead of 21 points and had definitely clinched the game, an entirely new Missouri eleven took the field. The second-string players added two touchdowns to the score and were then replaced by the original Missouri line-up. The Pikers, crushed but still courageous, made a last, valiant effort and fought the Tigers away from their goal line during the final period.

Won Without "Breaks."

Missouri's victory was well earned and every touchdown the Tigers scored was the result of good playing untainted by "breaks." The Missourians not only displayed the type of defensive playing which has made them famous this year, but uncorked a powerful offense which the Pikers were only occasionally able to stop.

Once the Pikers held Missouri for downs on the two-yard line, but the Washington forwards were unable consistently to check the slashing attack of the Tiger backfield. Missouri gained a total of 351 yards from scrimmage and their overhead game netted them 73 yards, 4 out of 6 passes succeeding. The Pikers gained only 67 yards from scrimmage and completed one forward pass for a one-yard gain in seven attempts. Washington made 5 first downs as Missouri registered 24.

The feature of the Tiger attack was the brilliant performance of Abe Stuber, who relieved Jackson as the Tiger uarterback late in the opening period. He threw three of Missouri's successful passes, but he seemed to specialize in long runs. A 44-yard run, a 17-yard dash, and a 60-yard run for a touchdown were among his achievements.

Missouri Scores Early.

Missouri lost no time getting started and after receiving the opening kick-off, the Tigers marched straight down the field from their 28-yard line to score. Missouri employed straight line plunges, and not one of their gains in that initial march was good for more than 8 yards, but their steady driving was irresistible and culminated at the Piker goal. The Tiger backs took turns at carrying the ball, until Bond registered. Walsh kicked goal. It was at this stage of the game, shortly before the end of the first period, that Stuber replaced Jackson as the Tiger quarterback.

The second quarter was the most disastrous one to the Piker cause, the Tigers scoring three touchdowns in that period. Capt. Bond plunged over for the second touchdown of the game shortly after the period opened. Two long passes, Stuber to Whiteman, which was good for 16 yards, and Whiteman to Faurot, gaining 26 yards, brought the ball to the 4-yard line from where Bond smashed it over. Whiteman kicked goal.

The third touchdown came after Stuber broke away for a brilliant 44-yard run, carrying the ball to the Piker 6-yard line. A pass, Whiteman to Faurot, gave a touchdown and Whiteman kicked the goal.

Shortly later, Stuber again got loose and dashed 60 yards to score a touchdown. It was a great run in which he reversed his field several times, following perfect interference to score. Walsh kicked the goal.

Missouri's final touchdown, and the only one registered during the second half, came from a series of line smashes, featuring the plunges of Thomas, who carried the ball over for the last marker. Stuber then kicked goal.

Floun Equal to Test.

Although the entire Piker team fought bravely against defeat the work of Halfback Sammy Floun was the outstanding element in both attack and defense, until an injury caused him to be carried off the field in the fourth quarter. His tackling behind the line of scrimmage was at times sensational.

Passes of Keefer Feature in March That Leads to Only Touchdown.

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 15.—Harvard's varsity eleven, torn by the Tiger of Princeton a week ago, was beaten back for a third successive year by the Bear of Brown today, 7 to 0. Brown stopped the Crimson rushing attempts, frustrated forward passes and generally held Harvard safe in a manner that left little signs of improvement in the Harvard team.

Brown, beaten in its last three games, rose to scoring power in the closing moments of the second period for the touchdown and point that won the game. A fumble by Stafford gave the ball to Brown, which moved ahead on passes in which Keefer was the principal factor. Klump went in and drove against the Crimson again and went over. Klump also scored the point after touchdown.

FALL RIVER SIGNS TWO PLAYERS FROM IRELAND

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Sam Mark, owner of the Fall River American Soccer League, came home from Europe on the Aquitania Friday night and two star Irish players came with him and were registered for his club with the U. David Duff, a former player for Queen's Island, later went to the Airdieonians (Scottish), from which engagement he comes to this country.

The Shannahan Catholic Club of Philadelphia was second with 46 points and the Glencoe A. C. third with 55 points.

SOLDAN SCORES IN FINAL PERIOD TO DEFEAT CENTRAL, 6 TO 2

Montgomery's Line Bucks Produce Only Touchdown; McKinley and Yeatman Tie

Feature Game Ends With Mid-City Eleven Holding Ball on West Enders' 3-Yard Line — Closing Fray Proves to Be Punting Duel.

By Dent McSkimming.

It is easy to measure a team's offensive strength by its total of touchdowns but it is quite impossible to measure its will to win. On comparative scores, Central High was doomed to take a severe lacing from Soldan yesterday but when the final whistle blew Central was barely nosed out, 6 to 2, and was hammering away just three yards from the Soldan goal line, almost certain to score. Yeatman and McKinley played a 0—0 tie.

Soldan won because it outplayed Central in three quarters of the game. However, Soldan was on the verge of defeat in the last minute of play because Central had unleashed an aerial offensive which knew no stopping. Central scored in the first period when the Soldan fullback, Richardson, was thrown behind his own goal line for a safety. He had missed a bad pass from center when Soldan was preparing to kick. Soldan scored the only touchdown of the game in the fourth period when Montgomery smashed through the line for a three-yard gain.

The showing of Central was a startling surprise. Soldan showed its usual ability to smash through the line for fine gains in mid-field but a tendency to fumble combined with Central's remarkable defense when danger threatened, served to nullify many long marches.

Forward Passes Gain.

Failing in almost all its endeavors to pierce the Soldan line, Central in the fourth quarter turned to forward passes as the only remaining means of advancing the ball.

Gaining possession of the ball on her own 18-yard line when Montgomery of Soldan fumbled, Central opened a series of passes which advanced the ball 65 yards to Soldan's 15-yard line, in the shadow of the goal. Here Soldan held and Central lost the ball on downs, trying a forward pass on the fourth down.

Then came a break which all but cost Soldan the sweets of victory. With Central fighting savagely for a score, it appeared logical that Soldan would kick on the very first down, taking no chances. However, smashes at the line were attempted instead and after failing to gain, an end run was tried from kick formation. Montgomery carried the ball, and he was smothered far behind the line of scrimmage for a loss. Central thus unexpectedly obtained possession of the ball and was given a chance to score which it should not have obtained.

Returning imediately to the passes which had proved so successful, Hunt tossed to Cameron who was downed on Soldan's 2-yard line. Before the team could line up, the final whistle sounded, ending a bitterly contested match.

Most of the passes which figured in the Central advance were from Hunt to Cameron or Crystal. The first successful pass in the long march was somewhat lucky in that a Soldan man partly intercepted the toss and the ball bounced into Crystal's arms. Hunt's punting, although not as impressive as usual, was a big factor in the protection of Central's goal line.

In putting over the winning touchdown, Soldan played fine football, Montgomery and Horwitz doing the brunt of the plunging and Montgomery carrying the ball over on a short buck.

The second game found Yeatman and McKinley very evenly matched with Smith starring in the backfield for Yeatman and Mess and Deffaa making startling plays for McKinley. Both lines were sturdy and there were but few real opportunities to score touchdowns.

Yeatman had probably the best chance to win the game when Smith, in the fourth quarter, in a series of plunges and an end run advanced to McKinley's 10-yard line. McKinley held and piled up every Yeatman thrust. No attempt was made by Yeatman to score with a field goal and the ball was lost on downs.

Yeatman players went through the game with bare legs.

A crowd of about 4000 persons watched the game. The playing surface at Francis Field was wet and slippery, making long runs difficult.

Girl cheer leaders directed the Yeatman cheering.

ter for 18 yards, after starting an end run, and went over for a touchdown. Crowley added the extra point.

Notre Dame also added a brace of touchdowns in the third period. Stuhldreher threw a 15-yard pass to Don Miller, who raced 65 yards for a touchdown after shaking off the Nebraska tacklers. Crowley kicked goal. A few seconds later Crowley took a short pass from Stuhldreher and sprinted across for a marker after a run of 18 yards.

Crowley added another point by kicking goal.

Layden, the big Notre Dame fullback, smashed over for Notre Dame's final marker in the fourth period, but Crowley failed at his try for goal.

The superiority of the Notre Dame team is revealed in the statistics which show Rockne's warriors made 19 first downs as against one first down for Nebraska. Ray Karst put up his best performance of the season and thrilled the crowd in the third quarter by getting loose on an off-tackle play and dashing 46 yards for the Billikens' second touchdown. Karst, one of the fastest men on the St. Louis squad, was overhauled 15 yards from the goal by Maurer, who threw him to the ground. Likely Derby Favorite

"No Team in the Country Could Have Won From Notre Dame," Rockne Says

"Eleven Gave All It Had Against Nebraska and 'Right Mental Attitude' Decided Contest," Coach Writes.

By Knute Rockne.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 15.—Nebraska got just about all Notre Dame had today when my eleven smeared them, 34 to 6. We haven't much more than we showed today and that probably was a plenty.

It was one of the hardest football games I have ever seen. All of us have seen two powerful teams battling with every ounce of strength at their command, but for sheer man-for-man smashing it topped them all.

Notre Dame was out for revenge for the last two beatings Nebraska had dealt us. Both years we were fairly well on our way to championship rating when Dawson's men intervened. Notre Dame this year was determined that such an upset should not happen again. Nebraska, our "Jinx," as the Cornhuskers are called, were just as determined that they could halt us for the third time. This condition, added to the fact that neither team seems to have much love for the other, brought on an unusual condition.

Yet it was a clean football game. The boys battered away at each other until the final whistle was blown. Probably there was some unnecessary roughness, but it was spontaneous because both Dawson and I instructed the men to keep their heads.

Praise for Stuhldreher.

I am now certain that a good forward passing attack is a better game to employ than any other kind. This was my plan today and it worked to perfection.

On our early running attacks we were able only to gain moderately. When Stuhldreher uncorked a few successful forward passes, Nebraska's doom was sealed right there, for it opened the line wide and allowed our backs to smash through for substantial gains.

Quarterback Stuhldreher timed our forward passes perfectly. When Dawson's line would show a stretch of power, a forward pass would serve the purpose of unsettling Nebraska's linemen. Finally Stuhldreher operated so that the entire Nebraska team was kept guessing.

Notre Dame had today what I call "the right mental attitude." They went into the game convinced that they couldn't be beaten. Further, they knew that I wouldn't talk to them if they didn't show the stuff I knew they have. With few exceptions, they played close to perfect football.

Nebraska Scouting Useless.

I am afraid that the scouting plan which is generally used received a setback today. I know that Nebraska has had scouts following us since the opening of the season to solve our forward passing attack. In every game we have used the same plays on the Stuhldreher-to-Miller and Stuhldreher-to-Crowley pass combinations, yet Nebraska was unable to do much damage to them. Still, a lot of good information can be learned in scouting and many times it can be used to advantage.

Nebraska got the break on us last year and this turned them into a lot of fighting demons. Today, at the start of the game, a bad pass which Layden was unable to handle for a punt gave the Cornhuskers the ball on our four-yard line. The first team was sent in, but Nebraska scored a line smash. With this advantage, Nebraska's chances looked very good.

"The Gang" Cuts Loose.

Then the "mental edge" of our team, plus the great work of Stuhldreher, Crowley, Miller and Layden, was flashed. Crowley and Miller went swinging out and around the ends for big gains. Stuhldreher was shooting his forwards dead to the mark and Layden was doing a bit of denting in the line. In other words, the gang was loose. They brought in five touchdowns.

The open game figured largely in our scoring. When we played straight football the Nebraska line held.

Conspicuous in the Cornhuskers' play was Ed Weir, the captain, who is one of the greatest tackles I have ever seen.

But Notre Dame was right today, and I don't believe a team in the country could have beaten us.

Millers Oppose Scullins Today

First Place in Soccer League at Stake in Feature. Contest.

For the first time since the opening of the season, there is prospect of a division of leadership in the St. Louis Soccer League race today, when the Scullins oppose the Ben Millers in the first game of the double-header at St. Louis University Field. If the Scullins win from Foley's youngsters, the two clubs will tie for the league lead. In the second game, Harry Ratican's team will meet the Vespers, city champions. The first game is scheduled to start at 2:15 p. m. and the halves will be of 35 minutes' duration, instead of 30 minutes as heretofore.

In addition to the desire to climb in the league race, the players who participate today will be stirred by another incentive. The choice of teams which will oppose the strong Indiana Flooring Co. team of New York when it appears here for two exhibition games on Nov. 29 and 30 will rest largely on the showing made by the players in the games today and next Sunday. It has been virtually decided that the team which holds first place after next Sunday's games will be granted the Nov. 30 date and the team in second place will meet the invaders on Saturday, Nov. 29. In each case, however, a few star players of the third and fourth place clubs will be inducted into service.

The Indiana team, holding second place in the American Soccer League, is one of the finest combinations ever assembled in America.

SOUTHERN METHODIST AND BAYLOR TIE, 7-7

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., Nov. 15.—Baylor and Southern Methodist University remained undefeated in the Southwestern Conference football game today. The final score was: S. M. U., 7; Baylor, 7. The Mustangs started the scoring in the first period with a touchdown and kicking goal. Baylor early in the second period tied the score by making a touchdown and kicking goal. The third and fourth periods were much the same, each side resorting to line plunges, passes and punting, but the only result was that the ball was carried back and forth across the field.

Williams Harriers Win.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Nov. 15—The harriers of Williams College ran away with the New England cross-country sprint today. Maine was second and New Hampshire with Holy Cross fourth. George Lermond of Boston College, Olympic running star, was the individual winner.

Wagners 44, C. of C. 13.

The Wagners defeated the Junior Chamber of Commerce at basketball, 44-13. The work of Quigley featured the game, the Wagner forward scoring 19 points. Phillips and Vernon also played well. Schiller and Smith did the best work for the Juniors.

Unbeaten Drake Team Wins Over Aggies, 7 to 6

Umpire's Decision Gives Missouri Valley Leaders Victory in Hard-Fought Game.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MANHATTAN, Kan., Nov. 15.—The outcome of the Drake-Kansas Aggie football game here this afternoon hinged on the decision of Umpire Denney as to whether or not Anderson, Aggie safety, touched a Drake punt. The official ruled that Anderson had touched the ball and thereby hangs a Bulldog victory, 7 points to 6.

The punt was made late in the first period. The ball dropped in front of Anderson and took a freak hop. He lunged at it, but it rolled free and was picked up by Lingenfelter, Drake end, who was charging down the field under the kick. Lingenfelter trotted across the goal line from the Aggie 30-yard line, where he had picked up the loose ball.

Anderson protested that he had not touched the ball as he dived at it, but the official, guided perhaps by the circumstantial evidence of the fact that Anderson made an attempt to tackle Lingenfelter when he picked up the ball, decided after a conference of officials and players to allow the touchdown. Capt. Sam Orebaugh, Drake quarterback, kicked goal for the extra point which proved to be the margin of victory.

The Aggies, fighting desperately, came back in the second period and in a 70-yard march down the field, the big feature of which was a 45-yard forward pass, Smith to Doolan, scored a touchdown early in the second quarter. Doolen placed the ball on the Drake 14-yard line by a fine run after he took the pass. Two line bucks gave the Aggies a first down at the four-yard mark and Smith smashed through the Drake left tackle for the touchdown.

McGee's kick struck an upright and bounded off at the wrong side, failing to count the tieing point.

The final two periods were spectacular exhibitions of football played for the most part between the 30-yard lines. Orebaugh, Drake captain and quarterback, was the steller performer of the half. He made a run of 45 yards starting from an off tackle formation at his own eight-yard line. He was prevented from scoring only by Anderson's vicious tackle. The Aggie safety man was the only player between Orebaugh and the goal line.

Smith, Aggie left halfback, was the most consistent ground gainer for the Wildcats.

Ambelong and Armstrong, Drake guards, were powerful on defense, stopping all attempts at the center of the line in the last half and breaking up off tackle sweeps before they got started.

Kansas Shows Power, Beating Sooners, 20-0.

By the Associated Press.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Nov. 15.—Showing powerful driving ability for the first time this season, the Kansas University football team defeated Oklahoma, 20 to 0, in their annual battle here this afternoon. Nearly all the game was played in Oklahoma territory. The Oklahomans showed flashes of power, opening up an effective passing game at times but could not sustain their attacks long enough to score. The Kansas scoring began in the first quarter when Hodges, Jayhawk quarterback, raced five yards to the goal line after receiving a seven-yard pass from Zuber. Burt kicked goal.

In the second period Burt made a touchdown with a one-yard plunge over the line. Baker's kick for added point was blocked. Burt scored again in the third quarter when he took a short pass from Zuber and crossed the line and kicked goal for the added point. The final period was scoreless, the Oklahomans vainly trying to win across the Kansas goal line by aerial attacks which were broken up near the Kansas goal.

In the Realm Of Bird Dogs

An English-Bred Dog Bests American-Bred Entries in Field Trials.

By A. F. Hochwalt.

A FIELD trial record was broken at Madison, Ind., when the imported English setter, Lingfield Loyal, won the the amateur all-age stake of the Southern Ohio field trials, on Oct. 31. Not in 25 years has a dog imported from England or any of the European countries been able to compete successfully against our American-bred bird dogs and in accomplishing this feat, Lingfield Loyal has attracted the attention of the entire field trial world, which embraces, not only the United States and Canada, but Great Britain and Continental Europe.

By this it is not meant that they do not breed setters and pointers of as high quality in other countries as they do in the United States, but the general opinion has always been that, because dogs are broken differently on the other side of the Atlantic than they are over here, then cannot compete under the conditions they are obliged to face in American trials. Lingfield Loyal has proved to be an exception, but not before he had had a long series of training in the South.

Imported by W. H. Chatfield.

Two years ago, W. H. Chatfield of Cincinnati, O., went to England for the ostensible purpose of obtaining a good setter of new blood lines. After looking over many kennels and inspecting the dogs on many well-known English country estates, he settled upon Lingfield Loyal, which he found in the kennels of Herbert Mitchell of Bradford, England, and brought him back to America with him. Like all other English dogs, Lingfield Loyal was overbroken. He obeyed perfectly, he dropped to wing, shot or signal, but he had very little range. The reason for this was that he was trained to hunt the small fields and inclosures of his own country and not the great limitless prairies of the West of the open sedge fields or the piney woods of the South.

Surprise at Field Finals.

Those who visited Madison to see the 24 dogs compete in the Southern Ohio field trials got a surprise. Lingfield Loyal not only went as wide as any dog in the stake, but he hunted with the same boldness and good judgment. Always a lofty and high-headed dog in action, he was all the more impressive as he flitted out over those stubble fields, pastures and meadows and then when he flashed into one of the most spectacular points seen during the trials, the gallery was unanimous that here was one English dog which was able to compete without home-bred field trial winners. Lingfield Loyal won that stake with a wide margin to spare. The judges did not even consider a second series necessary. His work was so snappy and clean-cut that they gave him first on the strength of his first heat.

The man who rebroke Lingfield Loyal is J. M. Avent, the veteran handler from Hickory Valley, Tenn. Early last summer he took him to the prairies. There he trained him on prairie chickens. Loyal took to the prairie bird as he did to the grouse of the moors of Scotland. He handled them perfectly, but when the time came for the prairie trials he was out of shape and was only started in one stake. At Madison, however, he was in his best form and he ran a race that will long be remembered by those who saw it.

Grinnell Rallies to Defeat Ames, 14-13.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GRINNELL, Ia., Nov. 15.—Grinnell College upset the "dope" here this afternoon and by a desperate last quarter rally won from Iowa State College, 14 to 12. Ames completely outplayed Grinnell in the first half of the game and the Pioneers just as completely outplayed Iowa tSate in the second.

Iowa State opened a driving attack headed by the 135-pound quarterback J. Behm. He made two long runs in rapid succession that put the ball in scoring distance. Wingert shoved the first touchdown over after the Grinnell had held for two downs. A fake pass from Roberts to Wingert gave Ames the second touchdown. Roberts failed to kick the first goal, but J. Behm kicked the second one.

The first Grinnell touchdown came as a result of J. Behm fumbling one of Moran's high punts. He called for a fair catch but with the two Grinnell ends thundering down the field, fumbled and the Grinnell recovered. Sweet and Moran then carried the ball over the goal line.

Morgan Taylor, 440-yard low hurdle world's record holder, was the hero of the second touchdown. He was on the side lines most of the game and Coach Hyland sent him into the game. On the very first play Taylor grabbed a forward pass, giving Grinnell the ball on the Ames' 10-yard line. Sweet went over for the touchdown and Moran added the extra point.

National Clay Court Meet Big Help to Game

Increased Interest Noted Within Week of Playing of Championship Last July.

LOCAL PLAYERS STAR

Work of Norton, Brown and Drewes Highlights of Season —Interclub Play Resumed.

By Davison Obear.

The 1924 tennis season has been the greatest in the history of the game in St. Louis, according to a survey of the various activities conducted by clubs and associations in the district. Despite the unusually large amount of rainy weather in the spring and fall a record number of tournaments were completed, surpassing the 1923 season by a substantial margin.

More than 45 tournaments were played during the season just closed. There were good entry lists in the major events but the increase was more marked in the various club tournaments. In all events the percentage of decrease was very small, indicating keen interest among the players.

Important features of the 1924 season were the following: National Clay Court championship; inter-club tournament for the Wertheim cup and the record of St. Louis players in important championships. Another feature was the interest shown by the junior players, more than 200 taking part in the district championship.

Interest Increased by Meet.

The fourteenth annual National Clay Court tournament played on the courts of the Triple A Club in Forest Park during the week of July 7 served as a stimulus to local tennis enthusiasts. Within a week after the completion of this event interest became greater and continued until late in October.

Players from 26 cities in the United States took part in the Clay Court event. Five of the first 10 national ranking players were entered, as well as champions from almost every organized section in the country. William T. Tilden, national champion, won the singles title, while the doubles event was won by Robert and Howard Kinsey of San Francisco, native-born Louisians.

Interclub Play Resumed.

Interclub play was resumed after a lapse of five years. A very attractive silver trophy was presented by Joseph Werner, former Washington University tennis captain and No. 6 in the St. Louis ranking. Twelve teams took part in the interclub tournament. The Triple A players won the privatee club division by defeating the Forest Park Tennis Club team in the finals. The match. O'Fallon Park with one exception, was won by the Forest Park players in the final play-off, the Triple A team being the champions of the municipal division. The play-off, the Triple A team was changed from center to left wing for one year by defeating the O'Fallon Park players, 3 to 2. Some of the local players entered important tournaments in other cities, establishing good records. Brian I. C. Norton reached the semifinal round of the National Clay Court championship and several other events. Wray Brown made a good showing in the Clay Court event, forcing Clarence J. Griffin, the Californian, to a five-set battle. He reached the third round of the National singles, defeating S. H. Voshell and losing to William M. Johnston. Brown also defeated Tilden to a 6—4, 6—4 score while the Illinois State, which Tilden represented was one of his hardest matches during the season.

Norton and Brown Star.

Norton and Brown defeated such strong teams as Snodgrass and Babcock of California and Schlesinger and Kalms, the Australians, in doubles events. They will probably receive a high ranking as a doubles team this year.

The Missouri Valley championships for men were captured by St. Louis players. Wray Brown won in the singles and, with his brother, Woodward, the doubles. Mrs. Mellicent Endicott Bachr and Karl Kammann won the ladies titles in the Tri-State event at Burlington, Ia., while Teddy Herman of East St. Louis won the championship of Cornell University.

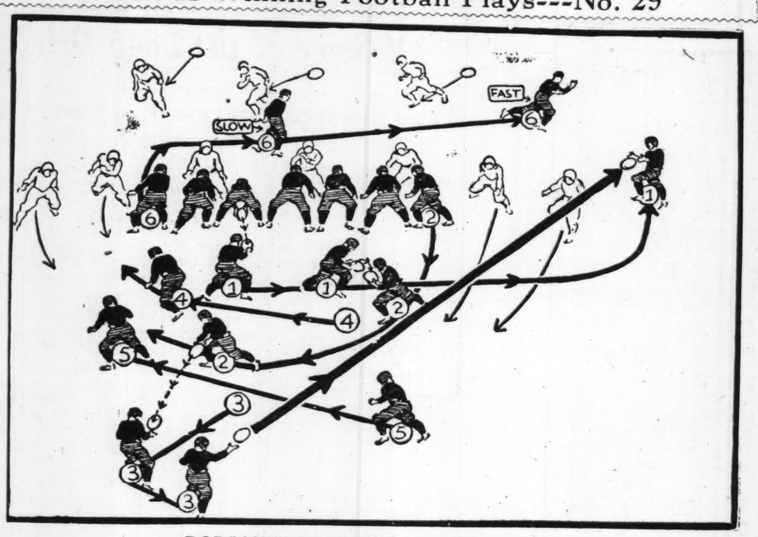
Theodore R. Drewes, former holder of many local titles, upheld the honor of St. Louis in the National Municipal event in Detroit. He won the singles and was runner-up with Ted Heuermann in the doubles event.

Under the leadership of Martin Reid, chairman of the District Tournament Committee, the junior center tournaments were very successful. Eight preliminary divisions were formed with a record entry of more than 200 players. The winners of each division took part in the district championship. Joe Reid with the junior doubles and, with Charles Sigoloff, captured the doubles. Robert Lunt, a cousin of the Kinsey brothers, national doubles champions, won the boys' singles. These three players were sent to Chicago for the National junior championships.

Good Season for Clubs.

A number of the private clubs enjoyed a good season. The Shell Recreation Club, formerly the Rox Club, was organized and had an entry of 65 in the singles event of its first tournament. This club was admitted to membership in the St. Louis District Tennis Association. The Forest Hills Tennis Club in St. Louis County became better organized during the season. The St. Louis district event for women was held on the Forest Hills courts, while the Junior Chamber of Commerce played a majority of matches there.

Famous Winning Football Plays---No. 29



DOBSON'S RICHMOND COLLEGE PASS.

THIS play by Coach Frank Dobson of Richmond College requires considerable handling of the ball and is worked against the defensive end and tackle on the strong side of the line. If these two players become fooled and expose their area the formation should prove a sure ground gainer.

Left end, No. 6, should go down slowly, so that he does not show himself too soon. He should only go fast as forward pass to quarterback is made, so that he can either run between defensive halfback and quarterback to screen the pass, or interfere after quarterback has caught it.

Center passes direct to No. 1, who runs to right and passes to right end, No. 2, who comes back from his position and runs to the left behind Nos. 4 and 5.

No. 2 passes to No. 3, who watches his chance to pass to No. 1, who has gone far out to right end for the ball.

KIRKWOOD ELEVEN BEATS GRANITE CITY

Kirkwood High School's football team journeyed to Granite City and handed the Granite Cityans a 10-to-3 beating.

The game was played on a muddy field which made the ball hard to handle. Kirkwood's scores came in the third quarter when Weber fell on a blocked kick behind the goal line. Kinyon, left halfback, scored the other three points on a drop kick. King, quarterback for Granite City and who weighs only 97 pounds, sent a dropkick over the bars in the first quarter for the Illinoisans' only score. Kinyon starred for the county lads.

Curley's Field Goal Wins for Chicago, 3 to 0

Victory Over Northwestern Leaves Maroons Only Unbeaten Team in Big 10.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—The Chicago Maroons that tied Illinois and entered the game an overwhelming favorite was barely able to nose out a 3-to-0 victory over Northwestern University here today in a Western Conference football game.

Chicago's victory, combined with the defeat of Illinois by Minnesota, placed the Maroons in the lead in the big ten race. Chicago, to win the title, has yet to overcome Wisconsin.

In today's game Ralph Baker, fleet Purple halfback, played a sensational game, while Northwestern's forward wall succeeded in holding McCarthy, the Maroon's fullback. Chicago is now the only unbeaten team in the Big Ten title race.

Chicago's score came in the final period, when Curley was injected into the game and drop-kicked from the 27-yard line.

After playing on virtually even terms in the first half, during which Northwestern had a slight edge, the Purple came back in the third period and swept Chicago off its feet and marched to the shadow of Chicago's goal, where Baker's drop kick missed by inches.

Chicago scored most of its 17 first downs in the last period, when Northwestern was in possession of the ball only twice.

Baker's punt averaged 60 yards. Chicago's kicks averaged 40 yards.

Michigan Overcomes Ohio's Lead and Wins, 16 to 6.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 15.—An infuriated Wolverine lashed into fierceness by its Ohio State keeper, who had whipped and subdued it into submission for three periods, faced a starking 6-to-0 defeat as the last period began, when with all its cunning and fighting inheritance, it snarled, scratched, passed, escaped and finally outran its keeper and early master, piling up 16 points. Tonight it rests in its far northern retreat, nursing without malice, the bruises it sustained in its 16-to-0 victory over Ohio State's eleven here today. The classic contest was waged before a throng of 68,284 spectators, including 15,000 Michigan fans that all but filled the huge Ohoi Stadium to capacity. It was the largest crowd that saw a football game anywhere today and came within 5000 of setting a new Western Conference attendance record.

Ohio State, the early master, caught its visitor from the North in an unaccilmated state at the very opening of the game, scoring a touchdown within one minute after the first kick-off. A line play, a 22-yard end run by Hunt, and a forward pass, one of those that always make a Coach Wilce team feared, was good for 62 yards, during which Cunningham outsprinted the agile North men.

There was no more scoring in this half, although the Wolverines, ever anxious to knot the score, tried 10 passes within Ohio State's 35-yard line, all of them failing. Six times the receiver, with a clear field ahead of him, dropped the oval.

Itching to outsmart its keeper, the Wolverine tore at the Ohio State line and had the ball on the six-yard line when the third period ended. Two more plays and Coach Little's machine had the upper hand, never to be headed. Marion plunged through for the counter and Rockwell kicked goal. Within a few more minutes, the early master, weakening under the Wolverine's continuous clawing, had three more points piled up against him, Rockwell's beautiful place kick traveling true from the 40-yard line. Still unsatisfied, the Wolverine plunged for another touchdown, Rockwell making it from the four-yard line, but failed to add an extra point.

Parkin Stars as Iowa Defeats Wisconsin, 21—7.

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 15.—Iowa ruined Wisconsin's home-coming here today, 21 to 7. The chief killjoys for the Cardinals were Capt. Parkin, Scantlebury, Hancock and Graham.

Parkin led the attack of the Hawkeyes with a 63-yard run in the second period which paved the way for Iowa's first touchdown. Doyle Harmon overtook the speeding Iowa captain, downing him on the one-yard line. Scantlebury went over on the second try and Hancock added a point after with a place kick.

Iowa scored again in the second half when Parkin returned a Wisconsin punt 34 yards to Wisconsin's 30-yard line. The Wisconsin line faltered and an attack ended in a 24-yard run by Parkin for a touchdown. Hancock again kicked goal. Again in the last minute of play Parkin raced 17 yards for a touchdown and Hancock added the point.

SECOND ROUND OF ST. LOUIS U. SOCCER TOURNAMENT TODAY

The second round of the inter-department soccer tournament at St. Louis University, which was begun last week, will be played this morning at the Athletic Field, Grand and Laclede, when the Dental School squad meets the Commerce and Finance eleven and the Arts and Sciences outfit oppose the Law department.

The Law men are leading the league by virtue of a default victory over the Pre-Medics last Sunday and the Arts and Commerce and the Finance elevens are tied for second place by reason of their 1-1 tie. The Dents play their first game today and by next week the Medics will have a squad in the field.

The league was inaugurated in the hope of developing a varsity soccer eleven for next year. The Student Conclave, student governing body, is sponsoring the project and has put up a silver trophy which will be the property of the first team that wins the race three times. The Rev. T. J. Schulte, faculty representative on the Athletic Board, believes that by next fall or two years hence, at most, a Billiken soccer team will be playing the numerous squads around the city and taking on a few Eastern schools in addition. There is no varsity soccer team in this vicinity.

Centenary College Defeats Boston Eleven, 10 to 9

80-Yard Run by Ferrall Gives McMillin's Team Victory by 1-Point Margin.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Nov. 15.—By the narrow margin of one point the Centenary College Gentlemen defeated the Boston College Eagles, 10 to 9, here this afternoon before 12,000 persons. Bo McMillin's prophecy that his second visit to Boston with Centenary would be productive of victory, just as it was when he brought the Centre Colonels here against Harvard for the second time, was realized.

The Gentlemen played a brilliant, heady, fighting game. After gaining a three-point advantage on a place kick from the field by Place, the quarterback, a fumble of a punt by the signal caller put the ball on Centenary's 15-yard line. The Eagles bucked it over in three plays, Ward taking it across on an end run for five yards. Darling place kicked for the extra point. All this occurred in the first period.

Ferrall Scores.

The second period was scoreless. In the third period, shortly after the kick-off, it was Centenary's ball on her 20-yard line on a touchback. "Mexico" Ferrall broke through the Boston College line, and then, dodging th escondary defense, dashed 80 yards for a touchdown. Weaver place kicked for the extra point.

The safety came with one minute to play in the fourth period. It was Centenary's ball on her 18-yard line, with Ferrall, the star punter, on the side lines injured. White carried the ball after receiving from the center back across his own goal line for a safety against his own team. It was good strategy, for the Eagles had already blocked two kicks.

The lineup:

Centenary	Position.	Boston. College
Weaver (Capt.)	L. E.	Oneil
Wafer	L. T.	Holden
Pierson	L. G.	McManus
Rebsamen	C.	Doyle
Hogue	R. G.	Donahue
Maddox	R. T.	Kozlowski (Capt.)
Hubbard	R. E.	O'Connell
Place	Q. B.	McKenny
Ferrall	L. H.	W. Cronin
White	R. H.	Ward
Flemiken	F. B.	Darling

Officials: Referee—Thorpe (De Lasalle); Umpire—Land (Navy). Head Linesman—Crowley (Bowdoin). Field Judge—Fisher (Columbia).

Time of periods, 15 minutes. Scoring touchdowns—Ward, Ferrall. Goals from touchdowns—Darling (by place kick), Weaver (by place kick). Place kick (from field) place. Safety—Boston College 1.

ALTAWOOD SPLASHES WAY TO VICTORY IN PIMLICO CUP RAC

Widener's Colt Beats Aga Khan In Snow Storm

Sunsini Finishes Third, While My Own, Only Other Starter, Is Distanced.

RACE WORTH $7950

Another Large Crowd Witnesses the Final Day's Card at Maryland Track.

By G. F. T. Ryall,
Of the New York World Sport Staff.

PIMLICO, Md., Nov. 15.—Splashing his way over a track deep in mud and snow, Altawood won the Pimlico cup at two miles and a quarter here today.

Up in the snow-covered clubhouse stand, J. E. Widener, watched the race well pleased that at last he had a real cup horse. There is no doubt that Altawood now takes his place with the 3-year-olds of the year. The winner of the Bowie Handicap picked up top weight of 114 pounds and after waiting behind the pace for a mile and a half moved up smoothly and strongly to win going away from Aga Khan, winner of the Lawrence realization, by three lengths. Sunsini was third five lengths behind, 15 lengths in front of My Own the other starter.

Snow fell during most of the closing day of the Pimlico meeting but it cleared off enough to give the crowd a fairly clear view of the running of the cup.

Sunsini Is First Away.

Sunsini was first away of the four and passing the stand for the first time he led Aga Khan by open daylight. My Own was well up third and Altawood five lengths behind.

It was thought that when the rain and snow came that My Own would not be a starter, but Admiral Cary T. Grayson decided he would give his horse a chance in the heavy going even though it always was understood that the son of King James could not, as the trainers say, run a lick in the mud, so, it was surprising to see My Own move up turning into the back stretch the first time and force the pace. Then, for a turn of the field Sunsini led with My Own well up, though Babin had him way out in the middle of the track of the better going.

Mud on fast track makes no difference to Altawood. He plodded along in the deep going. Parke refrring to save ground, satisfied that his mount was sturdy enough to give My Own a year, Aga Khan one pound and Sunsini a year and five pounds and a beating. At the end of a mile and a half, Aga Khan began to move up and My Own began to tire, but Sunsini still hung on gamely in front. Rounding the turn for home the last time, Altawood began to close up and he caught the leaders approaching the quarter pole. Then, for a sixteenth of a mile, he ran head with Sunsini and Aga Khan. The Lilane stable gelding was through when they straightened out, but Aga Khan hung on till the eighth pole, and to the cheers of the crowd Altawood drew away.

Altawood Wins $7950.

By winning today Altawood paid $7950 more on his purchase price of $30,000. There was money for all the starters and their trainers and Ham Keene, trainer of the winner, received the lion's share of $1500. Aga Khan's second money was $2000 and Jim Fitzsimmons got $500 as trainer. Third money to Sunsini was $1000 and Frank Bray got $300, while fourth money to My Own was $500 and W. Brooks got $200 for saddling him. The time for cup, 3.57, was good considering the track. The fractional times were :25, :51 3-5, 1:17 2-5, 1:44, 2:11, 2:38, 3:05, 3:30 3-5, 3:57.

Few horses this season have shown quite as startling form reversals as the weather. Two days ago it was so warm that light overcoats were unnecessary, but the light rain early in the morning turned to snow and by the time the gates of the track were opened the infield was white with Maryland's first snowfall of the season. Over on the backstretch the roofs of the stables looked like a Christmas setting. When they raised the mutuel pay-off board for the first race, they had to sweep off the snow on it. The visibility was low all afternoon and when the fields turned out of the homestretch they were just shapes of horses, the colors indistinguishable except to those with powerful binoculars.

Coltletti Is Last.

It was a day of racing sort that the builders of the Maryland Jockey Club have always wanted, with no race less than a mile and no purse less than $1000.

The crowd, especially that in the clubhouse, was as large as at any big day at the meeting.

Jim Milton got quite a raising from the crowd when he lined up the field for the start at the mile and 70-yard pole instead of at the mile and a sixteenth, the proper distance for the race.

Coltiletti, who rode Advocate in the third race, evidently got lost in the snowstorm. Going into the f-g he was three lenghts in front of his field on Advocate, but when they came out again he was last.

Minnesota Stopped This Star and Won

"Red" Grange, Illinois halfback, the greatest individual football star in America this season, is shown skirting his left end and eluding two would-be tacklers in the recent game againt Chicago U, when Grange scored three touchdowns. The peculiar swaying of his body which enables him to dodge tacklers is clearly shown in the picture. Yesterday, Minnesota halted Grange, using him so badly that he left the game in the third quarter.

St. Louis U. Cards 12 Basket Games

Team Still Without a Floor for Practice—Several Dates Open.

The incomplete 1924-1925 basketball schedule of St. Louis University has been announced. It includes games with many opponents of last season and calls for one trip through Indiana and Illinois in which three contests will be played, a jaunt to Kansas City and another to Rolla.

There are several open dates for which games are being sought. No floor has been engaged for practice and the authorities are casting about for a convenient place. The Armory again is under consideration.

The schedule follows:

Dec. 19. Indiana Central Normal at Danville, Ind.

Dec. 20, Wabash at Crawfordsville, Ind., or Rose Polytechnic at Terre Haute.

Jan. 7, St Viator College, at Bourbonnais, Ill.

Jan. 10, Hanover College, at home.

Jan. 17, Concordia Seminary, at home.

Jan. 24, Rockhurst College, at home.

Jan. 31, Rolla, at home.

Feb. 3, St. Viator College, at home.

Feb. 4, Indiana Central Normal, at home.

Feb. 12, Rolla, at Rolla.

Feb. 21, Concordia, at Concordia.

Feb. 27, Rockhurst College, at Kansas City.

INTERNATIONAL BOXING TOURNAMENT TO BE HELD IN SWEDEN IN APRIL

By the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 15.—European amateur boxing titles in six classes will be fought for at Stockholm in April, 1925. The International Boxing Federation authorized Sweden to hold this fisticuff carnival after England had declined a similar invitation tendered to her, as the mother of boxing during the Olympic games at Paris.

Teams are expected to enter the championships from Great Britain, France, Belgium, Denmark, Norway and Italy.

In Sweden boxing is a comparatively young sport, but it is among the most popular. It was not until after the war that the sport was organized in this country, but 150 clubs already belong to the national governing body. Most of them have British or Danish trainers.

St. Louis U. High Tied by Western

Billiken Juniors Held for Downs on 2-Inch Line—Score 0—0.

St. Louis University High School's football machine was yesterday held to a scoreless tie by Western Military Academy, even though twice they had the ball where a good plunge would mean a touchdown. The game, played at Alton, was featured by the forward passing of the Billiken Juniors, and by the stubborn defense displayed by the husky Cadets whenever the Blue and White threatened to score.

Starting the second half, the Billiken Juniors carried the ball to within Alton's 20-yard line, only to lose it on downs.

In the fourth quarter, St. Louis was held for downs on the Western 8-yard line and Boggiano kicked fifty-five yards. Schaefer caught a long pass that netted St Louis thirty yards. Another pass to Prendergast, now playing quarter for St. Louis, gave them the ball on Western's 12-yard line. Peterson, substituting for Campbell, made seven through center. Another play and it was St. Louis' ball with five yards to go for a touchdown. Two line plays put the ball on the two-yard line. A third gained about a foot. On the fourth down, a center rush ended on the line, and the referee put the ball on the two inch line, and Western's ball. The Cadets kicked to midfield. The game ended with St. Louis making a final rush up the field. On three passes completed, the Blue and White gained forty yards.

Ray Schaefer played an exceptionally good game for St. Louis U. High. Mulroy and Meehan put up a great fight. "Red" Campbell was, after the first few plays, completely checked by the Cadets.

Lineup and summary:

St. L. High.	Pos.	Western.
Elias	L. E.	Edwards
Mochisky	L. T.	E. Torres
Kahlmeyer	L. G.	Johnston
Ruoff	C.	Murphy
D'Arcy	R. G.	Frantz
Ross	R. T.	Boggiano
Schaefer (c)	R. E.	M. Martinez
Strong	Q. B.	Donnelly
Campbell	L. H.	A. Torres
Mulroy	R. H.	Weinert
Browning	F. B.	Flynn

Substitutions: St. Louis High—Meehan for Elias, Sullivan for D'Arcy, Dilschnieder for Strong, Peterson for Campbell, Thomas for Mochisky, Prendergast for Dilschnieder, Averall for Kahlmeyer, Kahlmeyer for Averall. Western M. A.—Edwards for Martinez.

Hair Stays Combed, Glossy!

"Hair-Groom" costs only few cents a jar at any drug store and makes even stubborn, unruly or shampooed hair stay combed all day in any style you like.

"Hair-Groom" is a dignified combing cream which gives that natural gloss and well-groomed effect to your hair—that final touch to good dress both in business and on social occasions.

"Hair-Groom" is greaseless; also helps grow thick, heavy, lustrous hair. Millions use it! Beware of greasy, harmful imitations.

Gene Sarazen Tells of Styles Of Some of the Long Drivers

Cyril Tolley Probably the Longest Hitter in the Game, But He Is Not a Good Iron Player—Bobby Jones Has the Ideal Swing.

By GENE SARAZEN.
(Copyright, 1924).

From what I have seen and heard of Cyril Tolley's prodigious driving I believe he is probably the longest in the game in this respect. But unfortunately Tolley is not the kind of golfer who takes advantage of his long hitting. He is not a good iron player and no one can score in this game if he cannot play an iron shot. Tolley, in the match I saw him play, was notoriously weak on mashie-niblick shots. He overswings and handles the club too loosely to get good results.

He has great strength and he does hit the ball tremendous distances. In fact I think he is longer than either Mitchell or Havers although not nearly as steady. Of the trio I think Mitchell is the best. He gets wonderful distance, is very steady and sure and is a great shot-maker as well.

Tolley uses a peculiar stance in driving. He stands with his toes turned in toward the ball. I think he does this so to brace himself more firmly. The disadvantage of this stance is that it checks the follow-through.

Tolley uses a rather short driver and holds his hands very low. He takes the club in a very upright position and much too quickly I think. That is the reason he is so erratic off the tee.

Havers is more deliberate. He, too, used the square stance. He has a fine follow-through and gets his right shoulder into the swing in good shape on the downward lunge.

Jones Has Ideal Swing.

Mitchell on the other hand uses a slightly open stance with a very short back-swing. Also on the follow-through he checks the club rather abruptly. Abe has powerful forearms and wrists and can get as much distance with a half swing as most of the others can get with a full swing.

I would advise the ordinary golfer to follow the style of Mitchell in the matter of driving rather than that of the others who are inclined to over-swing. You may not get quite as much distance with a shorter back-stroke but you will get better direction and will be steadier in your driving.

We have some long hitters also who combine steadiness with fine distance. And after all that is the ideal combination. Bobby Jones is one of the best off the tee. Johnny Farrell is very steady although not nearly as long as Jones. Hagen has improved his driving wonderfully in the last two years and young Joe Turnesa is one of the best in the country. Mike Brady is very long although a little erratic and Jim Barnes is also a long hitter but inclined to be a little wild on occasion. Larry Nabholtz, the lad who beat me at French Lick Springs several weeks ago in the Professional Championship is a terrific hitter. He is a powerful lad who swings the club with every ounce of strength in his body. Jones has an ideal swing combining both power and rythmn.

URGES UNITED FOREIGN POLICY FOR BRITAIN

Viscount Grey Says England and Self-Governing Dominions Must Put Up Common Front.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The following message, broadcast by the British official wireless press from Leafields, near London, England, was received today by the New York World's wireless department here:

Viscount Grey, former Foreign Secretary, delivered tonight a speech on "Dominions and Foreign Policy." The speech was broadcast throughout the country from the London station.

Viscount Grey said there must be one foreign policy for all parts of the empire. It must present a common front to the rest of the world. Although the self-governing dominions are informed of various foreign affairs, yet great decisions should only be taken when their representatives are in personal contact at the council of Prime Ministers of the dominions.

"The appearance of British involvements on the continent is greater than it has ever been," Lord Grey declared. "The question therefore is for each imperial conference to secure agreement on policies which provide for unforeseen contingencies, for consultation with the dominions in sudden crises is impossible in a far-flung empire.

"When it appeared not long ago that the Corfu incident might raise the question of the covenant of the League of Nations, public opinion in one great dominion was as much stirred as it was in Britain, and that dominion was ready if need be to stand up in defense of the covenant.

"The British Government might now say to the self-governing dominions that in any dispute with a foreign nation we will refer the matter to the International Court of Justice, to the League of Nations or to arbitration. This will be a guarantee to them that they will not be suddenly called upon to take a hand in a matter of which they have not had time to consider the merits.

"The dominions in return would say, 'We now know where we are. We rely upon that promise and should peaceful means of agreement be refused we shall regard the nations which made the refusal as the aggressor upon Great Britain, and give our support in doing this to the principle of arbitration to which we have pledged ourselves at the imperial conference."

SIX-POUND DAUGHTER IS BORN TO ELSIE HILL

Chairman of National Women's Party Wife of College Professor Who Uses Her Maiden Name.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15. — Miss Elsie Hill, chairman of the executive council of the National Women's Party, is beginning to settle down in earnest. A six-pound daughter was born to her this morning at the Columbian Hospital, Washington, according to a telegram received this afternoon by her sister, Mrs. Helen Hill Weed, South Norwalk, Conn.

The child will be christened Elsie Hill-Levitt. Had it been a boy, its name would have been Alfred Hill-Levitt. The Alfred and the Levitt stand for the name of the man who married Miss Hill in Chicago on Christmas eve, 1921. Prof. Levitt was then an instructor in the law school at the University of North Dakota at Fargo. Miss Hill refused to assume her husband's name, however, saying she had earned an enviable identity as an individual under the cognomen of Elsie Hill.

Miss Hill is a graduate of Vassar, and a daughter of the late Ebenezer J. Hill of Norwalk, Conn., for 21 years a prominent member of the House of Representatives. She was jailed for picketing the White House during President Wilson's administration.

JURY EXONERATES DRIVER

Accident Verdict Returned in Case of Mrs. Mary Hurlbert.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned yesterday in the death of Mrs. Mary Hurlbert, 75 years old, of 1223 Tyler avenue, who was fatally injured last Monday when struck by the automobile of Robert Verschleiser, 23, 1517 Goodfellow avenue, at Easton and Newstead avenues.

Verschleiser testified he was traveling west on Easton avenue about 12 miles an hour when Mrs. Hurlbert stepped in front of his machine. His statement was corroborated by other witnesses, who said the aged woman appeared confused at the time of the accident. Mrs. Hurlbert died at City Hospital Thursday of internal injuries and a fractured skull.

MAN KILLED, SON WOUNDED, IN LOUISIANA FEUD SHOOTING

Fight Between Members of Two Families Occurs on Jonesboro Street.

By the Associated Press.

JONESBORO, La., Nov. 15.—In a fight on the main street of Jonesboro yesterday between the Blundells and the Sims, B. F. Blundell, 52, prominent farmer, was killed, and his son, Claude, 17, was wounded. Witnesses declared the shots were fired by Town Marshal L. P. Sims, J. Y. Sims and Foster Sims, brothers of the Marshal, also were said to have participated in the fight. Bad feeling had existed between the two families following the conviction of Foster Sims for attacking one of Blundell's young daughters. Foster Sims was released Thursday, after serving 30 days.

Three Hurt in Collision Recover.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 15.—C. M. Mitchell and two other persons who were brought to a Cincinnati hospital for treatment for injuries suffered when a loaded coal train backed into a motor rail car, have so far recovered that they are expected to leave the hospital in a few days, it was said today. The accident occurred on the Kentucky & Tennessee Railway at Barbell, Ky., and not on the Southern Railway system, as published in former dispatches.

RADIO PROGRAM HEARD IN STEEL AND CONCRETE VAULT

Mayor and Chief of Police Among Auditors at Test in Bank.

A radio program was heard Friday by Mayor Kiel, Chief of Police O'Brien and others, through the thick steel and concrete walls of a vault in the National City Bank.

A Radiola was placed in the vault and the afternoon program of the Stix, Baer & Fuller radio station tuned in. When the doors of the vault were closed no change in the volume of sound was noted. Part of the program was a description of the test they were witnessing.

WILLIAM WRIGLEY JR. BUYS SUGAR REFINERY IN UTAH

Sugar Produced Will Be Used in the Manufacture of Chewing Gum.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 15.—Toldert Ingram, statistician of the State Board of Immigration, today announced that the old Gunnison Valley Sugar Co. had been purchased by William Wrigley Jr., chewing gum king.

The new owner has reincorporated the company under the name of the Gunnison Sugar Co. and the laws of Utah. The refinery is located just across the Colorado line at Centerfield, Utah, and has a capacity of 500 tons of beets a day. It is understood the sugar produced there will be used in the manufacture of chewing gum.

New Masonic Treasurer Is Named.

He is chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the Grand Lodge and treasurer of the Fidelity Trust Co. of Kansas City.

JONES RELEASES TWO MEN TAKEN IN RAID

County Prosecutor Appears at Court House at 11:30 P. M. When Saloon Men Are Denied Bond.

Adam Henry Jones, Prosecuting Attorney of St. Louis County, appeared at the Clayton Courthouse at 11:30 o'clock last night to free on their own bonds two saloonkeepers whose places had been raided. Night Sheriff Olderworth had declined to release the men on their own bonds.

The saloonkeepers, James Carzino, 6144A Bartmer avenue, and Charles Halloran, 6219A Suburban avenue, had been arrested earlier in the night by a raiding squad under Deputy Sheriff Kick. Bond for each was fixed at $1000. When their personal bonds were refused, the prisoners communicated with Jones.

Jones telephoned an order for the prisoners to be released on their own bonds. Olderworth rejected the order. Jones hurried to the courthouse and repeated the order and again it was not heeded. Then Jones wrote out an order releasing the pair on his own responsibility and saw them walk out.

When Olderworth complained that Jones' action was detrimental to law enforcement, Jones asked, "Since when is the Sheriff's office getting so holy? John Willmann (the Sheriff) must be getting religion since he appeared before the grand jury last Friday. Anyway, these two are only 'two-bit' people. The big ones are let alone."

It is his intention, Olderworth said, to ask the grand jury next Monday to investigate Jones' action last night. The grand jury is now investigating, at Circuit Judge Wurdeman's direction, the integrity and effectiveness of Jones as a public official.

Judge Wurdeman ordered Jones removed from office during the investigation, but Jones obtained a stay of this order from the State Supreme Court. Jones was defeated for re-election at the general election.

MOTHER LOSES RACE TO PREVENT DAUGHTER'S SUICIDE

Madeline Haverstroh Ends Life in Automobile Near Long Island Home.

By the Associated Press.

LINNBROOK, N. Y., Nov. 15.—The story of a race between mother and daughter over 45 miles of Long Island highways, with the girl's life as the stake, and death the eventual winner, was revealed today in connection with the suicide of Madeleine Haverstroh, 25 years old, who shot herself while in her automobile near her home here yesterday.

Driving at high speed from Northport to Linnbrook, Miss Haverstroh eluded her mother, Mrs. Louis H. Haverstroh, who was following in another car in an attempt to overtake her. The mother had a premonition that the daughter would attempt to kill herself and resolved to be the first to reach her home where she knew her husband had a revolver. The girl arrived there ahead, got the revolver, then drove two blocks away and shot herself.

The girl had been at Northport visiting a friend, Mrs. Leopold Dohena, who keeps an inn. Mrs. Dohena telephoned Mrs. Havenstroh that Madeleine was "acting queerly" and the mother hastened to Northport in her sedan. She questioned her daughter, who began to weep. When the girl started home in her own coupe, the mother followed in the sedan. Dusk and traffic congestion caused Mrs. Haverstroh to lose sight of the coupe. Premonition of suicide seized her and she hastened home. She found her daughter and the revolver gone.

PHILATELIST SHOWS RARE STAMPS IN ILLUSTRATED TALK

Stamps Issued Before the Use of Postage Stamps Are Reproduced on Screen.

The popularity in St. Louis of the hobby of stamp collecting was shown Thursday night when philatelists and junior collectors filled to capacity Sheldon Memorial Hall to hear a talk on the "Charm of the Postage Stamp" by Henry A. Diamant of the St. Louis branch of the American Philatelic Society. It was necessary to close the doors and several hundred persons were unable to gain admission.

The talk was illustrated with screen pictures of more than 100 rare stamps, many of which were surrounded with stories of human interest and treasure hunting.

Probably the most interesting to St. Louisans were the reproductions of the St. Louis postmaster's stamps issued in 1845, two years before the Government adopted the use of postage stamps. These were printed by the St. Louis postmaster for the convenience of persons who did not want to go to the postoffice to pre-pay the 5 and 10 cents then charged for forwarding a letter.

These are among the rarest of all United States postage stamps, being worth from $150 to $2000 each. The screen reproductions were made from copies in Diamant's private collection and which he obtained at a stamp auction in Paris several years ago. They were found by a negro janitor who was about to burn a bunch of old letters when his attention was attracted by the peculiar black stamps. He later sold his find for $20,000.

THREE DIAMOND RINGS TAKEN FROM APARTMENT

Man Who Had Been Working in University City Residence Held by Police Here.

Three diamond rings, set in platinum, were taken from a dresser drawer in the apartment of Adolph M. Friedman, 759 Leland avenue, University City, between 2 p. m. and 7 p. m. yesterday. Mrs. Friedman put the jewelry in the drawer and when she looked for it later it was gone.

A man who was working in the apartment at the time has been arrested by St. Louis police but he denies all knowledge of the affair. One ring contains six diamonds and is valued at $1000, another set with five small diamonds, $300, and a smaller ring $100.

POSTPONES HER OWN FUNERAL

Arrives Home to Find Son Holding Wake Over Another.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Mrs. Margaret Sheridan hurried home last night in time to postpone her funeral. She left home last Thursday evening to visit friends and had such a good time she stayed all night. In the meantime a woman who had been struck by a taxicab was taken to Bellevue Hospital and died there, was identified by Patrick Sheridan and his sister, Mary.

The body was taken to Patrick's home and the relatives were summoned to the wake. Then Mrs. Sheridan got home.

"A ghost!" cried the grandchildren. "A ghost, your grandmother," said Mrs. Sheridan. The body was taken back to the morgue.

Explosion in Basement of Theater.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Nov. 15.—A panic was averted in the Ritz Theater here tonight when an explosion in the basement caused falling plaster and steam to fill part of the theater, which was crowded. A negro janitor, who was in the basement at the time, was taken to the hospital in a serious condition.

An increase in Hotel P. B. X. rates consistent with other P. B. X. rates is also proposed.

The monthly increase in the number of telephones in the local system adds to the usefulness of every telephone served. During September, for instance, there was a net gain of 1848 telephones in the Greater St. Louis area. To make this gain 4153 telephones were installed, and 2305 were removed.

An important part of the Merger Job was the work inside the Central offices. In connecting up 125,000 Bell telephones with 35,000 Kinlochs, to provide a unified service for St. Louis, it was necessary to make more than 12,000,000 individual connections by hand on the backs of switchboards.

Residences Are Not Affected

The urgent necessity for increasing certain charges for telephone service in St. Louis exists and has existed for more than a year. The introduction of these charges was deferred until after the completion of the Kinloch merger, at the request of the Missouri Public Service Commission, and further deferred by this Company until this date, for the purpose of making certain improvements in service.

It is now imperative that prompt action be taken in the interest of service.

Elsewhere in this issue of the "News" the principal adjustments are presented. These adjustments deal mainly with business telephones, charges for residence service not being affected. Of the 165,000 telephones in St. Louis, 81,684 are residence telephones.

HISTORY OF CASE.

The present rates in effect in St. Louis were granted by the Public Service Commission, August 23, 1920, after six months investigation. One year later the Commission again approved these rates.

In March 1922, this Company presented to the people and the City Government of St. Louis the proposition to merge the Bell and Kinloch Systems into one unified system so that every telephone in the city would be interconnected with all others. An increase in business rates was an integral part of the proposition and was so understood by the City, the Public and the Commission at Jefferson City.

"INCREASE NECESSARY".

When the Commission authorized the merger they stated: "There will necessarily be an increase per 'phone in the cost of operation after the merger is completed, and if the merger were being completed now there would necessarily have to be an increase in rates."

The merger was completed August 3, 1924, so that the month of September was the first full calendar month of operation since its completion. This Company's earnings in September are usually somewhat above the average, but taking September earnings as a basis and multiplying by 12, we find that our annual earnings today exceed our annual earnings in 1921 by but $265,998.

$12,475,757 ADDITIONS.

But since 1921 we have made net additions to the St. Louis Exchange plant, as follows:

By purchase (at cost—Kinloch plant)	$5,186,099
By construction (at cost)	7,289,658
	$12,475,757

The Commission held that our rates were just and reasonable in 1921. Now the amount applicable to reserve and return is increased by $265,998. That is to say, we have $265,998 with which to pay the annual depreciation and return upon additions to plant which cost us $12,475,757. This is but a fraction over 2% return.

The proposed adjustments in rates will produce about $900,000 additional annual revenue. Although these adjustments will not permit the Company to earn the same net return on the total investment as in 1921, they will materially relieve the present situation.

Proposed increase in rates will affect only 23% of St. Louis telephone subscribers and will increase the rate of but 35% of the total number of telephones.

West End Realty and Constr... Erect Buildings in South, ... Northwest St. Lou...

The West End Realty and Construction Co., composed of John M. Rielley, James Moran and Nathan Lerner, has under way plans for flats and apartments to be constructed in the ensuing year to cost more than $1,000,000.

The fields for these operations will be prominent alike in South St. Louis, the West End and in the northwest section. Sites for many projects already have been acquired and construction is to proceed as the plans become available.

Buildings of these types erected by the company in the last year or so cost upwards of $1,000,000 and a number of them were sold in course of construction.

Eight double flat buildings recently erected on Palm street just east of Union boulevard in Hedgeleigh Park have just been sold for prices aggregating $175,900. These supplement four at the northwest corner of Union boulevard and Natural Bridge road, recently built by the company at a cost of $88,000.

Demand for buildings of this character in Hedgeleigh Park reflects the growth of this area as an industrial center, of which the General Motors plant, at Union boulevard and Natural Bridge road, forms the nucleus.

LACLEDE GAS CO. INSTALLING SEVEN SHOW WINDOWS

Extensive alterations in the Laclede Gas Building, at Eleventh and Olive streets, are being made under the direction of Mauran, Russell and Crowell for the purpose of installing seven new show windows.

Three of these windows will be on Olive, four on Eleventh street. Each window will be a complete unit without visible connection with each other or with the salesroom lobby. The Eleventh street windows will be 12 feet long by 7 feet 6 inches deep; those on Olive street side will be 13 feet 6 inches long by 9 feet deep. Each window will be equipped with gas, water, waste and compressed air pipes and electric wiring to enable the demonstration of appliances sold by the company. The window interiors will be trimmed in birch and finished in medium ivory. The construction of these windows will eliminate the veranda effect which formerly existed on the Olive street side of the building, as the Olive street windows are being built in the space formerly occupied by this veranda. The changes are expected to be completed about Jan. 1.

OERLING IS ELECTED HEAD OF COUNTY REAL ESTATE BOARD

The annual election of officers of the St. Louis County Real Estate Board was held Wednesday evening and the following were chosen for the ensuing year: L. William Gerling, Wellston, president; Edward F. Wilson, Webster Groves, first vice president; J. Emil Dosenbach, 6200 Maple avenue, second vice president; J. Ellis Stevens, Clayton, secretary and treasurer.

The board reports a membership of 42 on the active list. The board will hold its first annual dinner and installation of officers at the Kirkwood Country Club on Wednesday, Dec. 10.

The members are preparing to distribute to their clients a road map of St. Louis County showing the hard roads, school districts and city limits of all towns.

Firm to Build $1,000,000 Of Flats and Apartments

West End Realty and Construction Co. to Erect Buildings in South, West and Northwest St. Louis.

The West End Realty and Construction Co., composed of John M. Rielley, James Moran and Nathan Lerner, has under way plans for flats and apartments to be constructed in the ensuing year to cost more than $1,000,000.

The fields for these operations will be prominent alike in South St. Louis, the West End and in the northwest section. Sites for many projects already have been acquired and construction is to proceed as the plans become available.

Buildings of these types erected by the company in the last year or so cost upwards of $1,000,000 and a number of them were sold in course of construction.

Eight double flat buildings recently erected on Palm street just east of Union boulevard in Hedgeleigh Park have just been sold for prices aggregating $175,000. These supplement four at the northwest corner of Union boulevard and Natural Bridge road, recently built by the company at a cost of $88,000.

Demand for buildings of this character in Hedgeleigh Park reflects the growth of this area as an industrial center, of which the General Motors plant, at Union boulevard and Natural Bridge road, forms the nucleus.

The company is erecting 10 double and five single flats on Palm street, between Norwood and Geraldine avenues, one block east of Union boulevard in Hedgeleigh Park. All these buildings will have the latest features, including Murphy in-a-dor beds.

Opposite Christian Brothers' College in San Bonita avenue in Hi-Ponte, the company is completing 10 apartment buildings costing $250,000. Recently it built four double flats and a business building at the northwest corner of Meramec street and Oregon avenue, for $125,000.

Other buildings constructed in the last year by the company, include two double flats at the northwest corner of McNair and Allen avenues, $40,000; two on Jefferson and Ann avenues, $44,000; three on Compton and Osceola street, $60,000; four on Burd avenue, north of Easton, $88,000, and three on Clara, north of Easton, $66,000.

The list also includes a 15-family apartment building with Murphy beds at the northwest corner of Leland and Clemens avenue in Delmar Garden, $90,000.

The material, etc., used in the construction of these buildings was supplied by Carr-Twombly Mfg. Co., Hill-Behan Lumber Co., Schwartz Material Supply Co., J. P. Fleming Plumbing Co., T. J. M. Garry Co., Manchester Iron Works, L. J. Mueller Furnace Co., Illinois Supply Co., Ratz Bros. Hardware Co., S. Lichtenfeld Decorating Co., Drees Shade Co., National Roofing, Mid-City Roofing Co., and the Murphy Door Bed Co.

LACLEDE GAS CO. INSTALLING SEVEN SHOW WINDOWS

Extensive alterations in the Laclede Gas Building, at Eleventh and Olive streets, are being made under the direction of Mauran, Russell and Crowell for the purpose of installing seven new show windows.

Three of these windows will be on Olive, four on Eleventh street. Each window will be a complete unit without visible connection with each other or with the salesroom lobby. The Eleventh street windows will be 12 feet long by 7 feet 6 inches deep; those on Olive street side will be 13 feet 6 inches long by 9 feet deep. Each window will be equipped with gas, water, waste and compressed air pipes and electric wiring to enable the demonstration of appliances sold by the company. The window interiors will be trimmed in birch and finished in medium ivory. The construction of these windows will eliminate the veranda effect which formerly existed on the Olive street side of the building, as the Olive street windows are being built in the space formerly occupied by this veranda. The changes are expected to be completed about Jan. 1.

ERLING IS ELECTED HEAD OF COUNTY REAL ESTATE BOARD

The annual election of officers of the St. Louis County Real Estate Board was held Wednesday evening and the following were chosen for the ensuing year: L. The Acceptance of the Big Evening Newspaper in the Centers of Population

In the thickly populated areas where the early morning call of commerce sends the members of the family group scurrying to banks, factories, offices, schools, stores and workshops—scant, if any, attention is given to morning reading.

Analysis shows that it is in the evening when the reunited family relaxes from the business duties of the day that the newspaper—the big EVENING newspaper—joins the group IN THE HOME as an invited and welcome guest, counselor and buying guide.

That this applies to homes of every class is shown by the superior city circulation of the big EVENING newspapers in the 21 largest cities of the United States. These big EVENING newspapers have 52% greater coverage than the first morning newspapers in the same cities. The EVENING newspapers have a combined city circulation of 3,192,980—over a Million more than the morning newspapers.

This compact and more thorough coverage, built up by the preference of the readers themselves, offers and delivers to advertisers the world's most productive, and therefore the most profitable and economical advertising force.

Comparisons show that advertisers throughout the nation have learned the reading habits of the American public and consequently CONCENTRATE the major portion of their appropriations in EVENING newspapers.

In 1923 the EVENING newspapers in the cities analyzed carried 54% more paid advertising than the first morning papers in the same cities, and the increase in newspaper advertising in 1923 over 1922 was nearly 100% greater in these big EVENING newspapers than in their nearest morning contemporaries.

Reader preference for the big EVENING newspaper makes compact circulation—and compact circulation makes the CONCENTRATION of advertising most profitable.

This is particularly true in St. Louis where the Post-Dispatch, because of a superior and more compact circulation, carried over 70% or 9,000,000 lines more advertising than the first morning paper in 1923.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Buoyant markets and encouraging industrial news have featured the past week. The strength in the stock market has been so pronounced, carrying values up to new highs for the post-war period, and the volume of activity has been so large as almost to be disquieting. Enthusiastic talk of 2,000,000 and 4,000,000 share days and of huge advances in prices raise apprehensions of extravagant public speculation. Such a development would be, of course, unfortunate. However, volume is showing a normal tendency to diminish rather than to increase further, and the advances have been achieved for the most part in an orderly manner. After all, the election result justified a fair burst of exuberance. The radical threat has been removed, the railroads are ensured of a chance to complete their program of rehabilitation and business in general knows that it can count on an administration that believes in fair play and economy. These things clearly justify an enhancement of values in certain directions.

Industrial Situation Reviewed.

"Meanwhile the facts of the industrial situation should keep the public from losing its head. Business is improving quite consistently, but still has a considerable distance to go. Iron and steel production have increased for three consecutive months, prices of these commodities are taking on a firmer tone. Railroad car loadings, while at least displaying the normal seasonal tendency to decline, are still at record heights for the season of the year. Even the textile industry is picking up well; cotton consumption also recorded a third consecutive increase during October, in which month it was on a par with the takings in the Octobers of the three preceding years. The picture is one of consistent and orderly improvement.

"But while the prospect is pleasing, there is no reason for jumping to the conclusion that we are entering a new age of economic miracles. The analogy with 1900 is drawn since then the country has grown up mightily. The rate of growth probably is diminishing. In addition we now have an unusual surplus of efficient plants. Sooner or later the country will of course grow up to these plants; whether it already has done so may be doubted. In any event, available producing and transporting capacity seems sufficiently large to make any sudden and sharp bidding up of prices for industrial commodities unlikely. The outlook seems to be for a large business at rather steady prices rather than for a congestion boom and price inflation. All of which is to say that the country appears to face a period of the best kind of prosperity rather than a business debauch. Large production, steady prices and moderate profits are far preferable to the speculative swing that inevitably ends in liquidation and deflation.

Time Money Rate Higher.

"Relaxation to the summer's low of 2 per cent in the call money rate on the New York Stock Exchange is misleading as to the condition of the money market. While the call rate was falling, that on time money advanced fractionally. Acceptance rates also were slightly higher. This firming up occurred despite additional open market purchases of short term paper by the Federal Reserve Banks. The inference is clear that the upswing in the market and in industry is calling for additional credit, of which there are, of course, ample reserves. However, it is also worth noting that the Federal Reserve Banks open market purchases have given them a fairly strong position in the money market — a position which they could put to effective use in case speculation should grow to excessive proportions.

"Strength in foreign exchange continues despite heavy autumn purchases in this country by the leading European nations. The strength is attributable to the successful inauguration of the Dawes plan, which has made it possible for Europe to tap our credit resources. Meanwhile our own commodity markets have been strengthened, while Europe has been laying the foundations for an industrial revival of its own."

The stock market today took a breathing spell. It may have been that counter attractions had their effect but the fact remained that volume materially lessened, with the ticker in position to keep up with the trading pace on the Stock Exchange floor. Sentiment appeared divided and this resulted in a spotty market. Profit-taking was indulged in to considerable extent and in certain of the industrial issues comparative weakness developed for a time. The rails were stimulated by further strength, occasioned by special developments. Bonds also were quiet, except for the advancing tendency and activity shown in foreign loans of the New Haven Railroad.

Foreign Exchanges Quiet.

"Trading in foreign exchanges, after unusual expansion for several days, returned to the usual weekend dullness today. Fluctuations were narrow and the volume of business was smaller than for several weeks. Cable rates on principal European centers were virtually unchanged. There was little selling pressure and some slight profit-taking was easily absorbed. Sterling and French francs held firm, while Scandinavians held within narrow limits.

Commodities Drag Along.

"Hardly more than a trading position developed in the commodity markets. Firmness was about the best that could be said of grain prices, in which evidences were at hand of some profit-taking. In cotton trading lagged along in a desultory manner. In view of the world outlook affecting both wheat and corn the trade is inclined to anticipate price reflection in conformity to conditions. The smallest corn crop in a decade is the Western view while a comparative shortage in world wheat yield is a factor with which to reckon. In cotton also the trade anticipates better things, taking heart at the apparent expansion of demand from milling centers.

"The statement of the New York Clearing House as of the close of business Nov. 15 showed the following changes: Loans, discounts, investments increased $137,152,800; net demand deposits increased $115,850,000; time deposits increased ,000, and excess reserves decreased $952,000, circulation increased $182,[illegible] $106,582,870."

Weekly Metal Review

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The volume of material business in steel market has increased materially during the week with evidence of a general revival of business in competitive commercial markets. Producers are understood to be booking more business this quarter than they did in checking forward purchases. The trend of buying of pig iron appears to have filled normal requirements and the market is quieter but with prices firmly held.

Copper was firm. Export demand has contributed to some extent at the advance in the price of the metal. Domestic iron and steel are at the present level. November deliveries are reported at these figures. Tin is under profit taking, again influenced by export demand from Europe. Lead and zinc showed strength and showed no quotable change, but quietly firm.

Industry continued its upward movement. Good consuming demand and declining supplies with offerings light.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15. — Today's two-hour business on the Stock Exchange wound up with somewhat indecisive results. Price changes were about evenly divided between advances and declines. On the whole it was to be said that the market took the heavy week-end realizing fairly well, maintaining an undercurrent of strength and at the same time encouraging a good deal of fresh buying at rising prices in special issues.

The principal strength lay among stocks belonging to the so-called specialty class. International Harvester, Great Western Sugar, Worthington Pump and Savage Arms were conspicuously strong. Among the motors the Maxwell issues were in quite urgent demand, and Jordan made a new high. The features in the public utility group were the American Waterworks, especially the 6 per cent participating preferred, which made a new top, and Columbia Gas.

Nothing extraordinary happened in the railway section, but most of these stocks were strong. Atchison above 112 was up nearly 3 points from the low of the reaction in the middle of the week. Southern Pacific had evidently got over what disappointment had been caused by the failure of directors to increase the dividend at the recent meeting. New Haven did not follow the rise in the company's bonds.

Marland Oil was sold on the publication of the record for the third quarter showing a deficit of $2,428,-681. Other oil shares were heavy, despite the optimistic references regarding the oil outlook which have been common in Wall street for the last week or more. American Woolen above 62 was up over 11 points from the recent low.

Mack Trucks, International Paper and the Fisk Rubbers all showed special strength. On the other hand most of the sugars were lower and the reaction was quite pronounced in American Can and U. S. Cast Iron Pipe.

The market closed strong for those particular stocks selected for leadership but in other quarters the price changes were small and variable.

The Bond Market.

Some irregularity marked the course of trading in bonds at the close of the week but in the main quotations were well sustained. In a few of the high yielding rails and the higher yielding industrials there was activity and strength.

Among the rails the leader was the New Haven group. Under large transactions New Haven 7s, which mature in April next, made a new high record up a point and a quarter on the day. At 95½ they were 3½ points up from the low of the week.

M., K. & T. adjustments, which had such a spectacular rise Friday, continued firm today around their new high. On the week this bond has advanced between 4 and 5 points. Norfolk Southern refunding 5s, generally an inactive bond, but much in favor this week, made an additional gain today to another high record. In the St. Paul group there was some recovery, especially in the 4½s of 1932. The best information is that the October earnings statement will be remarkably good.

The two features today among the industrials were the recovery of American Sugar 6s to par, where they were taken in large blocks, and the buying of International Mercantile Marine 6s at the best price on the present movement. The bonds of the Cuban sugar producing companies were also firm today, especially Punta Alegre 7s and Eastern Cuba Sugar 7½s.

Goodyear Rubber 8s, both the 1931 and the 1941 maturity, sold around their respective callable prices on the report that the company was planning to retire both issues and refund at a lower rate. Maxwell Motors convertible 7s, which made their appearance on the Stock Exchange for the first time this week, sold up today in sympathy with the bonds.

There was no important change in the U. S. Government loans except a still further slight decline on the week all these issues are down, the sellers supposedly being banks. There was very little evidence in today's market of any similar movement in the high grade rails and industrials.

The new German 7s were still today the leaders of the foreign group, selling above 85 again. The record high was 95⅝, reached Oct. 16.

The week's new bond offerings have totaled more than $43,000,000, compared with a little under $33,-000,000 a week ago. New financing has been relatively small for some time and now dealers report the market in good shape to absorb anything desirable.

COTTON IS HIGHER IN WEEK-END TRADE

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The extreme activity and excitement of the cotton market earlier in the week was followed today by relatively quiet trading and correspondingly narrow fluctuations. After selling off early to 24.97c March rallied 25.16c and closed at 25.10c, the general market closing steady at net advances of 5 to 20 points. The market opened steady at unchanged to 9 points on all positions except October, which was 15 points lower.

Some buying was noted at the start on the relatively steady showing of Liverpool cables, accompanied by reiterated reports of easier Brazilian offerings. March continued to sell off to 24.97c, but on the initial advance met a good deal of realizing and after the week-end and prices soon eased off. There may have been a little selling on reports of a slackening demand for cotton goods after heavy purchases earlier in the week, but comparatively steady and after showing net losses of about 25 points the market steadied on trade buying encouraged by Liverpool, which had eased off from 24.80c to 24.67c, and about recovered the loss, closing at 24.80c. Other months showed slight fluctuations.

A telegram received from New Orleans shortly after the opening said that exports had slackened, but later there was a report from Memphis of a firmer spot basis which probably had a good influence toward the close.

There was little demand reported on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week, a very quiet market at 232,000 bales, compared with 77,000 last year.

Private cables from Liverpool reported a very quiet market, with prices higher on trade calling. Manchester advices said business in cotton goods was limited, buyers refusing to commit themselves to extensive contracts at present prices.

Propose 100 Per Cent Stock Dividend.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Directors of the Alabama & Vicksburg Railway Co., control of which has been acquired by New York bankers from a British syndicate have proposed the payment of a 100 per cent stock dividend. Stockholders will meet Dec. 10 to vote on an increase in capital stock of this amount and to authorize the dividend distribution. Following the increase, the stock will be placed on a 6 per cent annual basis, according to bankers.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review says:

"Sterling was the dominating factor in the Foreign Exchange market during the past week, and variations in the London rate influenced the tone and direction of all other exchanges. General buying commental agents had a combined influence in forcing the rate up over 3 cents to a pound on Monday, but on the two following days the market lost nearly all its gain, ranging during the first half of the week from $4.63 to $4.59⅝ for demand upon Thursday and yesterday there was another display of strength, carrying the London rate up to $4.64, making a new high for the year and a gain of 16 cents in the week. The bullish position of the dominant important bankers here, who were distinctly severe in supplying sterling exchange except at the higher levels, but were quiet buyers wherever a supply appeared.

"Offerings of grain and cotton bills were reduced in number, the peak of the export moving having been passed a short time ago. For a short time there has been a substantial reduction in the current and which political requirements. The manner in which political developments in both England and the United States have temporarized, played an important part in the Foreign Exchange operations as it did in the preceding week.

"French exchange moved within a moderate range, being in supply after advances, but met good buying when recessions occurred and showed a substantial gain when the week ended. Italian after golding closed to $4.30 for some time was materially improved in its position after the publication of the statements of Italy's desire to arrange for a settlement of its war debt to this country.

"Special interest was attached to the strength in Swedish exchange, which held above parity all through the week. Norwegian and Danish exchanges made new high records for the year. Dutch made a new high at 40.10 for Guilders. Greek exchange Yesterday Exchange on Portugal also made a new high record for the year. South American exchanges maintained a firm tone, exchanges on Uruguay with its advance to 97.00 being added to the list of new high records for the year. Argentine also made a new high for the year.

"Trading in foreign exchanges, after unusual expansion for several days, returned to the usual weekend dullness. Fluctuations were narrow and the volume of business was smaller than for several weeks. Cable rates on continental European centers were virtually unchanged. There was little selling pressure and some slight profit-taking was easily absorbed. Sterling and French francs held firm, while Scandinavians held within narrow limits.

FILIPINO LECTURES AGAINST STATEHOOD

Cornell University Audience Is Told Islands Are Too Far Away to Be in Union.

By the Associated Press.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 15.—The "humanitarian duty of the American people is to settle once and for all," the political destiny of the Philippine Islands, Pedro Guevara, resident commissioner for the Islands at Washington, declared tonight, in an adress to members and guests of the Filipino society at Cornell University.

Guevara said if he were an American, he would consider it a patriotic duty to oppose any plan purporting to make the islands a State of the Union. If this were done, he added, it would impose a burden of responsibility upon the United States "without any historical aim" and also bar the islands from working out "their own salvation."

Would Require Sacrifice.

To maintain the islands as a part of the Union, he continued, would require a great amount of "sacrifice of life and resources with no positive benefit to the American people."

If the islands were situated on the borders of America, he said, they would seek to join the United States but "conditions and circumstances are such that they cannot in justice to all concerned aspire to such a status."

The islands, however, he added, want to be of service to America in recognition of her unselfish leadership during their providential association.

Outpost of Civilization.

"Filipinos want their country," he continued, "to be the bulwark of American institutions, ideals and principles; they want their country to be the outpost of the American civilization in the Far East, they will see to it, that the Philippines will be the vigilant sentinel of American interests in those latitudes.

"Such ideals and purposes could only be accomplished through the building up of the Philippines as an independent nation; and with the prestige of the United States, the world would be warned that their interests are common."

The uncertain political tatus of the islands he concluded has hindered economic progress and a trade relationship with the United States founded upon sympathetic co-operation, "is the supreme need of the hour."

Administration Does Not Expect Philippines Agitation.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15. — Administration officials do not expect the question of Philippine independence to be sharply agitated during the coming short session of Congress, Secretary Weeks saying today he had heard no information that the subject would be taken up during the session for consideration.

NEW MASONIC TEMPLE TO BE DEDICATED TUESDAY

Sovereign Commander Cowles of Washington, D. C., to Preside at Ceremony.

The new Masonic Temple, on Lindell boulevard west of Grand boulevard, will be formally dedicated at 2 p. m. Tuesday by Sovereign Commander John H. Cowles of Washington, D. C. The dedication ceremony will be open to the public.

It was also announced that the class of 1000 receiving Scottish Rite degrees last May had presented the temple with a bronze bust of Gen. Albert Pike, who was active in Masonry here from 1859 to 1891. The bust will be placed in the main entrance to the temple. A class of 600 will receive Scottish Rite degrees at an initiation starting Wednesday.

SOMEONE BEAT COLUMBUS TO AMERICA, ACCORDING TO DESCENDANT, DUKE OF ALBA

Canadian Indian Writer Gets Story Direct—With Hint Chris Probably Was a Jew—and Puts New Punch in It.

Special Dispatch to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

TORONTO, Nov. 15.—Christopher Columbus did not discover America, says the Duke of Alba, who perhaps better than anyone else alive today ought to know. For the Duke of Alba is the eighteenth direct descendant of Columbus himself.

When the Duke of Alba recently crossed Canada he was accompanied by Chief Buffalo Long Lance, a full-blooded Indian chief of the Blood Tribe from faraway Alberta.

It was to Chief Buffalo Child Long Lance that the Duke of Alba made his revelation about the false fame he says attaches tothe name of his distinguished ancestor. The Chief tells about it in the following language:

Story the Chief Tells.

One night, following a dinner aboard the Duke of Alba's royal diner, in which he had bombarded me with questions on Western Canada, I said to him:

"Now, I want to ask you some questions."

"All right; go ahead," he said.

"Well, I want to know something about Columbus. You have all of his personal records, and you must have something about him that no other person has."

"The only fact that I have that is not included in school histories," he said, "is the fact that Columbus did not discover America. I am including this in my latest historical work.

"Columbus," he continued, "was a poor, happy-go-lucky chap, with not the least idea of becoming an explorer until he struck upon that idea by the merest accident.'

"At the age of 40 he was living among the poor in the town of Funchar, when one day while walking along the beach, he saw a wrecked caravel floating in from the sea, not far from the shore.

Dying Man on Caravel.

"He went out to it and found a dying man lying on deck. After procuring food and fresh water from Funchar, Columbus returned to the caravel and made strenuous efforts to revive the man, but he recovered only sufficiently to say that he had been a captain of a crew of 16 who had gone out to sea on that caravel many months before. On the return journey some strange malady had struck them, and they had all died except himself. The man said:

"'We were returning with a great secret. But it is of no use to me now; I am dying. So I will tell it to you. We found another land with strange people on it, far across this sea. I tell you this because you have been nice to me.'

Told King and Queen.

"Columbus returned to Funchar and said nothing of what he had heard. He went straight to the Queen of Castile and the King of Aragon—who later married and caused the unification of Spain—and asked for a commission to raise a body of men for a foreign expedition. Only to the King and the Queen did he divulge what the dying Captain had told him. And he further asked them for financial assistance. The King of Aragon made him a substantial grant, as did Martini Pinthon, a wealthy Spaniard, after whom Columbus named one of his ships, 'La Pinta.'

"Columbus recruited his men without telling them what they were wanted forJnot trusting even them. It was a custom in those days for soldiers of fortune to be granted commissions to raise men to attack an enemy country on his own initiative, and Columbus' crew thought that this was his aim.

"The crew, when completed, numbered 68 men, and included a queer lot of wanderers of many nationalities. In this list, which I have at home in Madrid, is the name of an Irishman.

"With the money he had raised Columbus bought three ships, named them 'La Nina,' 'La Pinta' and 'Santa Maria,' and started out on his strange voyage. Your own history tells you the rest. You know that Columbus returned with only one ship, which was La Nina, and that serious mutinies occurred at sea. These mutinies commenced when the recruits discovered, after many weeks at sea, that Columbus was not headed for any country known to them.

Name for Indians.

"Thinking that America was only another part of India and that he had only discovered a new route to that country, Columbus called the natives of America 'Los Indes'—Indians. Upon his return to Spain he wrote considerable data concerning these North American aborigines. He said of them: 'The Indians are a gentle people, without knowing what evil is, without killing, without stealing.'

"Following his discovery of America, if discovery it could be called, Columbus never became wealthy nor titled. He died 14 years later—in 1506—a man of 55 years of age and of moderate circumstances. No one ever knew much about him. All he ever said of himself when questioned was: 'I am a wanderer; born in Genca' (Italy). It is generally believed, however, that he was a Jew.

"Columbus's body, together with that of his son, lay buried for nearly four centuries in front of the Postoffice at Havana, Cuba. When Spain's trouble with Cuba was foreshadowed they were taken up and removed to Porto Rico. Later on Columbus' body was again taken up and transported to Spain. But it has now been discovered that almost beyond doubt the wrong body was taken up, and that the one in Spain is that of Columbus' son, his own body still being in Porto Rico—on American soil. Sometime, perhaps, this matter may be cleared up."

The descendant of Columbus telling this story of the discovery of America to a descendant of an aborigine whom Columbus dispossessed, was not without its dramatic element. The fraternization of the Duke of Alba and Chief Buffalo Child Long Lance was due to a Canadian railway's tourist department which, during the height of the season employs the Chief as a sort of a guide de luxe for distinguished parties. Chief Buffalo Child also accompanied the British Association for the Advancement of Science party across the continent with the result that he is invited to attend and address the association's next meeting.

Chief Buffalo Child is an unusual type even among Indian chiefs. He is a graduate of Carlisle and a veteran of the Great War, whence he emerged with a Captain's commission and several decorations. He is an expert on prize fighting and a journalist of note. He is by way of being a philosopher as his forefathers were, and at the same time is as full of life and action as the modern American business man. Any one who meets him will acknowledge him to be a live wire.

Deputy Sheriff Says He Fell Into Coal Hole.

William Ringhoff, a Deputy Sheriff attached to Circuit Judge Landwehr's court, was out serving court papers Sept. 1 last when he dropped into a coal hole in a sidewalk in front of the Dew Drop Inn at 1722 Market street. Yesterday he filed suit for $10,000 damages against the Inn company, alleging that he sustained injuries to his left leg and hip.

He avers that the accident was due to negligence of the defendant in that the grating covering the coal hole was loose, and it tipped to one side as he attempted to pass over it.

By a Staff Correspondent of the ... WASH...

WHEN Robert S. Brookings, St. Louis capitalist, was chairman of President Wilson's committee that set prices on $20,000,000,000 of materials, he helped the Government save millions of dollars. Now he is in Washington directing administrative resources to the problem of reducing one of America's most expensive products—representative government.

His solution is so simple yet dependent on comprehensive, the wonder is that the problem was not begun decades ago. But ministration, that is the price of representative government. Men saw the tremendous waste and colossal ignorance manifest in government, but nothing was done about it. A successful business man who was also a noted educator saw the need and devised a remedy, even before the war had proved how inefficiently the Government handled money, materials and brains.

Dr. Brookings' solution is to supply the Government with specially trained experts who could intelligently and efficiently direct the work in the executive branch of the Government, and to make available to the legislative branch carefully and impartially—but simply—compiled information for guidance in new legislation, particularly that which is economic and technical, such as the tariff, where an enormous amount of statistical information must be thoroughly studied before intelligent action can be taken.

Institutes Established.

To supply this technical information and these specialists, Dr. Brookings has established two institutes and a graduate school. These are the Institute for Government Research, which is charged with the investigation and compilation of nonpolitical information; the Institute of Economics, which studies questions over which political parties differ, and the Robert Brookings Graduate School of Economics and Government, which is attached to Washington University of St. Louis. The Institutes and the graduate school have separate boards of directors, composed of men whose names rank the highest in business, educational and philanthropic lists. Dr. Brookings is chairman of each board, constituting the administrative connecting link for the three institutions. In practice there is much interchange of work and ideas in the three groups.

In the graduate school, Dr. Brookings added a third prong to his fork to drive out waste. It was the latest to be established and he believes that it will supply most of the men needed in the two other institutions, for after two years graduate work on governmental problems, the students will be prepared either for the institutes or official Government service.

Business and Brains.

The defeat of President Taft's budget plans in 1912 can be said to have caused Dr. Brookings to establish the institutions designed to put business and brains into the Government, for that defeat was brought about by the ignorance of Congressmen, antagonized by cries of "Pork barrel," who resentfully voted the measure down.

A large share of the credit for the present budget law must be given to Dr. Brookings and his Institute for Government Research, but none is taken, as Dr. Brookings maintains that credit should go to the parties bearing the responsibility, which in this case are Representative James W. Good of Iowa, who was chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, and Senator Medill McCormick, whose committee had charge of the bill in the Senate.

"The research institute, in Dr. Brookings' words, is an organization created by men who believe there should be a nonpartisan, in-

HOW ROBERT S. BROOKINGS IS TRYING TO REDUCE COST OF RUNNING GOVERNMENT

St. Louisan Has Established Institutes for Research and Economics and a Graduate School—Their Work Explained.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.

WHEN Robert S. Brookings, St. Louis capitalist and philanthropist, was chairman of President Wilson's Price-Fixing Committee that set prices on $30,000,000,000 worth of war materials, he helped the Government save millions, perhaps billions, of dollars. Now he is in Washington directing his financial and administrative resources to the problem of reducing the price of one of America's most expensive products—representative government.

His solution is so simple yet comprehensive, the wonder is that it was not begun decades ago. But that is the price of representative government. Men saw the tremendous waste and colossal ignorance manifest in government, but nothing was done about it. A successful business man who was also a noted educator saw the need and devised a remedy, even before the war had proved how inefficiently the Government handled money, materials and brains.

Dr. Brookings' solution is to supply the Government with specially trained experts who could intelligently and efficiently direct the work in the executive branch of the Government, and to make available to the legislative branch carefully and impartially—but simply—compiled information for guidance in new legislation, particularly that which is economic and technical, such as the tariff, where an enormous amount of statistical information must be thoroughly studied before intelligent action can be taken.

Institutes Established.

To supply this technical information and these specialists, Dr. Brookings has established two institutes and a graduate school. These are the Institute for Government Research, which is charged with the investigation and compilation of nonpolitical information; the Institute of Economics, which studies questions over which political parties differ, and the Robert Brookings Graduate School of Economics and Government, which is attached to Washington University of St. Louis. The institutes and the graduate school have separate boards of directors, composed of men whose names rank the highest in business, educational and philanthropic lists. Dr. Brookings is chairman of each board, constituting the administrative connecting link for the three institutions. In practice there is much interchange of work and ideas in the three groups.

In the graduate school, Dr. Brookings added a third prong to his fork to drive out waste. It was the latest to be established and he believes that it will supply most of the men needed in the two other institutions, for after two years graduate work on governmental problems, the students will be prepared either for the institutes or official Government service.

Business and Brains.

The defeat of President Taft's budget plans in 1912 can be said to have caused Dr. Brookings to establish the institutions designed to put business and brains into the Government, for that defeat was brought about by the ignorance of Congressmen, antagonized by cries of "Pork barrel," who resentfully voted the measure down.

A large share of the credit for the present budget law must be given to Dr. Brookings and his Institute for Government Research, but none is taken, as Dr. Brookings maintains that credit should go to the parties bearing the responsibility, which in this case are Representative James W. Good of Iowa, who was chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, and Senator Medill McCormick, whose committee had charge of the bill in the Senate.

"The research institute, in Dr. Brookings' words, is an organization created by men who believe there should be a nonpartisan, independent institution to consider the problems of Government administration, and particularly those of the National Government for the purpose of making known the most scientific practical principles and procedures that should obtain in the conduct of public affairs."

Eastman on the Board.

The institute was incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia in 1916. Among the members of the board of directors are George Eastman, general manager of the Eastman Kodak Co.; Raymond Fosdick, New York attorney; Felix Frankfurter, Harvard Law Professor; Edwin F. Gay, former president of the New York Evening Post; A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard University; Arthur T. Hadley, former president of Yale University; Richard B. Mellon, banker, Pittsburg; Chief Justice Taft; Ray Lyman Wilbur, president Stanford University, and Robert S. Woodward, former president Carnegie Institute of Washington.

The institute is financed entirely by private contributions.

Budgetary reform was the first problem tackled by the institute. In this work, which was entirely nonpartisan, many other problems cropped up. Among these were the revision of the rules of congressional procedure, for the departmental committees were overlapping the work of the appropriation committees; then there were the reorganization of the Government auditing system, reorganization of the administrative branches of the Government to eliminate such glaring solecisms as having the Public Health Service under the Treasury Department; the problem of personal reclassification, and the problem of co-operation with unofficial bodies such as the United States Chamber of Commerce and various educational associations.

But these were nonpolitical problems. Recommendation could be made of ways to save money but another need presented itself.

Institute of Economics.

This was for an institution to study scientifically and impartially technical political problems. Dr. Brookings enlisted the aid of the Carnegie Corporation of New York which supplied funds sufficient to maintain the Institute of Economics for two years. The time has been extended to 10 years, and Dr. Brookings declares that he has assurances that financial support will be given as long as there is need for such an institution.

Among the subjects which the Economics Institute studies are: International commercial policies, questions of domestic and international finance, relations of business to Government, problems of agriculture, taxation and transportation, and various issues relating to labor and industry. Virtually all these questions are looked upon differently by the political parties.

The Carnegie Corporation has no control whatever over the funds allotted the institute. In making the award, the corporation said:

"A single purpose shall be borne in mind, namely, the institute shall be conducted with the sole object of ascertaining the facts and of interpreting these facts for the people of the United

Country's First Woman Governor

A Visit With, and Intimate Study of, Wyoming's New Executive by a Post-Dispatch Woman Writer

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross Has Two Dominating Desires: To Carry on the Work for Her State That Her Husband Had Inaugurated and to Vindicate the Level-Headedness and Judgment of Women as Public Executives.

She Had Been Her Husband's Chief Confidante and When He Died in Harness as Governor It Was but Natural in This Pioneer Suffrage State That His Party Should Choose Her to Succeed Him.

By MARGUERITE MARTYN,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 15.

WHEN Democrats began to emerge from the gloom that lately submerged them, to rub their eyes and look about them, there was one small luminous spot far out in the West to cheer them; a Democratic Governor elected in Wyoming.

Additional surprise to the whole country lay in the fact that this shining exception had been wrought by a woman.

It was a woman and a Democrat and a native of Missouri, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, who was elected Governor of Wyoming—regularly elected with a majority of at least 8000 votes over her Republican opponent, Eugene J. Sullivan, with 3000 more votes than President Coolidge, who easily carried the State, and with Republicans in the newly elected Legislature outnumbering Democrats 12 to 1.

Photographs by Harris & Ewing, Washington, D. C.

MRS. BETTY TAYLOE ROSS IN TWO POSES

To Fill Out Husband's Term.

Mrs. Ross was elected to fill out the unexpired term of her husband, Gov. William Bradford Ross who died less than six weeks ago when he had still two years to serve.

There is some dispute as to when she shall take office. If it is to be regarded as a regular election she will wait until the formal inauguration day, the first Monday in January; if it is to be regarded as an emergency election the law is that she shall take office as soon as the official canvass is completed. But in any case the woman Governor-elect of Wyoming will be inducted before the woman Governor-elect of Texas, Mrs. Ferguson, who will be inaugurated Jan. 25, and Nellie Tayloe Ross will go down in history as the first woman Governor of a State in this Union.

It is a bit novel having a woman Governor, but out here in Wyoming they seem less disturbed about it than anywhere else. Any tenderfoot timidity about encountering roistering broncho busters riding through the town shooting out store windows by way of protest against having a Governess or submitting to petticoat rule or by way of asserting that men still are men in the great open spaces, was set at naught by the placid matter-of-fact attitude toward the situation in Cheyenne.

Public Glare Distasteful.

After coming all the way out here to help Wyoming show the world what it had done, nobody seemed in the least concerned whether I learned anything about the situation or not, least of all the new woman Governor herself. Indeed, she was on the point of leaving when I arrived, for points unknown, to escape just such as I, and unless I hastened over to the executive mansion I should miss seeing her entirely.

She had been amazed at the continuous and increasing procession of news reporters, photographers and such like to her door. One moving picture operator had lugged his heaviest camera from Denver and spent considerable time setting it up in front of the executive mansion, then rung the door bell and invited Mrs. Ross to walk straight into it and smile, please.

"I am very sorry," he reports Mrs. Ross as saying while the door was open a space, then closed again, leaving him nothing to do but report back to Denver without a take.

"I cannot become used to the publicity just yet," said the Governor-elect, sitting down beside me in her library and placing her hand over mine appealingly.

A handsome, stately figure of a woman and a commanding one, upon whom her husband had greatly relied for counsel in all his affairs, she had been described to me. But recent sorrow had left its mark upon her. Not that it had lessened her dignity nor obscured a fine patrician cast of features, but her deep blue eyes were rimmed with red from weeping, and she was wraithlike in her widow's weeds. There had to be the natural agitation due to the rapid and varied sequence of events the past few weeks, still with a brave effort she was not losing sight of the opportunities of the future.

It was the sort of publicity to which she had been subjected which was her chief objection, she proceeded to explain. Newspapers had persisted in referring to her as "Our Nell." She made a grimace of mock disdain at mention of the appellation. Not much like "Ma" Ferguson, who had rejoiced in her campaign nickname. She had been referred to as the best housekeeper in Cheyenne. "I blushed when I read that. Does the untidiness of this room look as if I were?" she said. At which I recalled widely circulated photographs of Mrs. Ferguson in kitchen apron about her household chores. The two women have one point in common; they both are taking positions in which their husbands preceded them. But there, from my observations, the comparison ends.

A Thorough Hostess.

"And then some of it has been really unfair," she went on. "One newspaper called me on long distance and asked if I would make my own decisions or rely upon advices from others. I replied, of course, I would make my own decisions. Whereupon they printed, 'Mrs. Ross will take advice from nobody.'

"Of course, I can see that you are a very nice reporter," she added politely, "and will not be guilty of these errors and bad taste. But can't you see it is all alien to my traditions? Please, you may write that down, that I never have been a woman to seek a career on my own account. I did not even care for a political career for my husband. My interest was centered in his becoming a good lawyer. But becoming a good speaker and there being so few Democrats here to represent the cause, he drifted into politics. My first duty I thought lay in keeping up the social end. In that way we had always company in our house. Since we came to live here at the executive mansion I have always wanted the people to feel that this was their house. By this means I came to have wide acquaintance all over the State, little knowing how it might be useful to me in the future. If anybody had told me six weeks ago that I should be elected Governor, I should have pronounced him insane."

She talked rapidly, in a rippling voice, from which words dropped without ever an instant's pause or hesitation.

"Now I realize that I shall have to accept public curiosity and interest as a rightful obligation of the office. I appreciate that it is well meant. I know it is wise to answer questions fully lest evasive answers be misconstrued; but I am not ready to answer all questions conclusively. I haven't had time to think, to get my bearings from my new standpoint.

Explains Her Election.

"I was elected, first of all, as a tribute to my husband. The people adored him. Never have I read such tributes as were paid him. Then I was elected because knowing and understanding his policies and his program as I did, it was to be expected that I would endeavor to carry them out. That is my reply to all questions concerning present policies and I have formulated no new ones. There was another reason for my election, that of avoiding the loss of efficiency a change of administration inevitably would entail."

"How did you happen to be Democrats in this Republican stronghold?"

"It isn't so much of a Republican stronghold as you may think. Wyoming people do some suprisingly independent things at election time. National party lines are not so closely drawn on local issues.

"But we were Democrats traditionally having come from Southern families. Then we became stronger in our convictions through reading and studying together, history, literature and tendencies of the times."

"Did not a belief in a low tariff militate against the career of a Democrat in this State so largely given over to wool growing and the sugar industry?"

"The tariff? I believe there are differences of opinion on the tariff in both parties."

Then realizing that she was making an evasive answer—"I really cannot discuss national issues," she said. "Why should I? I am in no position to influence national reforms."

Grief Amid Victory.

She had risen and was moving nervously about the room, pretending to put things to rights.

"I shall have a statement to make later, at my inauguration, no doubt which will embody my views upon all questions of immediate concern. I have issued two statements, one upon acceptance of the nomination, the other addressed to women," with which she placed her campaign documents in my hands. "Won't you read them?"

Several times she had brushed tears from her eyes. I was torn between the duty of my mission and the realization that here was a woman who since the death of her husband followed almost immediately by her nomination, the hurried campaign and her election to fill his place, probably had had no moments in which she could retire into the silence and indulge her grief. It was

BARUCH'S HIGH COURT OF COMMERCE WOULD GUIDE, NOT CHASTISE BUSINESS

His Idea, He Explains, Is to Bring About Co-operation That Would Also Help Consumer.

By KENNETH ANDREWS,
Of the New York World Staff.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.

AT the reunion of the War Industries Board held last week, Bernard M. Baruch, its former head, made the startling suggestion that there should be established a sort of High Court of Commerce. He called it that, he said, for want of a better term.

To the casual reader, perhaps, there is nothing precisely startling in this idea. (And there is not, as Baruch pointed out, since an experiment somewhat similar was tried in a former administration.) It is a proposal primarily, to establish a Government agency which would encourage whatever practices of co-operation and co-ordination in industry would be found of public benefit.

It would be an agency of judicial help and guidance for industry. Business men might come before it for guidance rather than for chastisement. They would bring to it such questions as, whether, in time of over production and low prices, they could cut down production, fix prices and bring about elimination of wasteful practices and standardization. It would be the means of defining, as clearly as possible, the Government's relation toward business.

Differing from, say, the Federal Trade Commission, it would have constructive as well as inquisitorial powers. It would be composed of business men whose experience and abilities, in the opinion of Congress, fitted them to deal justly with the vital problems which, perforce, would be put before such a Supreme Court.

What, after all, is startling about that? Well, a few weeks ago this writer listened with bewildered ears to Frank T. Johns, candidate for president of the Socialist Labor party. Johns outlined fervidly his ideas of what must be done for industry in this country. He saw a vast monopoly in which all lines of gainful activity should be made responsible to a central body. This man, representing the very humblest toilers of the land, believed that industry must be controlled and co-ordinated by a supreme body. This man, himself a worker with his hands, declared passionately that only in centralization and monopoly (in a benevolent sense) did salvation lie.

Would Save Initiative.

Now, from Baruch, the other pole, shall we say, of the industrial world, comes a suggestion that there be a board concentrating in itself the power to guide industrial relations, to the end that the consumer, as well as the business man, may gain the greatest benefits, "without," as he says, "destroying the initiative of business—a thing to be feared more than waste or abuse."

One difference between the two ideas, of course is that Baruch's is practical and Johns' is not. But, placed side by side, they give rise to thought-provoking reflections. Has industry in this country grown to such proportions that the old ideas of free, wasteful competition, "the principles sufficient for the conditions of a bygone day," must be radically revised? Is it significant that, simultaneously, from the lowest ranks of industry and from its highest, there come suggestions crying for some form of centralized direction under Government auspices, some agency which will eliminate the waste of competition in distribution and place, technically at least, a supervisory power in the hands of a Government body over industrial activities, grown so vast that the Sherman law no longer fits?

Baruch's suggestion—although it is scarcely concrete enough as yet to be called even a suggestion—arose naturally out of the experience of the War Industries Board during hostilities.

War Organized Trades.

"The war," as he stated in his report to Congress, called "American Industry During the War," "gave rise to a new kind of demand unknown in time of peace—an absolute demand, which was halted neither by prices nor difficulty of procurement. There followed an absolute shortage in some trades, and a time shortage in most of them. Group action, industry by industry, accompanied by Government control of prices and distribution, was the natural, and so far as we know, the only solution which could be devised.

"Therefore, during the war, hundreds of trades were organized for the first time into national associations, each one responsible in a real sense for its multitude of component companies. These were organized under the supervision of the Government. Practices looking to price control, conservation, control in quantity production, were inaugurated everywhere.

"In peace time, before the war, such measures would have been unthinkable; but during the war the tremendous expansion of business made them necessary. In the stress of the great efforts made in industry during the war, many business men experienced, for the first time in their careers, the great advantage, both to themselves and the public, of combination, of co-operation and common action with their natural competitors. Those associations, many of them, still stand. What shall be done about them?"

It is in the search for an adequate answer to that all-important question that Baruch has suggested this body which he tentatively calls a High Court of Commerce.

To drive those trade associations back through new legislation, or through the more rigid and rapid enforcement of present legislation, to the situation which preceded the war, would be very difficult in many cases, although in a few it is already occurring spontaneously.

"On the other hand," continued Baruch, "to leave them without further supervision than can be given by the Attorney-General's department, or by the Federal Trade Commission in its present form, will subject business men to temptations that some of them will not be able to resist—temptations to conduct their businesses for private gain with little references to the welfare of the public."

Can Do Great Good.

And these associations can do great good. By exchange of trade information, extravagant methods of production can be avoided through them. More important, as Baruch pointed out, cost of distribution can be reduced and the cost of distribution seriously affects prices, something the average consumer does not realize. These associations, also by acting as centers of information, furnishing lists of sources to producers, can serve to balance more economically supply and demand. From the point of vantage which competent men at the central bureau of an association occupy not only can new demands be cultivated, but new sources of unexploited wealth can be indicated.

"But these combinations are capable—easily capable—of doing serious damage," Baruch said. "They can subtly influence production so that it will always be just short of the current demand,

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM.

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

Coolidge on Government Intermeddling.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN a recent issue you quote the chairman of the board of temperance, prohibition and public welfare of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Washington, D. C., to the effect that President Coolidge is "the driest of the dry, and that he will make America as dry as Kansas was in the wet days."

I have no doubt that the President meant only to convey the impression that he is in favor of the enforcement of the law. In speaking on the "Limitations of the Law" before the American Bar Association at San Francisco, on Aug. 10, 1922, the President made the following remarks:

"The attempt to regulate, control and prescribe all manner of conduct and social relations is very old. It was always the practice of primitive peoples. Such governments assumed jurisdiction over the action, property, life and even religious convictions of their citizens down to the minutest detail. A large part of the history of free institutions is the history of the people struggling to emancipate themselves from all this bondage. * * * Progress has been made by the people relieving themselves of the unwarranted and unnecessary impositions of government. There exists, and must always exist, the righteous authority of the state. That is the sole source of the liberty of the individual, but it does not mean an inquisitive and officious intermeddling by attempted Government action in all the affairs of the people. There is no justification for public interference with purely private concerns. * * * The same limit of the law is manifest in the exercise of the police authority. There can be no perfect control of personal conduct by national legislation. * * *. There is no magic in government not possessed by the public at large by which these things can be done. The people cannot divest themselves of their really great burdens by undertaking to provide that they shall hereafter be borne by the Government. * * * Behind very many of these enlarging activities lies the untenable theory that there is some short cut to perfection, elevation of the standards of the nation, immediate and perceptible, by the simple device of new laws. This has never been the case in human experience. * * * Real reform does not begin with a new law, it ends with a law. The attempt to dragoon the body when the reed is to convince the soul will end only in revolt."

In all my life I have never heard or read a better speech against prohibition than these remarks of our President. If they are the sentiments of "a driest of the dry," let the prohibitionists make the most of it. We all believe in the equal enforcement of all the laws; but it is unfair of the secretary of the dry board to twist the remarks of our President in favor of law enforcement into an out-and-out dry speech. However, we are used to these unfair tactics of the paid dry reformers.

Hasten Terminal Improvements.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN your editorial column, Thursday, under heading, "Two Excellent Decisions," you state in the last paragraph: "The decision of the people ought to be followed by a definite plan to reap all possible advantages that can be gained from the railroad use of the bridge."

The committee of the Chamber of Commerce dealing with the questions of enlarged and readjusted terminals in St. Louis has been on the job for four and one-half years. Is it not time that some definite evidence of progress be shown? The press has the power to speed this work. Will it do it? H. HAFNER.

Count Karolyi.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE principal statements, inferences and inuendoes of the article on Countess Karolyi in your Sunday issue, Nov. 9, are false and misleading. Before and even during the war Count Karolyi was permitted to speak on his views whenever and whatever he pleased, and that is all a citizen can expect. The allied nations despise him, the Hungarians execrate him only for what he has done.

He disarmed and disbanded the army. Thus he executed the teaching of Lenine that the bolshevik revolution must be preceded by the dissolution of the army; he surrendered a large part of Hungary to the enemy, and thus prejudged its destiny; he transferred the Government of Hungary to the bolsheviks and thus proved himself a physical and moral coward.

Democracy in Hungary may be just as our aristocratic visitor says it is, but this has nothing to do with the case. Count Karolyi has been a traitor to everything that men hold dear, family, nation, civilization, and thousands of people have died in consequence of his misdeeds. L. KOTANY.

HAZING THE BOLTERS.

The Republican bolters are in for a hazing, so Washington thinks, when the next Congress meets in December, 1925. The prime offender, La Follette, is singled out for specially drastic discipline, but the lash will also be applied, it is assumed, to his disciples. Brookhart, Frazier and Ladd, also Norris of Nebraska, are to be excommunicated and their important committee places forfeited. The same rigorous plan of organization will obtain in the House, where the La Follette bloc, including the entire Wisconsin delegation, will be demoted.

The actual Republican majority in the House will enable the regulars in that body to effect any scheme of organization they decide upon, but even there it does seem as if conciliation, or at least discretion, were far preferable to arrogance. For the Coolidge landslide was not a party landslide. The 300 Republican Representatives elected in the Harding sweep of 1920 are reduced to 246. Instead of the Harding House majority of 168 Mr. Coolidge will have a nominal majority of 55 and a much smaller actual majority.

In the Senate the Republican majority is really hypothetical. The regulars muster a total of 49, by including Borah and Couzens and two fledglings, McMaster of South Dakota and Schall of Minnesota. But the death of Senator Lodge emphasizes the precarious character of the regulars' control in the upper chamber. To be sure, a Republican will next December occupy the chair vacated by Lodge. He will be appointed by Gov. Cox of Massachusetts, but his term will extend only to the general election of 1926, when he will have to contest the seat, presumably with Senator Walsh, whom Gillette defeated by only a few thousand votes, despite the huge Coolidge majority.

It is obvious, therefore, that the regular Republicans in the Sixty-ninth Congress can penalize the bolters. In the case of La Follette they have practical as well as sentimental reasons for doing so. La Follette is now chairman of the Committee on Manufactures. He is ranking member of the Interstate Commerce Committee and of the still more vital Finance Committee. The death of Senator Lodge, which will place Senator Cummins at the head of the Judiciary Committee, means La Follette's promotion to the chairmanship of the commerce committee, and the Wisconsin man's advance to the chairmanship of the Finance Committee is probable at least, as our correspondent explains, by the retirement of the present chairman, Senator Smoot, to accept leadership of the Mormon Church.

The regulars will never permit La Follette to assume these powerful chairmanships. It is too much to expect of them. There is no canon of politics or ethics by which La Follette can claim such preferment. He has himself cut the party ties. He is no longer a Republican, nominally or pretendedly. As a matter of sportsmanship La Follette cannot complain of any treatment the regular Republican organization accords him, however severe. Surely as the sworn enemy of that party he cannot in fairness hope still to masquerade in its colors and share in its rewards.

The Republicans can treat La Follette rough, but otherwise they should haze circumspectly. Coolidge has saved the Republican party. If it saves itself it must do more than break its bolters.

BLUE SKY AND BLACK REALITY.

The trial at Indianapolis of Morton Hawkins and associates, charged with using the mails to defraud, has revealed the heart-break and tragedy of blue-sky finance.

The victims have appeared and told their stories. No happy endings here. Only the sullen facts of grim realism.

Mrs. Edna Pierson, an old woman past 70, is penniless now, her lifetime savings of $3200 gone, compelled to scrape out such a living as she can from what odd jobs of work she can find. She made this investment in Hawkins securities on the advice of a friend and neighbor, a man of affairs, who occupied a responsible position as secretary of the Indiana State Board of Agriculture.

Other witnesses related experiences of the same general purport. Their money is lost. Altogether, an anthology of despair that flows with a bitterer gloom than Masters' Spoon River.

Everybody, of course, knows that this obverse side of stock-swindling necessarily exists. But it is not often that the desolation of such enterprises is driven home to the public mind with such cruel impact. It is not often that the meanness and criminality of the gentry that thrives by its wits are so starkly exposed.

Cynics assert that it is impossible, by laws and regulations, securely to protect the inexperienced, the unwary and the confiding from the wiles of the unscrupulous. The point may be conceded without debate. Yet attention may be directed to one feature of this wretched narrative in defense of a recent law which business finds objectionable and is preparing to move for its repeal—the law requiring publicity of income taxes. The Post-Dispatch correspondent reporting this Indianapolis trial writes:

> While the Hawkins company was sending out literature with glowing accounts of big earnings and greater prosperity ahead, it was making income tax returns showing operations at a loss.

Even with information of this kind available there may be gullibles in plenty to invest their money in worthless securities. But this law will surely protect the savings of some persons who otherwise would be swindled. And, further, such a law will make it more difficult for associates in such projects to pretend ignorance of real conditions.

A law that makes the path of the transgressor harder and provides a greater degree of protection to the public has a merit which ought to command the support of honest business.

THE RETURN OF SOLDIER DEAD.

The gigantic conflicts, the mighty heroisms of the World War, which once dominated so completely the public mind, are gradually being forgotten, pushed back into seldom explored corners of the mind by the vital problems of today.

But once in a while there creeps into some obscure column of the newspaper a brief story, a pathetic little reminder of awful sacrifice. They remind us that though the war-time fighting forces are disbanded there remains in France a little group that has kept up its work since the armistice was signed six years ago today.

They are the men who seek out and identify lonely graves behind the deserted and grass-covered trenches, and send back home the men who fell there. According to a matter-of-fact report of the Quartermaster-General of the army the bodies of 237 soldiers have been identified and some returned during the last year.

On the sixth anniversary of the armistice 46,259 war dead had been returned to sleep on American soil.

MR. COOLIDGE AS A PROPHET.

President Coolidge appeared in a new and sensational role when, addressing the Association of Land Grant Colleges, he predicted that within a few years we should have a deficit, instead of a surplus of agricultural staples and would import much more of our foodstuffs.

Growth of population and our irresistible drive towards industrialization, he thinks, will bring about this situation. He says we were pretty well along towards this condition when the World War created a temporary and artificial stimulation of agricultural production, with its "ultimately disastrous consequences." He declares as a matter of fact, admittedly not generally known, that we are even now consuming more calories than we produce.

If it takes a prophet to contradict a prophet Mr. Coolidge occupies an impregnable position so far as we are concerned. It may be permissible, though, to doubt, and to submit such arguments as may be mustered in support of that doubt. Dismissing the world's food problem, which eventually may become acute, according to the modern disciples of Malthus, and considering the United States only, it does seem as if Mr. Coolidge had not examined the subject and weighed the different factors with his traditional painstaking care.

What is the reason for our industrialization? Obviously the most potent reason is the certainty of larger rewards. Our business genius has abandoned the farm, but would it not ardently return if agriculture promised commensurate results? And would not that situation be approximated when the country was obliged to import a large proportion of its food? Let food prices reach the point where farming competed, in point of possible profits, with industry and business capacity would take to the furrow as enthusiastically as it has swung to the factory.

Economic opportunity is the magic that determines the trend of industrial evolution. The call of back-to-the-land will be answered exultantly whenever the land yields the required dividends.

James J. Hill foresaw a meager day when the American people would go to work without breakfast. Such empty-cupboard forecasts, whether by the Hills or the Coolidges, are not likely to cause anxiety—not so long as we have a Mississippi Valley which, fully reclaimed and cultivated, would feed the world.

Following the style of "actress" and "aviatrix," shall we not have the term "Senatress" or "Senatrix"?

POETS ON POSTAGE STAMPS.

Letters now arriving from France bear the stamp of approval of poetry by the French Government. It is, quite handily, a postage stamp. The face of Pierre de Ronsard, framed in a lyre, appears on the little blue sticker. Thus, in the year marking the close of the fourth century since his birth, does France honor one of her famous poets. We are advised that Portugal has issued a series of postage stamps in commemoration of Camoens, her national bard, who also was born in 1524. Last April Greece gave Lord Byron the fleeting glory of a letter sticker bearing his likeness.

According to the more-or-less humorists, one of the major woes of minor poets is their traditional inability to purchase postage for the round trips of their rejected manuscripts. Let them now take heart. Three nations, in this single year, have put poets on postage stamps. That, in a way, is but poetic justice.

In America we honor our Presidents thus, but not our poets. Yet some of our poets are more handsome, and more deserving of commemoration, than are some of our Presidents. We mention no names, as to Presidents; but as to poets, names of eligibles leap to lips in lyric acclaim. The bearded and benevolent likeness of Longfellow, to mention but one, should be acceptable to any stamp licker, irrespective of politics.

It is not to be expected, of course, that the present administration can be induced to honor another bearded bard, Walt Whitman, who is known as "the poet of democracy," and who was fired from a job in the Interior Department in an earlier Republican administration, because he was found guilty of having written "Leaves of Grass." But American literature carries the names and fames of plenty of innocuous poets, any one of whom would look lovely on a postage stamp. We pass the hint along.

BIRTH CONTROL DISCUSSION.

The subject of birth control has been before the public recently, in its advocacy by Lord Dawson, physician to the King of England, and its opposition by the Bishop of Exeter, and lastly by the lecture by Mrs. Mary Ware Dennett, director of the Voluntary Parenthood League, at the Sheldon Memorial, Wednesday evening. The question is coming to the front, and at the next Congress a strong effort will be made to pass the Cummins-Vaile bill, making it legal to supply the information which was made taboo by a law passed at the instance of the late Anthony Comstock 51 years ago.

In Great Britain, it is said, physicians generally hold with Dr. Dawson that all mothers ought to have access to this knowledge. It is contended that the more intelligent and well-to-do classes practice birth control, there and in the United States, where, it is claimed, the normal birth rate is 50 per 1000 or more, while the actual rate is but 28 per thousand. But in both countries there is the most determined opposition to the spread of this knowledge, mainly from church leaders.

Speaking for the opposition, the magazine Forward, published by the great City of London Maternity Hospital, voices what is perhaps the best answer to the advocates of the new knowledge. It says: "Those behind the scenes in the divorce courts find that one of the increased causes of divorce is birth control propaganda. It is encouraging married women to forego the duties of motherhood." And it foresees the time when married women with children will be ridiculed as out of fashion.

Let the discussion go on. It has escaped from the whispering gallery.

Emma Goldman is acclaimed a competent witness against the soviet government by the very people who were most contemptuous of her word when she was panning capitalism.

SOCRATES AND HIS PUPILS.

Socrates: I suppose you young men have been reading the estimates of Senator Lodge?

Glaucon: Yes. We have read some of them.

Socrates: Did it seem to you difficult, considering everything, to arrive at an estimate of him that will probably last?

Polemarchus: I thought so. One naturally looked to a newspaper like the Springfield Republican to say what his influence had been, but when we came to read it we learned only that his influence had been great without an attempt to judge it.

Socrates: I noticed that. Of course, the difficulty lies in a disinclination to say anything about the League of Nations. That subject is with us inseparable from so many painful subjects that we try to avoid it. Nevertheless, it is true, as the Republican and every other commentator says, that the League of Nations made Senator Lodge famous. He did, single-handed, bringing to the issue the experience and prestige of a long and powerful career, keep us out of the league and perhaps definitely settle our policy against going into it. It is quite plain that however much we may wish to reverse that policy there is no use saying anything about it. So many things with which the league has nothing to do enter into that discussion that, like the campaign we have just had, we could not hope to make head or tail of the clutter.

Thrasymachus: We know these things, Socrates. Still, as young men, we would like to have you say what the influence of Senator Lodge was. The matter can be confidential among us, no one outside this circle need hear of it at all, and none of the irrelevant ghosts that abide in that issue will find itself roused.

Socrates: Very well. It was said of Caesar that his influence determined the course of civilization for almost a thousand years. We know that pretty much everything that has happened in Europe through the past 100 years resulted from the career of Napoleon. So men powerfully placed do fix the course of history, and it is entirely likely that this was the role of Senator Lodge. Except for him, his leadership, those motives which the Republican hesitates to define and the hurts resulting from the war in a country deriving from all the European countries involved, we would doubtless have joined the league and sat like MacGregor at the head of the table. That we did not join it and compelled it to make its difficult way without a beneficent leadership which we alone could have exerted may, for all we know now, become the most potent deterrent to civilization which history shall ever record. There are people who think that the influence of Senator Lodge will not be as permanent as all that. They think that in ways not arousing the resentments of the country against it we can help the league, as we have been doing, and make it in time all that it was designed to be by its founders. If these people are right, then Senator Lodge is not going to matter much one way or another. The injury he did will be buried with him or soon after. But most people interested in this subject probably do not share any such feeling. They regard the opportunity as lost. Something we do not quite perceive, something not lending itself to one's understanding of our own desire to aid and abet civilization, something strangely foreign to our desire for peace and utterly contradictory to it, seems always lifting and never lessening its sinister shadow between us and the millennium at the threshhold of which we all one time stood, ecstatic and starry-eyed, with Woodrow Wilson.

Glaucon: That was wonderfully said, Socrates. I wish I could share the optimism of those who discount the influence of Senator Lodge. Evidently you also are unable to do so.

Socrates: You are quite right, my dear Glaucon. I think the influence of Senator Lodge will last until the souls of men everywhere are again stirred as they were in those days when he dragged us down from those heights beyond which we saw the Promised Land of Peace. It is only cataclysmically that such a phenomenon can occur.

Polemarchus: So that it all comes to——

Socrates: This, merely, that the influence of Senator Lodge was perhaps the greatest tragedy in history. You must recall that what happened did so when the aspirations of men through thousands of years seemed about to be realized.

Glaucon: That is, it was a cumulative disaster.

Socrates: Yes.

Thrasymachus: You have it, I think.

Socrates: Very well. Now let us match pennies to see who will fetch a stick of wood.

OZARKS IN NOVEMBER.

They have healed the gashes thru my heart:
Brown and smooth scars.
To hide them
I drop ashes of silent color:
Day radiance,
Under the singing stars. . . .

Gold scars that cloud up beneath heavy feet
They are.
Brown scars where brown leaves fall to pillowed sleep.
Saffron and crimson meet:
Overhead the crimson sky,
Below, the saffron trees
Arch to greet each other—to hide each scar!

But in the night,
The owls flight
Between the pearl-cusped moon
And me
Still touches me to tears because—I have my silences. . . .

My tender silence,
For me forgetting what I fear
And drawing closer, bring near
The old alone—my old, old own. . . . 2

What matter scars—
My autumn wines of wind shall make them love;
My blood—and gold—and wine of woods
Once tasted—like my very children
They shall learn to sing. . . .
They shall add another voice to that old paen
Of my silences. . . .

CHRISTIANIZING HAWAII.

From the Diary of Nancy Ruggles, written in 1820, and now published in the Atlantic Monthly for November.

HAD a visit from the chief, his two wives and two widows of King Tamahamaha, with a numerous train of attendants. * * * The Chief was dressed in English and appeared well. His wives and the Queens were clothed in China dresses on account of our being on board. They generally go almost naked. The Queens are monstrous women, judged to weigh about 400 pounds each. Their heads were both crowned with a wreath of yellow feathers. The sight of white females was a novelty to them. They expressed a desire to become acquainted with our customs, were much pleased with the idea of writing, tried themselves and succeeded very well.

King Oreoreo (Liholiho, Tamahamaha's son) and his five young Queens came on board today and dined with us. He is a young man of about 20, appears very good-natured, but extremely indolent in his habits. The wives appear pleasant, and as they wish to learn to read. Two of them are his half-sisters, and one of them was formerly the wife of his father. * * * At dinner we were happily disappointed to see the order and decency of the table. It was set in the American style, furnished with baked pig, roasted fish, potatoes, turnow, etc. After dinner we took a walk but were thronged with such a multitude that our walk was uncomfortable. We are the first American females that ever visited these islands; if an old man or woman could run before us and take a peek under our bonnets they appeared highly gratified.

HONESTY THE BEST POLICY.

From the Philadelphia Bulletin.

POLAND is the latest European country to join the honorable company of self-respecting nations who have agreed to settle in full with the United States. The arrangement to refund its obligation of $178,000,000 to this country has been completed in every detail and only awaits formal execution of the Debt Commission to become effective. In this it comes into line with Cuba, which has discharged its debt entirely, and with Great Britain, Lithuania, Finland and Hungary, which have made funding agreements in the fair and square disposition of their debt problems. It will find this policy pays in financial credit and reputation as well as in the satisfaction derived from the honorable settlement of a just debt.

A "ZEP" FOR EACH POLE.

From the Detroit News.

THE dirigible ZR-3 is now in America after a remarkable nonstop flight from Germany; and now the question is, what is the Government going to do with her? A battleship has many uses; it has powerful guns which can be fired at targets for the training of gun crews; and as a young lady once remarked, the decks make dandy dance floors. But what can be done with a Zep? When we had but one dirigible, the Shenandoah, the Navy Department made extensive preparations for running her to the North Pole. Now we have two. And, by a remarkable coincidence, there are two poles.

How Brookings Is To Cut Governm

States in the most simple and understandable form. The institute shall be administered by the trustees without regard to the special interest of any group in the body politic, either political, social or economic."

But it was soon seen that men trained in the technique of governmental economics were needed not only in the Government but in the institutes as well. The universities and graduate schools were turning out men versed in the theories of political economy, but with little practical experience. The first job was to train men in the actualities of present day government rather than in the theories of David Ricardo and Adam Smith.

Dr. Brookings was in the position of an inventor who has designed a machine but hasn't the tools wherewith to build it. Obviously the thing to do was first to get the tools. Dr. Brookings tried to get his specialists through the Washington University graduate school. Under this plan, the graduate students were to have two years in St. Louis and one year in Washington. But St. Louis was too far from the center of activity and the sources of information. Dr. Brookings boldly founded his own school in Washington, where the students would study for two years. The connection with Washington University is maintained, however, as it confers the Ph. D. degree upon those who have satisfactorily completed their work in the Brookings school. During the last year other universities have recognized the Brookings school and it is now possible for students to get their degree from their own alma mater after finishing the Washington research course.

The Brookings school presents a new conception in American education. The closest comparison is with All Souls College, Oxford, where the fellows or professors devote their lives to scholastic research.

At the school most of the instruction is informal. The school boasts of no large buildings or classrooms. The lectures, which are given in what was once the salon of an old mansion near the White House, have the appearance of impromptu debates with the instructor guiding the trend of the discussion.

Homelike Surroundings.

All the students live in one of the three homes maintained by the school and eat in a common dining hall, as in the Oxford colleges. After meals they saunter into the rooms of the library, where discussion is continued, just as in the Oxford junior common rooms.

This year the college has 28 students, four of whom are women. Last year there were 15 students. It is expected that this number will take their degrees next June.

These students are carefully selected from universities throughout the United States. Dr. Brookings has established 20 fellowships, worth $1000 a year, as the holders receive free tuition and their room rent and board are gratis. The other students pay this amount to the school.

Strict examinations, oral and written, are given the candidates for the fellowships, who must also submit tangible evidence of their efforts in the economics field, such as published books, or a record of service in some college or Government department. A bachelor of arts degree is the first prerequisite.

W. J. Shepard, formerly of the University of Missouri, later of Washington University department of political science, and Prof. Walton H. Hamilton, formerly of Amherst, share with Dr. Brookings the direction of the school.

The list of instructors and lecturers include Vernon Kellogg, David Friday, Willmott Lewis, William E. Dodd, John A. Hobson and Harold G. Moulton. Visiting public men also give one or two lectures.

Possibilities of School.

Consider the possibilities of a school of practical economics in Washington. In the first place, the students live under ideal conditions for group study. The three old homes taken over by the school are a vast improvement over the usual college dormitory plan. Line one of the homes with the latest books on political economy, history, business relations, finance, industry, philosophy and fiction, and you have the school library, where students can read or study, not in stiff chairs, but in sprawling, cushioned armchairs, with bridge lamps at their side.

Consider next the sources of information available and the direct contacts to be had with governmental officials. There are the Congressional library, with many original sources, the departments, the embassies and legations, with their libraries and current publications, and finally the numerous commissions appointed by Congress or the President to make investigations of special topics of economic interest. The statistics and reports of the Federal Trade Commission or the Federal Tariff Commission alone are enough to keep any economic student busy for years—and it takes a student to make sense out of many of the reports.

What They Are Studying.

Above all there is the common interest of the students. Those studying her course for c the proper t imbued with and partic Government.

How Brookings Is Trying To Cut Government Cost

States in the most simple and understandable form. The institute shall be administered by the trustees without regard to the special interest of any group in the body politic, either political, social or economic."

But it was soon seen that men trained in the technique of governmental economics were needed not only in the Government but in the institutes as well. The universities and graduate schools were turning out men versed in the theories of political economy, but with little practical experience. The first job was to train men in the actualities of present day government rather than in the theories of David Ricardo and Adam Smith.

Dr. Brookings was in the position of an inventor who has designed a machine but hasn't the tools wherewith to build it. Obviously the thing to do was first to get the tools. Dr. Brookings tried to get his specialists through the Washington University graduate school. Under this plan, the graduate students were to have two years in St. Louis and one year in Washington. But St. Louis was too far from the center of activity and the sources of information. Dr. Brookings boldly founded his own school in Washington, where the students would study for two years. The connection with Washington University is maintained, however, as it confers the Ph. D. degree upon those who have satisfactorily completed their work in the Brookings school. During the last year other universities have recognized the Brookings school and it is now possible for students to get their degree from their own alma maters after finishing the Washington research course.

The Brookings school presents a new conception in American education. The closest comparison is with All Souls College, Oxford, where the fellows or professors devote their lives to scholastic research.

At the school most of the instruction is informal. The school boasts of no large buildings or classrooms. The lectures, which are given in what was once the salon of an old mansion near the White House, have the appearance of impromptu debates with the instructor guiding the trend of the discussion.

Homelike Surroundings.

All the students live in one of the three homes maintained by the school and eat in a common dining hall, as in the Oxford colleges. After meals they saunter into the rooms of the library, where discussion is continued, just as in the Oxford junior common rooms.

This year the college has 38 students, four of whom are women. Last year there were 15 students. It is expected that this number will take their degrees next June.

These students are carefully selected from universities throughout the United States. Dr. Brookings has established 20 fellowships, worth $1000 a year, as the holders receive free tuition and their room rent and board are gratis. The other students pay this amount to the school.

Strict examinations, oral and written, are given the candidates for the fellowships, who must also submit tangible evidence of their efforts in the economics field, such as published books, or a record of service in some college or Government department. A bachelor of arts degree is the first prerequisite.

W. J. Shepard, formerly of the University of Missouri, later of Washington University department of political science, and Prof. Walton H. Hamilton, formerly of Amherst, share with Dr. Brookings the direction of the school.

The list of instructors and lecturers include Vernon Kellogg, David Friday, Willmott Lewis, William E. Dodd, John A. Hobson and Harold G. Moulton. Visiting public men also give one or two lectures.

Possibilities of School.

Consider the possibilities of a school of practical economics in Washington. In the first place, the students live under ideal conditions for group study. The three old homes taken over by the school are a vast improvement over the usual college dormitory plan. Line one of the homes with the latest books on political economy, history, business relations, finance, industry, philosophy and fiction, and you have the school library. There students can read or study, not in stiff chairs, but in sprawling, cushioned armchairs, with bridge lamps at their side.

Consider next the sources of information available and the direct contacts to be had with governmental officials. There are the Congressional library, with many original sources, the departments, the embassies and legations, with their libraries and current publications, and finally the numerous commissions appointed by Congress or the President to make investigations of special topics of economic interest. The statistics and reports of the Federal Trade Commission or the Federal Tariff Commission alone are enough to keep any economic student busy for years—and it takes a student to make sense out of many of the reports.

What They Are Studying.

Above all there is the common interest of the students. Those studying here are not taking the course for culture or because it is the proper thing ot do. Each is imbued with the idea of service—and particularly service to his Government.

Here are some of the subjects being studied this year by students: Claude Leon Brenner from the University of Michigan is completing a study of rural credits; Orval Bennett of St. Louis is working on the problem of the Federal Trade Commission; Fred E. Berquist of Spokane, Wash., has mineral economics and the conservation of resources as his special interest; Forrest Black of Ohio expects to get his doctor's degree with a thesis on "The War Power of the Federal Government."

Miss Edna Cers of New York is engaged on a study of the use of injunctions in labor disputes; William H. Edwards of Ohio, a Brookings fellow, has published a pamphlet on Gov. Vic Donahey and the Ohio Mayors; John G. Heinberg of Jackson, Mo., another Brookings fellow, is studying the history and theory of majority rule; Miss Buel Leopard, who was an assistant to Floyd Shoemaker of the Missouri Historical Society, expects to have a comprehensive survey of the State government of Missouri off the press next year; Frank Tannenbaum of New York, the author of several books, has criminology for his special interest; Karl K. Van Meter of St. Louis is engaged on a study of public utilities.

What Brookings Says.

Let Dr. Brookings tell what he expects of the school.

"We are teaching these students the technique of government," Dr. Brookings said, "and in a few years we will be able to supply specialists to almost every department of the Government. As the result of their studies, which will be published, easily understood information will be available to Congress, public officials and others interested in government. These publications will enable Congress to legislate more intelligently, officials to administer their offices more efficiently, and the ordinary citizen to understand more thoroughly what the Federal Government is doing and trying to do.

"In conjunction with the research instotute, the school is helping prepare monographs on every Government department. Many of these have been published and more will be. Each will be an authorative work on what the departments, divisions and bureaus are doing. These monographs alone show how much overlapping there is in the Government. We hope to make a separate study of every state government, which should be of inestimable value to the citizens of those states. In all probability the next few years will see a monthly journal published by the school and the institutes, giving the information the students and the experts have dug out of the dry statistics.

"Funds for the school and the institutes are certain. I have assurances from the Carnegie Corporation and the private contributors that any money needed will be forthcoming."

Anyone who has studied how Dr. Brookings has organized the school and institutes, how he has interested other philanthropists and business men in his projects, and how he has given his own money without stint, will accept the latter statement as sufficient assurance for funds.

School for the World.

He hopes that as the years go on, students will come from all parts of the world to his school, much as they go now to the London School of Economics. Incidently it might be noted that one of the lecturers of this London school is now in the Brookings school on Laura Spelman Rockefeller Memorial Fellowship. He is Herman Finer of London, the author of several books, one of which is "Representative Government and a Parliament of Industry." At present his special interest is Civil Service administration.

The enrollment will be kept down as the quality of the students rather than quantity is the standard. Dr. Brookings believes the school will reach its maximum efficiency with not more than a hundred students, but these of the best.

Care will be taken, Brookings said, to get students who are interested in practical, not theoretical economics.

Tariff, Coal, Steel, Sugar.

"We believe that economics and political science can and should be studied inductively as well as deductively. Too much time has been spent upon investigations which have no practical value. Our students are studying the tariff, agricultural problems and the basic industries, such as the coal, steel and the sugar trades.

"Some may say that this work is piecemeal and not comprehensive. Our idea is that only by piecemeal investigation can the problems be intelligently solved, and that afterward the results can be collated by experts, so that the findings and deductions can be easily understood.

"The present budget law has saved the American people millions of dollars and the savings have been shown in the reduction of income taxes. Our present work is not so spectacular and will be more gradual, yet we believe that it will be just as important. We do not intend to claim credit for this work—we are here to serve the Government, and if we are able to cut down the price of popular government we shall feel that we have done a service for ourselves and the nation."

and thus keep the prices even higher and going higher. They can encourage understandings about prices and hold them at high levels. Nearly every business man in the country learned by the war that a shortage in his product, if it is not too great, is distinctly to his advantage.

"And that is why this country faces the question: What shall be the Government's attitude toward industrial co-operation? What kind of governmental organization can be devised to protect the consumer, while at the same time these associations may be preserved to carry on the excellent work of which they are capable? We must demand all proper measures for the suppression of unfair competition and unreasonable restraint of trade. But shall the Government encourage consolidation into large units by great enterprises?

"In my opinion this is a necessary growth. The result of it would be to increase production and lower the cost of distribution, thereby bringing into the life of everybody many things which formerly they could not buy. But let me insist that competition must be preserved. It is essential. I must not be misunderstood as advocating any curtailment of this. What we seek is to eliminate unnecessary wastes of competition, with their consequent unjust burdens on the public. Protection of rights is more important than prevention of evils.

"In the face of this, what shall be the new relationship between Government and industry? Shall the Sherman antitrust law break up such great associations and combinations, or shall business be permitted to combine for better production and distribution? Will the Government control industry with regulatory powers, as it has the railroads?

"Perhaps the answer lies in enlarging the much abused Federal Trade Commission and investing it with constructive powers. Perhaps some such body as I have tentatively called a High Court of Commerce should be established. In any case, we cannot act under a negative program; we must have a positive one.

"Such a plan as I have in mind would provide a way of approaching industry, or, rather of inviting industry to approach the Government, in a friendly spirit, with a view to help, not to harass and hinder. Labor will receive inherent protection from the existing tendency to recoup losses by cutting down the labor overhead in periods when low prices have resulted from overproduction, for such a court will be a check against systemless overproduction.

The purpose is not that the Government should undertake any such far-reaching control over industry as that practiced by the War Industries Board during the war emergency. But the experiences of war should be capitalized. Its heritage of wholesome practices should be accepted and studied and adapted to the problems of peace. That new spirit of service which developed in industry during the war and which, I am happy to say, still persists in many great industries, should be preserved and protected. All this should be stimulated and safeguarded by some Government agency, clothed with power and responsibility.

"It may be that for this purpose a High Court of Commerce may be devised which could be to business men what the Supreme Court to lawyers; a body of power and dignity, membership in which might be for the most competent men in industry the goal and crown of a successful career."

CHURCH ATTENDANCE IN ARMY SHOWS INCREASE

Official Report Attributes This to Higher Standards for Chaplains and Co-operation of Commanders.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Army church attendance is on the increase.

In his annual report to Secretary Weeks, Col. John T. Axton, chief of chaplains, said that during the last fiscal year, attendance at army religious services went to 1,339,473, an increase of more than 300,000 over the preceding year. The figures, he added, indicated that "every one in the military establishment attended some form of religious service at an army post 11 times during the year."

The report sets forth that 15,000 services of all kinds were held during the year, with total attendance ranging from 519,394 for 3399 general evening services, to 175,032 for 4010 Sunday school sessions and to 141,620 for 1191 masses; and that 566 marriages, 722 baptisms and 924 funerals took place.

The increase in chaplain activities was ascribed by Col. Axton to the "hearty co-operation of commanding officers and to the fact that the standards for chaplain personnel are gradually being raised, their training is becoming more effective and supervision of their work active and alert."

Also, Col. Axton pointed out, the army chaplain now no longer limits his work to the pulpit, but takes part in all manifestations of army life.

NOTICE TO SOLVERS OF TANGLED COMICS

Your solution contains writing when you correct a word in your Tangled Comic. This makes it subject to first class or letter postage.

If you do not put the required amount of postage upon your solution, when mailing, it is very likely to be sent to the Dead Letter Office in Washington, when name of sender is not visible, or withheld by the Post Office Department until you can be notified of postage due. A Visit With Wyoming's New Woman Governor cruel for another woman to detain her. The motor was already waiting at the door with the friends who were to conduct her to Denver to catch a train for an indefinite destination in "the South." I rose to go.

She detained me to say: "Please emphasize that I feel a special responsibility to the women of the country. That I hope especially for the sake of the future of women in political affairs that my administration will reflect credit and that people will be able to say afterward, 'well done and thank you.'"

The acceptance statements had been in the nature of a platform in which she pledged support of the cause of labor, relief for agriculture, equitable apportionment of taxes and strict economy in administration, defense of the primary laws. It ended with:

"I count upon an understanding of the brevity of this statement at this time, and of the impossibility of my making any active effort in my own behalf during the campaign. I have endeavored to outline what appealed to me as matters of primary importance to those to whom my candidacy is presented.

"In conclusion, I want to add that I am not unmindful of the great responsibility, this office entails, and, in the case of my election, while I should expect to avail myself of the counsel of all persons without regard to party, having information and opinions on the questions placed before me, I shall expect and feel in duty bound to make my own decisions in every case, realizing that upon me rests the responsibility. The fact of my being a woman in no way alters my obligation to the people in this respect. Under no circumstances would I have accepted this nomination had not my familiarity with and my interest in my husband's work given me an understanding of the problems of the office and a reliance upon my own ability to assume the responsibilities laid down by him."

Her Appeal to Women.

The appeal to women voters, after a tribute to the founders of the State for being the first to honor women with all the rights and privileges of citizenship, read:

"Once more Wyoming pays a signal honor to our sex, in that a great political party has conferred unsought, upon a woman the nomination for the highest executive office in the State.

"In view of these facts, it would scarcely become us as women to present my candidacy as a demand for recogniton which had heretofore been resisted. However, there is now offered for the first time to the women of Wyoming an opportunity for representation that has never been achieved by the women of any State. That I should be the woman through whom such achievement might become possible fills me with profound appreciation, and in case of my election, I should feel a deep sense of responsibility toward my sex, and should hope to so conduct my administration that it might never be said women were unfitted for executive office.

It is my belief that the men of our State have no innate objection to a woman in any political position, of convinced that she possesses the requisite ability and integrity. Certainly, if this is the attitude of our men, the women of our State will not hesitate to exert themselves in my behalf, if they are satisfied that the policies for which I stand will be of benefit to the State."

First Equal Suffrage Vote.

Mrs. Ross had referred me in the meantime to Joseph C. O'Mahoney, vice chairman of the Democratic State Committee, who had been her campaign manager for all essential details concerning the making of the first woman Governor.

His name might suggest emotional enthusiasm, but such was not his manner at all.

It had all come about in the tamest, most expected manner. You see, they are used to considering women in politics in Wyoming. This State has had equal suffrage for 55 years, long before other states began to fight for it. There have been any number of women legislators. There is a woman State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Wherever a woman has chosen to run for office she has been given an equal show.

It was in 1869 that Wyoming as a territory conferred equal citizenship upon women, probably to invite woman immigration. They didn't exactly confer it at that. A State Legislature passed the measure, but a Governor was about to veto it when a group of women headed by Mrs. Esther Morris and Mrs. Amalia Post (wife of the delegate to Congress) went to his residence and announced their intention of staying until he signed the bill. The Governor subsequently appointed Mrs. Morris Justice of the Peace at South Pass. So perhaps the character of the pioneer women had something to do with it.

Resented in Congress.

In 1889 when application was made for admission into the Union, Wyoming reaffirmed its belief in the theory. The suffrage clause in its Constitution as submitted was the occasion for one of those bitter partisan fights in the Congress. Wyoming was regarded as a Republican state and Democrats were not welcoming the prospect of any more Republican votes than could be avoided. Of course, they based their objections ostensibly upon the old familiar ground of man's desire to protect and spare the weaker sex added responsibilities. The debate lasted for days. Eorensics waxed higher and higher and Territorial Delegate Joseph M. Carey, duly impressed, informed the folks back home that he feared the suffrage clause would have to be abandoned if the State was to be admitted. The State Legislature was in session at the time and promptly by telegraph came an ultimatum.

"We will remain out of the Union for a hundred years rather than come in without woman suffrage."

That's the way they still feel about it in Wyoming. Always they have cherished the tradition of being the first suffrage state and when it was learned that a first woman Governor was about to be elected in another state, it was necessary only to step on the accelerator and hurry things up a bit in order to have the first woman Governor in the first suffrage state. "Beat Texas to it," was a slogan of the campaign.

But there were other, probably more compelling, reasons for this particular woman's election. And this, I learned, is the way it came about.

Her Husband Popular.

Gov. Ross on a campaign trip speaking on behalf of a Severance Tax amendment (a sort of royalty or export tax on State products to be applied to educational development) was stricken with appendicitis and brought back to Cheyenne, where a few days later, on Oct. 2, he died. He had been an exceptionally popular Governor even as a Democrat surrounded by Republicans in office.

Many reforms are attributed to him; among them a law enacted at a specially called legislative session converting the income from State lands (which leased to oil and mining companies had become enormous) into a fund for farm loans. The State now does an extensive farm loan business. Another was increasing the valuation of Union Pacific properties in the State to correspond with their valuation in neighboring states, thus yielding taxes on an additional $8,000,000 valuation and reducing individual taxes correspondingly.

He must have been exceedingly attractive personally, a man of unquestioned integrity, great courage and great ability. He was a typical pioneer, coming into the State 22 years ago with only a newly acquired law diploma as capital, growing up with the State and rising in politics from Prosecuting Attorney of Laramie County to being defeated by only small majorities first for Congress, then for Governor.

He came originally from Tennessee and consistently flew the Democratic banner in a State which outsiders have been led to think of politically as one vast sheep ranch owned exclusively by Senator Warren. However, Mr. O'Mahoney says this is a wrong impression. That Wyoming is as independent as a Government mule in politics. Haven't they a Democratic Senator, John B. Kendrick, and did they not defeat Congressman Mondell when he attempted to supplant him?

At any rate, in the fierce light which beats upon a Governor, William B. Ross was gaining in popularity when he was snatched off in the flower of his career. He was 51 years old.

Sympathy for the Widow.

The whole State was stricken with grief which quickly turned to sympathy for the woman who, they knew, had stood by his side and became closely identified with all his movements through the years.

For Mrs. Ross had become known wherever he was known. Not that she ever had asserted herself in public. She had plenty of occupation in the rearing of three sons. But they were known as a most intimately devoted husband and wife, not only in their domestic relations but in their mutual efforts to advance him in his career. Everyone credits Mrs. Ross with an unusual faculty for criticism, and it is said that her husband came to rely upon her for criticism of his weak points as well as praise for his strong ones and to seek her advice upon public as frequently as upon personal questions.

Transplanted From Missouri.

She had been a Miss Tayloe of St. Joseph, daughter of a family which traces its lineage through the old South. He had gone back after a year in Cheyenne to fetch here here as a bride. Without ever sacrificing a certain aristocratic bearing she quickly adapted herself to raw Western conditions. Pretty soon twins arrived, Ambrose and George, now students at the State University, George specializing in law but Ambrose now declaring his intention of leaving school and entering business. Twelve years ago another son, Bradford, was born. He attends the grade schools in Cheyenne.

They had their share of struggling with adversity, but Mrs. Ross never permitted household economies to absorb the time she proposed to give her husband in their mutual studies toward his advancement. People tell of how in earlier days visitors dropping in of an evening invariably found them reading, studying, discussing together subjects that would develop him in his profession. And the same regime continued in the Executive Mansion. I had noted the well-worn volumes that lined two sides of the library, conspicuous among them literature of the South, digests of the laws of Southern states, books and speeches of great orators. They were particularly fond of reading speeches. There was much modern literature, too, and on the table magazines of both popular and literary character, some of them the smarter order of women's magazines, these reflecting other facets of the mistress of the mansion, for she is credited as much with feminine charm and graces as with wisdom and learning.

To resume, if public grief, sympathy, the personal popularity of the late Governor, wide acquaintance of his wife over the State were not enough to cause the populace at once to think of the Governor's widow as his successor, there were other reasons. There was the desire to have the administration go on functioning uninterruptedly. There was the general feeling that the Governor had been elected for four years and that he was entitled to continue even vicariously. There was the feeling that something should be done to provide for the family since the Governor had left no means whatever, though, it was pointed out that he might have increased his fortunes at any time through intimate knowledge of State oil land leases, had he not leaned altogether away from anything of that sort in his integrity.

These feelings were shared by Republicans and Democrats alike.

The Secretary of State automatically succeeds the Governor in this State, there being no Lieutenant-Governor, but the law provides that unless the executive dies within 20 days of a general election, conventions may be called and new candidates nominated.

The Democrats in the absence of another outstanding candidate were quick to see the advantages Mrs. Ross presented. Accordingly, they called a convention of the authorized State committee Oct. 14 and she was nominated by acclamation without another candidate being mentioned.

The Republicans called a convention simultaneously and nominated Eugene J. Sullivan of Casper, an oil man. It is to be remembered that Tea Pot Dome is in Wyoming, though not under State jurisdiction. Nevertheless, the State draws large annuities from royalties and has large holdings of oil lands in its own right. The Democrats did not neglect to point out that the Governor as ex-officio chairman of the land board presides over all discussions concerning the State oil lands. Certainly they made the most of Sullivan's menacing connections. This candidate was obliged to make an aggressive campaign to poll his 28,414 votes; even in a Republican year.

The campaign of Mrs. Ross, on the other hand, was anything but aggressive. Bowed with grief, she was in no mood to take the stump, if ever that had been her mode of expression. She wrote those two statements, and only two. Together they comprised some 700 words. That was all she did, but they were forceful statements and in their clarity of diction almost Wilsonian. Clear expression in written words is a gift with which she is endowed. The late Governor frequently called upon her for assistance when beset with the numerous proclamations a Governor is expected to issue.

A Labor day proclamation into which in a few paragraphs was put a world of feeling balanced with logic, was copied in labor journals all over the country as the sentiments of the Governor of Wyoming. It was written by Mrs. Ross, and it won her the labor vote when the time came.

State Official Balks.

O'Mahoney and other friends took the stump for her, and Senator Kendick sent his written indorsement. The whole campaign had to be wound up within 20 days. The result was, she led her ticket by 7000 and defeated her opponent by 8000 votes. Only consistent scratching throughout the State could have accomplished this.

O'Mahoney pointed to a chart on his desk to what he said was a typical precinct report. It gave Coolidge 183, Davis 39, Sullivan 153 and Ross 243.

There still is a chance that Republicans may attempt to frustrate the hopes of the Wyoming electorate. It may be claimed that an election at this time is not legal and that Frank E. Lucas, Secretary of State, a Republican, is entitled to continue in office. I was told, not by Mr. O'Mahoney, that the Secretary appears to be proceeding upon this assumption, promoting employes here and dismissing them there. But he was not mentioned as a Republican candidate, and it is thought he hardly will be upheld.

Governor-elect Ross, it is learned, is now in Memphis visiting two brothers, George and Ambrose Tayloe. Another brother is Judge S. G. Tayloe of San Antonio.

COMPANY ASKS TO RAISE RATES ON BUSINESS PHONES

Seeks to Increase Charges by Total of $900,000 on 23,500 Connections Because of Merger.

RESIDENCE SERVICE NOT TO BE AFFECTED

Petition Says Operating Costs Are Higher and Revenue Is Needed to Cover These.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 15.—The Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. today filed an application with the State Public Service Commission for permission to increase its rates on 23,500 business telephones $900,000 annually as a result of the merger of the Bell and Kinloch Telephone Co. properties, completed Aug. 4 last.

Officials of the company said the increase, if granted, will permit earnings of 9.92 per cent for depreciation and return on the valuation of the merged properties, which is given as approximately $25,000,000.

Under the $12,500,000 valuation of the properties which the commission approved July 31, 1921, the company is permitted to earn 13.68 per cent on that figure. The petition points out that, whereas the value of the company property has by purchase and addition doubled, it seeks to increase business telephone rates only $900,000, and is thus taking a reduction on the percentage return it is now permitted to earn. Residence telephone rates will not be increased.

Large Increase in Valuation.

Since the 1921 valuation, the petition says, the company has constructed new properties at a cost of $7,289,658 and has acquired Kinloch company property at a cost of $5,186,099, an increase in value of $12,475,757 over the 1921 figure.

It is stated that the present income from the combined and improved properties is $1,846,632, or only $265,998 more than that allowed under the 1921 valuation, when the properties of the company were only half their present value. The company, as a consequence, the petition says, has only $265,998 to pay for depreciation and reserve on the $12,475,757 in betterments and extensions which have been added since that time. At the same rate allowed in 1921 the company would require a total rate increase of $1,440,686 to cover the increased valuation, it is stated, but is requesting an increase of only $900,000.

The four classes of business telephone service which will be increased if the application is granted are:

Trunk lines from $15.50 to $21 per month.

Direct business lines from $13 to $14 per month.

Measured service to be 100 calls for $6 instead of 67 calls for $4 per month.

Nickel-in-the-slot stations, which now guarantee three calls daily, must increase the guarantee to four calls daily.

Cites Prior Announcement.

The petition recites the fact that at the time the merger was first brought before the commission, it was stated that increases in the rates of business telephones would be applied for to cover increased costs of operation. Telephone users generally understood this phase of the matter and it was not opposed but accepted and approved by them, the petition says.

There are approximately 147,900 telephones in use in St. Louis today by 100,800 subscribers. Residence lines number 77,284 and business lines, which will bear the increase, approximate 23,500 stations, exclusive of extensions within offices.

The petition asks that the matter be set down for hearing by Dec. 1 at the latest and requests that the new rates be put into effect by Jan. 1 next.

It is pointed out in conclusion that the commission, in approving the merger, acknowledged the necessity of increased rates after it was completed, but deferred granting them until the merger was completed. The work of connecting the two systems was completed Aug. 4 last.

STOCKS IN FRENCH GAMBLING CASINOS BRING HIGH PRICES

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—Shares in companies running health resorts or casinos, with gambling attachments, are being recommended to French investors as especially attractive at a time like the present, when unstable monetary conditions develop a spirit of speculation and a taste for luxury.

The Riviera casinos seem particularly flourishing. Shares in the Monte Carlo company, which last year were quoted under 3000 francs (approximately $156), are at 6950; Nice casino stock has moved from 360 francs last year to 850, and the municipal casino at Cannes, with a capital of 2,900,000 francs, made profits for the year ending 1924 of 6,403,000 francs, or more than double the capital, against 1922-23 profits of 2,476,000 francs.

A dividend of 117 per cent is to be declared on Monte Carlo, and the stock is likely to rise, as the directors have decided that, from today 10 francs instead of 5 shall be the minimum stake for roulette at the public gaming tables, and 20 francs in the private rooms. The minimum at the trente et quarante tables is increased to 40 francs.

FREE BRIDGE CONDEMNATION SUIT FORMALLY DISMISSED

Federal Court Takes Action Following Success of Proposition No. 9 at Polls.

A suit filed by the City of St. Louis for condemnation of ground for a northeast approach to the Free Bridge was dismissed in Federal Judge English's court in East St. Louis by City Counselor Senti yesterday.

The action was taken as a result of the vote in the recent election on Proposition No. 9, sustaining an ordinance, passed last May, which provided for dismissal of the suit. The Board of Election Commissioners refused a recount of the vote Friday.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take them every night just to keep right. Try them. 15c and 30c

Make it a three-time want ad order. Results almost certain through Post-Dispatch Wants.

INJUNCTION AGAINST SIDEWALK CANOPY

Florist Gets Temporary Order Halting Erection of Structure on Odd Fellows' Building.

A suit for injunction to prevent the Olive and Ninth Real Estate Co. from erecting a canopy over the sidewalk in front of the Odd Fellows' Building, on Olive, between Eighth and Ninth streets, was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Julius E. Schaeffer, florist, who occupies business quarters on the first floor of the building.

The action followed two hours after the Board of Public Service had granted a permit for the canopy against the protests of Schaeffer and other lessees who contended the structure would seriously impair their business.

The canopy is designed for the protection of the public while reconstruction on the building totaling about $1,000,000 is in progress. Schaeffer, in his petition, also asks that such of this repair work as will interfere with his business be enjoined until the expiration of his lease in 1938. A clause in the lease, according to the petition, states that the lessors are not responsible for damage resulting from snow or rain. This, Schaeffer contends, would leave him without recourse in case of such damage incident to the work of remodeling.

At the hearing before the Board of Public Service, Isaac T. Cook, representing the real estate company, owners of the building, declared the tower of the structure was in urgent need of repairs and that the Department of Public Safety had recommended that these be made at once. This work, he contended, would make erection of the canopy necessary whether the program of additional improvements was carried out or not.

The board voted unanimously for the granting of the permit, although attorneys for Schaeffer and for Brandt's, Inc., shoe dealers, argued vehemently that leases on the property gave the leaseholders rights over the sidewalk in front and that the board had no authority to interfere with such rights.

After the filing of the suit Judge Frey issued a temporary restraining order, returnable Nov. 20.

48 PASS EXAMINATION FOR BAR, 52 FAIL TO PASS

Thirteen of the Successful Candidates in October at Jefferson City Are St. Louisans.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 15.—Out of the 100 law students who took the State bar examination here on Oct. 27, 28 and 29 last, 48 passed and 52 failed, it was announced today at the Missouri Supreme Court by the State Bar Examination Board. Seventeen of the successful ones were from Kansas City and 13 from St. Louis. The list of those who passed as announced today follows:

PARIS POLICE FIND CENTER OF IMPROPER LITERATURE

Two Brothers Whose Publishing Business Yields Big Income Are Held for Trial.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—Acting on numerous complaints from foreign diplomats and the section of the League of Nations dealing with the suppression of pornography, the Paris police have succeeded in locating one of the principal centers from which obscene literature and pictures have been shipped all over Europe and the Americas.

Two brothers, Georges and Robert Briffaut, are under bail for trial on a technical charge of outraging public decency. The police declare their inquiry shows that the Briffauts made nearly a million francs annually from their business and only recently purchased a fine country estate.

Ten tons of books were seized at a bindery and several thousand photographs were found. The books were concealed under false titles, often accompanied by the names of famous and reputable publishers, which made detection difficult, the more so as they were mostly supplied through the mails.

$4800 PAYROLL STOLEN BY FOUR ARMED YOUTHS

Robbers, Three of Them Masked, Park Car and Enter Plant of Fulton Bag & Cotton Mills Co.

SIX EMPLOYES MADE TO LIE ON FLOOR

Young Men Gather Currency Into Black Bag, Refuse Silver on Account of Weight, and Escape.

Four youths parked a touring car of inexpensive make outside the plant of the Fulton Bag and Cotton Mills Co., 612-18 South Seventh street, for 10 minutes yesterday, while they went inside and stole a $4800 payroll. Then they drove away.

The robbers, three of them masked, asked no questions and appeared to know what they were after and where it was. They entered the shipping room at 10 a. m. from a private alley on the north of the building and compelled six employes to lie on the floor and keep their eyes shut. Leaving two armed men to guard the six employes, the other two armed robbers climbed a ladder to the mezzanine floor and walked to a front office, where the weekly payroll money was being placed in envelopes.

As they were about to enter, Edward Groppe, a 17-year-old clerk, stepped into their path and was ordered to "beat it." He "beat" it down the front stairs and notified the manager, George E. White, who telephoned police.

Meanwhile, E. H. Miller and J. H. Craddock, in charge of the payroll, had been forced to raise their hands and stand still in the corner. The robbers gathered the payroll currency, approximating $4800, into a black bag. One wanted to take $110 in silver, but left it when the other said it would be too heavy.

The four robbers reunited in the alley and escaped in the automobile. They wore caps and were not well dressed. The payholl was insured.

A payroll of about the same amount was stolen from this concern a year ago after the office safe had been blown open during the night.

$500 Payroll Taken Yesterday by Two Youths.

A $500 payroll was taken from E. G. Gates, paymaster of the A. D. Gates Construction Co., by two armed, well-dressed youths who held him up at Pennsylvania avenue and Wydown boulevard at 11:30 a. m. yesterday.

FREED OF CHARGE OF KILLING MAN BY BLOW WITH SHOVEL

Jacob Ditch, 56, Acquitted by Jury in Trial at Clayton.

Jacob Ditch, 56-year-old laborer, of St. John's Station, was acquitted of a charge of first degree murder Friday by a jury in Judge Wurdeman's court at Clayton.

He was charged with killing James Moody, 45 years old, a laborer, also of St. John's Station, by striking him on the head with a shovel, May 14 last.

Ditch testified that when he and a neighbor, Joe Barnes, 67 years old, were working on a construction job at Marshall avenue and St. Charles Rock road, Moody approached, carrying a market basket, and was asked by Barnes, in a jesting manner, where he found it. Moody became angry, Ditch testified, and struck Barnes in the jaw with his fist. When Ditch remonstrated with Moody, he reached toward his hip pocket, and, fearing that he was about to draw a revolver, Ditch hit him with a shovel.

The defense sought to show that Moody's death was caused by acute alcoholism, and not directly as a result of Ditch's blow. It was also stated that Moody had been injured in an automobile accident several days before the quarrel, and his death might possibly have been brought about by this.

Judge Wurdeman's instructions to the jury included second degree murder, manslaughter and acquittal on the grounds of self-defense. The verdict was returned after an hour's deliberation.

"WATCHMEN OF REPUBLIC", TO OPPOSE RELIGIOUS STRIFE

Nation-Wide Organization to Promote Regard for the Constitution Is Planned.

By the Associated Press.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Nov. 15.—Plans for a national organization of the "Watchmen of the Republic," to promote understanding and regard for the Constitution, laws and courts and to halt race and religious hatreds and prejudices were made known today by John B. Maling, Fort Wayne lecturer and author of the plan.

Edwin P. Morrow, former Governor of Kentucky, was announced as general chairman of the board of directors, which, beside Maling, includes: J. S. Sammis, Chicago past grand exalted ruler of the B. P. O. E.; N. S. P. Retjsch, McHenry, Ill., former Mayor of that city; W. D. Bartholomew, Chicago, attorney, and W. B. Towles, Chicago. The organization, incorporated under the laws of the State of Illinois, and having temporary headquarters in Chicago, plans subordinate lodges, called "watch towers," in every city and town in Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Ohio, before extending nationally.

FOOTBALL SPECTATOR HURT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GALESBURG, Ill., Nov. 15.—While standing on the side lines watching the football game between Alexis and Aledo at Alexis, near here, yesterday, W. F. Richardson, 80 years old, was struck by one of the players, who ran out of bounds while carrying the ball. Richardson was knocked unconscious, and his leg was broken in two places.

DRINK WATER IF KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Pains or Bladder Is Irritated.

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

To help neutralize these irritating acids; to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

Modern Women Refuse to Fear Gray Tresses

The Premature Gray Know Remedy That Assures Hair's Original Splendor

It wasn't so long ago women shuddered when they thought of the possibility of their hair turning prematurely gray.

Not so now. Science has eased women's minds in that regard. The women of today do not fear gray hair because they have the means to combat it.

Discolored hair has the same social taboo as a discolored dress. The woman who is proud of her appearance wears neither.

There are thousands upon thousands of women whose hair would be gray so as to give a false impression of their age, had they not available a simple, yet certain remedy. The few prematurely gray women that one sees these day evidences that they are quick to take advantage of its possibilities.

This remedy is in the form of a clean, colorless, harmless liquid called Graynix. It is guaranteed not to stain or dye the hair, but to scientifically nourish it back to health and natural color.

Graynix checks failing hair, eliminates dandruff and other scalp diseases, and at the same time invigorates the scalp and promotes a luxuriant growth in a remarkably short time. Graynix is guaranteed to do these things. If you find it doesn't bear out our claims for it, you have only to return the empty bottle to your dealer, who is authorized to return your purchase price of $1.25.

Graynix will save your hair. Start using it today.

100,000 Die Yearly From Kidney Diseases

Authorities Say 50% of These Deaths Due to Neglect

Health authorities in all parts of the country are alarmed at the increasing death rate from diseases of the kidneys and liver. Of the annual toll of more than 100,000 lives more than 50% of these deaths was undoubtedly due to failure to heed in time nature's warning of diseased kidneys.

Nervousness, pains in the back, headache, poor appetite, dizziness, etc., are often symptoms of kidney disorders and nature's gentle warnings that poisons are being retained in the system. You cannot afford to ignore these danger signals if you value your health—your most priceless possession.

If you feel out of sorts and suspect that your kidneys and liver are not acting naturally, don't delay, but go to your druggist and get a bottle of Warner's Safe Remedy for the Kidneys and Liver and take according to directions. In a short time you should notice the benefit from this remedy made from herbs and other beneficial ingredients. Used for over 50 years by millions in all parts of the world. For your health's sake take care of your kidneys.

Sold by druggists everywhere. Sample sent free if you write Dept. 248 Warner's Safe Remedies Co., Rochester, N. Y.

KURTZMANN GRAND PIANOS

An Actual Saving to You of $100.00

BUY it now for Christmas and all the family will enjoy it throughout the years.

Reasons Why You Should Buy This Grand Piano

First—Because it is an instrument of unquestioned reputation backed by 76 years of master Piano building.

Second—Because it will be worth so much to you and your family as a means of home pleasure and enjoyment.

Third—Because it will mean so much in the preparation of your children for the years of life.

Fourth—Because it is an instrument that really fits into the average sized home.

Fifth—Because the payments are well within your reach.

Sixth—Because by purchasing now you actually save $100.

This attractive Grand is small enough for the average home—takes but little more space than an ordinary upright Piano, but has the tonal quality and volume that you would expect of a much larger instrument.

This extraordinary offer is for a limited time only, and the number of instruments to be sold at $100.00 saving is limited strictly to instruments on our Floor.

When all these are sold, it will be necessary to return the price to regular on any instrument shipped from the factory.

Brown-Niedringhaus Wedding Will Be a Fashionable Affair

December Social Calendar Also Includes the Mauran-Mullikin, the Rule-Day and the Robbins-Isaacs Ceremonies.

As the holiday season draws near, winter brides announce their wedding plans and society turns its attention for a brief space from the debutantes to the young women who are soon to join the young married set.

Miss Evelyn Brown, daughter of Mrs. John Young Brown of the Van Ness apartments, whose wedding to William Francis Niedringhaus will be one of the first of the fashionable December weddings, has announced her bridal party. Her sister, Mrs. Brown-O'Fallon, will be matron of honor; Miss Marie Nugent, maid of honor, and Mrs. Hayward Niedringhaus, Mrs. John Young Brown Jr. and the Misses Lucy Terry, Eppes Hawes and Grace Wallace, bridesmaids. Miss Marie Tiffany and Miss Rachel Lee Cuendet, who were also to have served, are spending the winter in Europe.

Mr. Niedringhaus will be attended by his four brothers, Marion, who will be best man; Hayward, and the twins, George W. Jr. and Erwin, and Andrew McCreery, Arthur Hickman, Maury Hill, David Randolph Calhoun Jr., Kenneth Drummond, Clifton Scudder Jr. and Winston Johns. John Young Brown will give his sister in marriage. Mr. Niedringhaus is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Niedringhaus of 10 Westmoreland place.

On the preceding day, Miss Elizabeth Mauran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence Mauran, will become the bride of Charles Mullikin, son of Mrs. James H. Nolan of Washington, D. C., and the late Charles Mullikin of St. Louis. Miss Mauran has not announced her bridal party, but the ceremony will be performed at 12:30 o'clock at the Mauran home in Vandeventer place.

The wedding of Miss Amy Rule, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Virgil Rule of 5250 Westminster place, and Morgan Colt Day, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Colt Day of Westminster place, has been set for Friday, Dec. 12. Dr. Travers of St. Peter's Church will read the service at Christ Church Cathedral at 8 o'clock, and a reception will follow at the Rule home. Invitations were mailed today. Miss Rule is a graduate of Mary Institute and made her debut several seasons ago. Mr. Day is an alumnus of Princeton University.

News has come from Chicago of the plans for the wedding there Dec. 6 of Miss Isabelle Robbins and Charles W. Isaacs Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Isaacs, 5226 Washington boulevard. The Fourth Presbyterian Church has been chosen for the nuptials, and the bridal party is as follows: Mrs. John Caldwell Jr. of Troy, N. Y., matron of honor; Miss Emily Isaacs of St. Louis, sister of the bridegroom, maid of honor, and Miss Marion Richardson, Mrs. John Winterbothom Jr., Mrs. Francis Manierre and Miss Margaret Hambleton of Chicago, bridesmaids. Henry Garcia Isaacs will be his brother's best man, and Charles J. Zimmerer, Carl Koehler and Richard Shipley of St. Louis, John Harrison of New York, William A. Fuller II, Roland Boswell and Hamilton Vose Jr. of Chicago, ushers.

Miss Henriette de Penaloza, daughter of Mrs. Marie Reine de Penaloza, who will become the bride of Huburtas Schotten Nov. 29, will have her cousin, Miss Elizabeth Thatcher, as maid of honor; Mrs. Francis Warner, formerly Miss Annette O'Reilly, as matron of honor, and Misses Bertha Condie and Helen Reyburn, bridesmaids. Driscoll Donovan will the best man and Eugene de Penaloza, Harry Stimson and Hudson Thatcher, groomsmen. The ceremony will be performed by Father Godfrey at the Catholic Church in Ferguson at 11:30 o'clock.

One of the most elaborate parties of the winter will be a Spanish dinner dance planned by the young married set in St. Louis, which will be given at the St. Louis Country Club Thanksgiving eve. The decorations, costumes and even food will be in imitation of those of Spain. Gay senoras in lace mantillas and dapper matadors with knee breeches and scarlet cloaks will dance to the music of a stringed orchestra and dine at small tables with Spanish appointments. Mrs. Hayward Niedringhaus, Mrs. Eugene F. Williams Jr. and Mrs. Russell Gardner Jr. are in charge of arrangements, and the guests, each of whom will contribute to the financing of the affair, will respond to the invitations to Mrs. Gardner.

The first dinner dance of the Embassy Club, recently organized, will be held at Hotel Chase on the evening of Tuesday, Nov. 25.

Dinner Dance Given For Debut of Miss Virginia Simmons

St. Louis Country Club Is Scene of Party, With Tables for 250 Guests — Ballroom a Bower of Green.

PINK, the acknowledged color for debutantes, prevailed at the gay dinner dance given Friday night at the St. Louis Country Club by Thomas H. Wright to introduce his niece, Miss Virginia Simmons, to St. Louis society. Dozens of lights were dimmed by pink paper shades and hundreds of pink roses adorned the dinner tables for 250 guests. The walls, ceilings and chandeliers in the stone-flagged reception hall and in the ballroom and dining rooms were entirely concealed by Southern smilax, transforming them into a bower of green. The orchestra sat in a vine-covered alcove topped with pink lights.

The living room of the club where the debutante, with her mother, Mrs. George Welch Simmons of New York, and Mr. Wright received their guests, had for its decoration baskets of roses and chrysanthemums, gifts to the debutante, tied with broad bands of pink and blue satin which blended with the varicolored chintz which covered the furniture. Miss Simmons wore silver lace combined with tulle and carried pink roses, and her mother was gowned in a striking black and white costume.

The guests at Miss Simmons' table, in the order in which they sat, were Frederick H. Gardner, Kenneth Drummond, Miss Alice Scott, Arthur Hickman, Winston Johns, Miss Frances Collins, Carl Koehler, Miss Eleanor Simmons, Dozier Gardner, Marion Niedringhaus, Miss Grace Wallace, Shapleigh Boyd, David Randolph Calhoun Jr., Miss Mary Denman Clark and Frederick C. Orthwein Jr.

Miss Simmons, who is making her home this winter with her aunt, Mrs. Charles Parsons Pettus, is a graduate of Mary Institute and the Westover School in Connecticut. Her parents moved to New York a few months ago, and Mrs. Simmons, who came to St. Louis for the party, will depart soon for her home. Miss Simmons will remain until March.

Last night Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Davis of Westmoreland place gave a dinner dance at the same club for Miss Simmons, and Miss Eleanor Simmons will give a party for her soon. The guests last night were Misses

WEDDINGS SOLEMNIZED AND TO COME

Formal announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Ethel Sultan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Sultan of Kingsbury boulevard, and Edward E. Pershall, son of Mrs. F. E. Pershall of Pershing avenue. The news was told in notes written by Miss Sultan to her friends. The prospective bride is a graduate of Mary Institute. Mr. Pershall is an alumnus of the University of Illinois and a member of the Sunset Hill Country Club and the Missouri Athletic Association. The wedding will take place the early part of the new year.

A wedding of interest was solemnized last evening, when Miss Helen Jennings, daughter of Mrs. C. M. Jennings, became the bride of Carl Peyton Daniel, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. Daniel of Philadelphia. The ceremony took place at St. Michael's and All Angels' Episcopal Church, Bishop Frederick Johnson officiating. A small reception at the home of the bride followed.

Miss Jeanette Jennings, the sister of the bride and maid of honor, wore a yellow gown of chiffon velvet slightly draped. Her maline hat was made in a broad-brimmed fashion with the color shading from a cream-colored crown to a deeper hued brim and having a shaded rose on the side. She carried a shower bouquet of small yellow chysanthemums. The matron of honor, Mrs. Frederick Day, wore a gown in the same mode, of a slightly deeper shade of yellow.

Little Margery Jennings, niece of the bride and flower girl, wore a frock of accordion-pleated pale yellow georgette. She threw small yellow chrysanthemums from a spray instead of from the conventional basket in the path of the bride. The little son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexis Stocker was ring bearer.

The bride entered on the arm of her brother, Mr. Curtis Pitcher Jennings. Her gown was of white satin embroidered in silver threads made on long lines, with a circular drape at the side and an insertion of Duchess lace around the V neck. Her veil, brought from Europe this summer, was of Brussels lace and rose point with a coronet of the rose point. Her corsage was lilies of the valley and she wore a diamond and sapphire platinum set watch, the gift of the groom.

The groom's attendants were Jesse Powell Henry, best man, and Paul Whitman, Gunther Meier and Frederick Day, groomsmen.

Mr. Daniel will take his bride to New York and White Sulphur Springs, Va., on their honeymoon. They will spend Thanksgiving in Philadelphia with Mr. Daniel's parents before they return. They will reside at 5811 Clemens avenue.

The marriage of Miss Helen Cohn, daughter of Mrs. L. J. Cohn of 22 Washington terrace, and Milton Price, son of Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Price of Arundel place, will take place Wednesday evening, Dec. 10, at the Columbian Club. The ceremony will be followed by a reception from 8 to 11 o'clock, to which all friends will be invited. No invitations will be sent. Miss Cohn has not announced the personnel of her bridal party.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Smith of 3107 North Union boulevard announce the approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Alice Rosemary, and Eugene Farrell, which will take place Thanksgiving day, at the Blessed Sacrament Church.

The marriage of Miss Pearl Nora Baldwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Baldwin of Austinville, Va., and Alexander J. Robertson took place Wednesday at the Washington and Compton Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Asher officiating. The bride's gown was white chiffon crepe, trimmed with crystal pendants and lace applique. Her veil was bordered with lace. Mrs. Byron M. Jackson, matron of honor, wore orchid crepe de chine and carried chrysanthemums to match. Misses Amelia Bernard and Myrtle Dipple wore jade green and coral, respectively. Julius Kuenne and Julius Zach were groomsmen. A reception followed at the home of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Robertson, 4600 South Grand boulevard, and the bride and bridegroom will be at home Dec. 1 at 4828 Tennessee avenue. The bride's mother and sister attended the ceremony.

The marriage of Miss Ruth Donahue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Donahue of 3924 Lafayette avenue, and Albert A. Michenfelder, son of Mrs. Margaret E. Michenfelder of 4152 Flora boulevard, took place Monday morning, Nov. 10, at St. Margaret's Church, the Rev. Father J. Hedderman officiating. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Dorothy Donahue, who was gowned in rust-colored satin. A corsage of Ophelia roses completed her costume. The bride was attired in an ensemble costume of light taupe color, trimmed in gray squirrel. Her corsage consisted of roses and valley lilies surrounded by ostrich. Harry Michenfelder served his brother as best man. After the ceremony, a wedding breakfast at the Missouri Athletic Association was attended by the two immediate families. The bridal pair left at noon for a honeymoon in the East, and after Nov. 20 will be at home at their apartment on Lawrence and De Tonty streets. Mrs. Albert Michenfelder is a graduate of the Chicago School of Music and is an accomplished musician. Mr. Michenfelder served 18 months in France, where he was decorated and commissioned.

Announcement was made Nov. 8 of the marriage of Miss Florence McInroy, daughter of Mrs. A. S. McInroy of 5916 Maple avenue, and Nelson Reinhardt, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Reinhardt of Holly avenue. The news was told at a bridge luncheon at the home of Mrs. Reinhardt's sister, Mrs. Warren N. Murphy of Pershing avenue. Little Alice Warren Murphy gave each guest a rose with a card attached bearing the names of the couple and the date of their marriage. There were 30 guests. Mrs. William Murphy entertained Mrs. Reinhardt at bridge and a miscellaneous shower Wednesday, Nov. 12.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Astor of 4616 Vernon avenue announce the approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Tillie Astor, and Sidney A. Lawrence of Chicago, which will take place tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rabbi Rosentrater officiating. After a brief visit to the bride's sister, Mrs. Yale I. Glubok, in Racine, Wis., the couple will reside in Chicago.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Marjorie C. Mooney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Mooney, of 3131 Alfred avenue, and Lieut. J. Harry Evans, on Saturday, Nov. 1. The bride is a graduate of Washington University Law School, class of 1924. She is a member of Kappa Beta Pi, legal sorority, and is closely identified with the recreational work in the city. Lieut. Evans is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Evans of De Tonty street. He is a graduate of West Point and is a member of Delta Signa Lambda fraternity. In 1923 he received a commission in the 110th Squadron, 35th Division Air Service. They will reside at Christopher, Ill.

Miss Lucille Riedel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Riedel of 5796 McPherson avenue, became the bride yesterday of Walter Mueller. The ceremony was performed at noon at the home of the bride's parents, in the presence of a limited number of guests. The bride has received her A. B. and A. M. degrees from Washington University, and has been a member of the faculty at the Maplewood High School.

The marriage of Miss Mary Agnes Cassidy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Cassidy of 5461 Enright avenue, and James Francis Reuter, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Reuter, took place Tuesday morning at St. Rose's Church. Miss Margaret Cassidy, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Louis Sanguinet best man. After a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reuter departed for their honeymoon trip.

The wedding of Miss Mabel Melsheimer and George Hillebrand will take place Nov. 22 at 9 o'clock in the morning at the Holy Family Church, 4133 Humphrey street. After a wedding breakfast at the Gatesworth Hotel, the couple will depart for a three weeks' honeymoon trip to Chicago.

Miss Ruth Foser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August Poser of 2820 North Twenty-third street, became the bride of John A. Mathewson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Mathewson of 4439 Blair avenue, Wednesday evening, in the Zion Lutheran Church, the Rev. Louis J. Sieck officating. The bride was attended by Miss Esther Poser and Miss Dorothy Wilson, and the bridegroom by Wilmer Poser and Harold Wermeier. Georgia Flynn was flower girl. A reception followed. The couple are in the East on their honeymoon trip, and will make their home at 4439 Blair avenue.

The marriage of Miss Hazel Hill and Marcus A. Gilchrist took place Thursday. The couple are on a motor trip through Iowa, and will be at home after Dec. 1 at 5600 North Market street.

SONNENFELD'S

610 to 618 Washington Avenue

Value, of Course! But Style First and Foremost

By Shirley Deane

I could scarcely say that the most important feature of the new Winter Coats is the manner in which they are furred. But taking value for granted, as you can at Sonnenfeld's, and taking general style authenticity for granted, as you can at Sonnenfeld's, then certainly all your attention will center upon the thousand and one new ways in which furs beautify and adorn the Coats of the fast-approaching Winter season

Luxurious Kashmana of cranberry red, trimmed with natural squirrel $150

Beaver

—golden and natural, and not to be confused with its South American cousin, nutria, assumes new importance in a season where brown is the reigning color, blending harmoniously with penny, and sharply contrasting with kaffir and cinnabar. Soft and pliable as cloth, it lends itself to mammoth collars, to deep bands with scalloped edging, to furrowed puffs and muff and bishop sleeves. Its wearing quality is also in its favor. Coats, beaver trimmed, range in price from

$49.50 to $350

Fox

—and wolf appear in the same category, popular long-haired pelts, particularly favored in styles for misses. Red fox flaunts itself on long revers in scarf fashion, and appears in wide matching cuff bands. Taupe, black and the rarer and more expensive pointed fox are also extremely decorative. Wolf reappears as one of the most ornamental furs of the season. In wide collars and cuffs and deep hem bands, it is seen in both blue and platinum shades. Prices in this group range from

$45 to $250

Muskrat

—achieves a great fashion success because of its adaptability to blended effects. The silver muskrat is the lighter portion of the pelt known as natural muskrat whereas the so-called blended muskrat is tinted by applying dyes to the hair only, rather than immersing the whole skin. Muskrat is abundantly used for revers, facings, deep cuffs and fancy borders. Some of the best Coats wear muskrat with a proud air, ranging in price from

$45 to $135

(Coat Shop—Third Floor.)

Squirrel

—lends itself richly to the adornment of black and cranberry red. And, like beaver, its softness permits it great freedom in trimming elaboration. Rising into collars of great height; swelling into cuffs to the elbow, reappearing in novelty hem bands, it enhances through its own beauty and its striking color contrast. Viatka, or dyed squirrel, is seen luxuriously embellishing some of the richest coats, particularly in styles for older women. Squirrel-trimmed Coats range in price from

$45 to $135

Badger

—one of the most ostentatious furs, has the beauty of long silky hair, and a natural beige shading. It is closely allied to lynx, which appears in natural and blended shades. These long-haired pelts content themselves, as a rule, with an appearance on collar and cuff, though occasionally the lynx claims the added distinction of adorning the Coat from collar to hem. These skins, because of their rare beauty, appear only on the more expensive garments, those which range in price from

$135 to $250

Jap Mink

—is recognized as one of the more aristocratic furs, and is given decided preference by older women. It is not as lavishly used as some of the shorter haired furs such as squirrel and beaver. But although it appears in narrower bands, and perhaps cuffs a sleeve with two or three slender circles, it is quite as effective because of its glossiness and rich coloring. Its shades are natural, rock sable, blended and cocoa. Akin to weasel it appears with it in a group priced from

$99.50 to $195

(Coat Shop—Third Floor.)

A New Oxford

With Creased Vamp

$8.00

Of Tan Calf

Welt Sole Rubber Heel

Smart and natty for golf, for hiking, or for general utility wear with sport frocks. And that creased vamp has an air of sportdom not often to be found in a Shoe built so pre-eminently for comfort.

(Footwear Shop—First Floor.)

The Pierrot

The Sensation of Paris

$10 to $18

A peaked crown, topped by a perky Gaby bow or ostrich pompon and the effect is magical; a distinctive Parisian chic, a fascinating Pierrot air, that completes the triumph of the bobbed-hair mode. In soft felt shapes, it appears in all the popular sport colors.

(Sport Hat Shop—Second Floor.)

Barry's

Locust St. West of Ninth

"Quality First"

There is nothing in which it pays to buy "the best" as it does in underwear.

In other wearing apparel there's only the "wear" to think of, but in underwear you also have to consider the necessity of frequent laundering.

A simply made garment of high-grade materials and first-class workmanship will wear several times as long as elaborately trimmed garments of flimsy materials, and the cost may not be any greater.

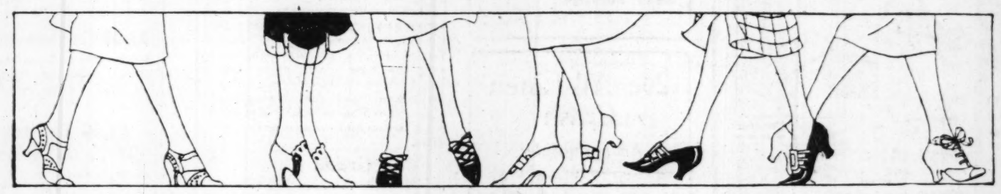
A Special Introductory Showing of the New Popular

MUNSINGWEAR HOSIERY

IN accordance with our established policy of always endeavoring to supply the newest and best merchandise to our customers, we take great pride in announcing that we have just secured the agency in this city for Munsingwear Hosiery, and have stocked it in complete assortment for men, women, children and infants.

For years we have been serving our discriminating trade with Munsingwear union suits and undergarments and no line that we carry in our store has given more satisfaction.



MUNSINGWEAR Hosiery, we are convinced, combines the same excellent qualities as Munsingwear undergarments—fine appearance, perfect fit, long wear and prices that are exceedingly low considering the high quality assured by the name Munsingwear.

We invite you to come in to view our beautiful Munsingwear display, to see for yourself the wonderful value represented by this new brand of hose.

Munsingwear Silk Hosiery Instantly Popular With the Women

Combining, as it does, exquisite appearance and durability, Munsingwear Hosiery has won almost instant popularity with women. Fashioned of the finest materials, designed and knit to fit perfectly, and selling at a reasonable price, Munsingwear Hosiery is a boon to every woman's attire.

WOMEN who ordinarily pay more for silk stockings will revel in the richness of Musingwear full-fashioned hose at a lower price. Every pair perfectly and permanently shaped to the leg, smart in style, smooth in fit—every pair the embodiment of Silk Hosiery beauty and economy.

Our assortment includes sport Hosiery, street Hosiery, dress Hosiery—all the styles, weights, colors which the present season demands. This display surely warrants your inspection.

We believe mothers will find in Munsingwear for children all they desire in quality and value. Munsingwear Hosiery is knit of only the best and strongest yarns, reinforced where the hard wear comes, and may be had in many durable colors and weights.

A Relaxed Foot Gives a Relaxed Facial Expression

"She looks as if her feet hurt."

How often you notice an otherwise attractive face marred by a tense, pained look.

A woman can't be at her best or look her best when she is bothered by shoes that bind the foot or do not give the arch of the foot enough freedom to flex as it should.

The Cantilever Shoe permits the foot to maintain a relaxed position whether the wearer is walking, standing or sitting. It is so constructed as to give every part of the foot ample room for exercise of the muscles and free circulation, yet it fits snugly and feels comfortable.

The arch of the Cantilever Shoe being flexible, like the arch of the human foot, the foot receives proper and flexible support, with no restraining stiffness when walking.

NEWS OF MISSOURIANS AT THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Washington society is engaging in the delightful task of Cabinet making now the first excitement of the election has died away.

There is more than usual interest for Misourians, and particularly St. Louisans, in rumor that upon the retirement of Secretary Weeks from the post of Secretary of War it will be offered to Dwight F. Davis of St. Louis, the present Assistant Secretary of War. That will make a Missouri woman, in Mrs. Davis, a Cabinet hostess, and now her health has so improved the Davis home probably would be a center of Washington official gayety.

Miss Mary Pershing of Omaha, Neb., is in Washington on a visit to her brother, Gen. John J. Pershing, who has just returned from Europe. Gen. Pershing and his sister are planning a trip to their old home at Hannibal, Mo., in a few weeks.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson is making one of her infrequent trips out of Washington and is the guest of Col. and Mrs. Edward Brown at Endless Caverns Farm, Virginia. Mrs. Wilson went there by motor.

Mrs. Edwin Puller and the little group of Democratic women with whom she is intimate in Washington have dauntlessly announced that they will carry on the work of the McDowell Blackburn Washington Democratic Club wihch engaged in a brisk campaign for John W. Davis before the election. Mrs. Puller and her friends are to conduct study meetings with prominent men and women speakers on the principles of Democracy. Few people have become so endeared to Washington as the Pullers since they came here from St. Louis last year and they are on many dinner lists and are often host at important dinner parties. At a recent meeting of her club, Mrs. Puller wore a striking costume of black velvet with godet inserts of black satin. This had long sleeves and high neckline after the prevailing fashion of the moment.

Mrs. John B. Henderson entertained at the first of a series of Monday night dances she is giving for her granddaughter, Miss Beatrice Henderson, a debutante of the season, this week. Mrs. Henderson believes in the small and early type of dances. At this dance the debutante wore a lovely costume of deep blue chiffon, made with bateau neckline and short sleeves. The skirt was cut in points and came nearly to the ankles.

Mrs. Roy C. Anderson of Pekin, China, who is visiting Mrs. James Carson Breckenridge at the Marine barracks, was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Breckenridge entertained at luncheon this week. Among the other guests were Mrs. Don Williams, Mrs. John A. Lejeune, wife of the Major-General commandant of the Marine Corps; Mrs. Hugh Cumming, wife of the

NEWS OF MISSOURIANS AT THE CAPITAL

Surgeon-General of the United States Public Health Service, and Mrs. Edgar Wood. Colonel and Mrs. Breckenridge were guests at dinner of General and Mrs. Lejeune earlier in the week. Mrs. Breckenridge entertained at a theater party in honor of Miss Eugenia and Miss Laura Lejeune, daughters of the General and Mrs. Lejeune.

The commandant of the navy yard and Mrs. Frank Hutchison entertained at a radio party navy day and again on election night, at their quarters at the navy yard in Washington. At midnight Missouri ham sandwiches and Missouri apples were served.

The Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Dwight Davis entertained at dinner Tuesday night, when their guests included members of the official and diplomatic circles. Mr. Davis gave a luncheon also early in the week to about 50 members of the War Department executive personnel, including chiefs of bureaus and officers in charge of special work.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis attended the test flights at Bolling Field in company with officers of the Army Air Service last week. Mr. and Mrs. Davis both take a keen interest in the air service, which comes directly under the jurisdiction of the Assistant Secretary, and both are ardent aviation fans.

Mrs. Philip North Moore, who has been in Washington and in Buffalo, N. Y., is now in St. Louis, where she will remain until the latter part of December or January, when she will return to settle down to months of hard work arranging for the quinquennial of the International Council of Women, which will meet in Washington in May and of which she, as the president of the National Council, is the official hostess.

The fourth vice president of the National Council, Mrs. A. Ross Hill of St. Louis, is acting for Mrs. Moore in any matter which has to do with the council meeting needing immediate attention. Mrs. Hill is one of the most active of the workers in the women's organization interested in the securing of welfare legislation on the behalf of women and children passed by Congress.

Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins was one of the hostesses at the fifth birthday celebration of the Washington Woman's City Club, as she was one of the inspirers and active founders of the organization. This club has a long list of distinguished members, including members of present and past official circles and of the diplomatic corps. One of the most interested members is Madame Jusserand, wife of the retiring French Ambassador, whom Washington regards as a resident here because they have been here more than 35 years.

Mrs. John B. Henderson has entertained recently at luncheon for Madame Jusserand and at dinner for the Ambassador and Madame Jusserand. The Jusserands were among the first to be invited to dinner at the Henderson house more than 20 years ago.

The Monroe School Parent-Teachers' Association of the National Congress of Mothers will meet Wednesday at 3:30 o'clock in the kindergarten.

Simple Application That Dissolves Blackheads

No more squeezing and pinching to get rid of those unsightly blemishes, blackheads. There is one simple, safe and sure way to get them out and that is to dissolve them. Get about two ounces of calonite powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub briskly over the blackheads for a few seconds—wash the parts and every blackhead will be gone.

Pinching and squeezing out blackheads make large pores and you cannot get all of the blackheads out this way—while this simple application of calonite powder and water dissolves every particle of them and leaves the skin and pores in their natural condition.

This Cream, My Dears,

Applies a dozen helps at once.

By Edna Wallace Hopper.

I wish all girls and women would try my Youth Cream. Just learn what a cream can do.

It is not only the finest cream I ever found, but it embodies a dozen beauty helps. It contains products of both lemon and strawberry. Also all the best modern science knows to foster and feed, to soften and protect the skin.

Apply all these helps at once. Don't use merely a common cold cream.

I owe to Youth Cream my wonderful complexion. I owe to it my baby skin, clear and rosy, at my grand old age. Never is my skin without it.

There are two types—cold cream and vanishing. I apply the cold cream at night. Vanishing cream in the morning as a powder base and all-day skin complexion.

I have searched the world for 40 years to find the helps embodied in this cream. It has brought me beauty and perennial youth. Now all toilet counters supply it—Edna Wallace Hopper's Youth Cream. The price is 60c per jar. It may do for you ten times as much as the cream that you are using.

I will gladly mail you some to test if you will send this coupon. Do that now, because I recommend it.

500 Coats in New Styles

KEEPING abreast with the mode has been one of the principal factors in the success and popularity of our stock of Winter Coats.

Seldom have Coat styles developed so rapidly as during the present season; greater sophistication, and more and more elaborate ideas in furring have become manifested in each new style.

And so keeping abreast with the mode has meant that our buyers have never been absent from the style market; that each new idea, as soon as it has become authentic, has been introduced to St. Louis through our wonderful collection. You will find it judicious to purchase here, both from the point of view, of style and of price.

VARIED ACTIVITIES IN WOMEN'S CLUBS OF ST. LOUIS

The Poetics section of the Wednesday Club will meet Nov. 19 at 10:30 a. m. Mrs. E. C. Saxton is chairman of the section. "Memories of Keats and Byron" will be the topic for the day's study. Mrs. Archer O'Reilly will speak on Keats and Mrs. A. R. Smyth on Byron. Luncheon will be served at 12:30 p. m.

The History and Literature section will meet the same day at 1:30 p. m. Novels of protest and social unrest are to be studied. Mrs. Thomas E. Murrell will review Kingsley's "Yeast" and "Alton Locke," Reade's "Put Yourself in His Place" and "Cloister and Hearth;" Mrs. C. J. Walker, Besant's "Children of Gibeon;" Mrs. George H. Williams, the political novels of Disraeli and Meredith's "Beauchamp's Career." Miss Ellen Brooks Johnson is section chairman.

The Town Club will give a tea Saturday, Nov. 22, from 3:30 to 5 p. m., in honor of Mrs. Alice Van-Leer Carrick, author of "The Next to Nothing House."

Miss Elizabeth Cueny has been elected to fill the vacancy in the Town Club board of directors caused by the resignation of Mrs. Harriet P. Sawyer, who found it impossible to continue her work with the club on account of her duties at the St. Louis Public Library.

A dinner in honor of Miss Gail Harrison of New York and a dramatic reading by Gustavus Tuckerman are the outstanding evening functions to be given by the College Club of St. Louis this week.

Miss Harrison, a member of the faculty of Teachers' College, Columbia University, will be the guest of honor at a dinner to be held Nov. 18 at 7 p. m. at the club, 5428 Delmar boulevard. Following the dinner Miss Harrison, who is a specialist in primary education, will lecture on "The Art Expression of Children." Mrs. J. M. Cook has charge of reservations. Club members and their men and women guests are invited. Reservations for the dinner preceding the dramatic reading by Tuckerman, Nov. 21, at 7 o'clock, at the club, may be made with Mrs. Gilbert C. Turner, by mail or telephone, 3212 Sullivan avenue, or Tyler 1857 between 6 and 7 p. m., before the evening of Nov. 19. The dinner and the dramatic reading following it are open to club members and guests.

Among the other activities scheduled for this week is the literature program on Tuesday. Miss Margaret McLaughlin will discuss "The Life and Education of Henry Adams."

The Board of Managers will hold its regular meeting Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the club.

The Kirkwood Study Hour Club, M. F. W. C., held its regular meeting last Tuesday. Mrs. W. J. Van Nice was hostess at the 1 o'clock luncheon. Mrs. L. P. Wingert reported a reciprocity meeting at the Webster Monday Club, and Mrs. W. C. Lindwall, a press and publicity meeting. The subjects, "Near East and Far East," by Mrs. Charles Senour and "The Open Door Policy," by Mrs. Harry Lange, finished the first section on "Relations of the United States With Other Countries" under "International Relatons." At the next meeting the papers will on international law. Mrs. Charles Senour, Big Bend road, will be hostess on Nov. 25.

The Civic Committee of the Woman's Chamber of Commerce will meet on Tuesday at 10 a. m. at 1025 Chemical Building. Mrs. Adolphe Neuville, chairman, requests that all branches of this department be represented by their chairmen. Important plans will be outlined.

The Ways and Means Committee, of which Mrs. Richard Kring is chairman, will hold a meeting on next Thursday at 10:30 a. m. at Chamber of Commerce Building, 511 Locust street.

The value of observatories was pointed out in two papers before members of the Friday Club, on Nov. 7, when Mrs. O. S. Wilfley gave an account of the astronomical structures now in operation, and Mrs. Donald McFayden read a paper on the value of meteorological observatories throughout the world. "American Adaptation of Foreign Architecture" was presented in a paper by Mrs. Walter Brown. The meeting was held at the Missouri Athletic Association, with Mmes. L. M. Ottofy and W. A. Rein as hostesses.

A report of the biennial convention, M. F. W. C., held at Kansas City the latter part of October, was given by Mrs. Ottofy. Mrs. F. H. Littlefield, president of the Eighth district, gave an account of the meeting of the Press and Publicity Committee, of which she was chairman, and Mrs. W. P. Erhart, trustee of the Phoebe J. Ess Scholarship Loan Fund, spoke of the work which is being accomplished through this fund. An instrumental number by Miss Martha Ottofy concluded the program. The next meeting of the club will be held at Red Gables, the home of Mrs. Joseph W. Jamison, Overland Park, Mo., with Mrs. Thomas M. Marshall assisting hostess.

The Harmony Literary Club, M. F. W. C., held its regular meeting Friday. Mrs. George Malone was hostess at the luncheon. Mrs. W. C. Markham, presiding, opened the meeting with roll call responded to by current topics. At the conclusion of the business the program on the subject study, Italy, was given by Mrs. C. F. Sternberg. Mrs. E. R. Nyroth gave glimpses into the lives of foreign writers in Italy. The next hostess will be Mrs. C. E. Dupler, entertaining Nov. 21 at a 1 o'clock luncheon at her home, 4928 Forest Park boulevard.

The St. Louis branch of the Needlework Guild of America will hold its annual exhibition of garments Tuesday at the Church of the Holy Communion, 2809 Washington avenue, from 3 to 5 o'clock. The garments are given by members of the Guild once a year, and are distributed among the worthy poor of St. Louis. The organization came into being in England and Queen Mary is a member. The American headquarters are in Philadelphia. The organization is nonsectarian. There are no dues to pay and membership entails the donation of two new garments a year. New members

That Itching Skin Needs SULPHUR

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ-destroying properties, this sulphur preparation begins at once to soothe irritated skin and heal eruptions such as rash, pimples and ring worm.

It seldom fails to remove the torment and disfigurement, and you do not have to wait for relief from embarrassment. Improvement quickly shows. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

Do Not Emphasize Gray Hair

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.

THAT part of Paris which Mme. Simone did not bring over here with her—"the left bank of the Seine," to use the words of Firmin Gemier, noted star of the Theater National de l'Odeon of France—is transported to American soil and presented for the first time

Norma Shearer and Lon Chaney in "He Who Was Slapped"—Loew's State.

An American audience in Jolson's Fifty-ninth Street Theater today night.

The audience included Ambassador and Mme. Jules Jusserand, officially representing France, and Nicholas Butler Wright, Assistant Secretary of State, representing the United States Government.

Those Americans who have labored under the impression that all French actors adopt a style too studied, too strained, in their work to make an impression, for instance, that one might form from witnessing a more purely classical art of Mme. Simone or the highly tragic performance of the Grand Guignol players—had this illusion happily dispelled by Gemier's company last night.

M. Gemier and his collaborators presented to an American audience in their performance of "L'Homme Qui Assassina" ("The Man Who Killed"), a truer conception of the real French dramatic art than have either Mme. Simone or the players of the Grand Guignol. None left before the performance was over.

Applause Sincerely Fervent.

THE generous and sincerely enthusiastic applause which greeted M. Gemier and his fellow players and actresses could not have left any doubt in their minds that their efforts were heartily appreciated and pleased those present.

Helen Ford in "The Belle of Quakertown" — Shubert-Jefferson.

Belle of "Quakertown" And "Runnin' Wild" Are Theater Offerings

Elsie Janis Is Captioned at Orpheum, and Pershing Shifts to Musical Comedy With "Pitter Patter."

MUSICAL shows of contrasting hues begin local engagements at the Shubert-Jefferson and American tonight. One is "The Belle of Quakertown," with Helen Ford and Eddie Buzzell as leading players. The other is an all-negro production, "Runnin' Wild," successor to "Shuffle Along." Miller and Lyles, two of the creators of "Shuffle Along," head the cast.

Elsie Janis, with a recital of impersonations, is headliner at the Orpheum. The Pershing shifts this week from spoken drama to musical comedy, with an entertainment called "Pitter Patter," and a company new in part. The troupe at the Empress is undertaking the well-known farce-comedy, "Up in Mabel's Room."

The book of "The Belle of Quakertown" is by Aaron Hoffman, the lyrics are by Bert Kalmar, and the score is by Harry Ruby. The scenes shift from a sleepy village called Quakertown to a downtown apartment in New York, a Long Island country house, and back to Quakertown. Buzzell created the comedy part in "The Gingham Girl," and Miss Ford played opposite him. She was last seen here in the titular roles of "Helen of Troy, N. Y."

A Vincent Lopez Orchestra.

IN the cast are Una Munson, Marguerite Roberts, Aileen Meehan, Helen Wilson, William Sully, Eddie Gerard, Robert Pitkin, Earle Craddock, Grant Ervin and James Francis-Robertson. A dancing chorus is promised, together with a Vincent Lopez orchestra unit, the first to visit St. Louis.

"Runnin' Wild" lived up to its name by galloping along for a year at the Colonial Theater, New York, where midnight performances were added to meet the demand. George White, of "Scandals" celebrity, is the producer. The chorus, described as dancing with fanatical zest, has become known on its own account. The cast numbers in all about 80. Among them is Revella Hughes, the only negro singer ever invited to appear at the municipal concerts in Central Park, New York. A special orchestra is one of the features of the show.

"The Passing Show" Next Week.

THE eleventh Winter Garden production of "The Passing Show" series will arrive at the Shubert-Jefferson on Monday evening of next week, and the eighteenth edition of Ziegfeld's "Follies" is booked at the American for the week of Nov. 30. It will play here at a $4.40 top, as against $5.50 for the same show at the Illinois Theater in Chicago.

"Pitter Patter," by William B. Friedlander and Will H. Hough, is new to this city. It ran six months at the Longacre in New York. The hero is a bashful young man the course of whose romance is filled with bunkers. Ambitious stage sets are promised, including a rainstorm, a scene at the bottom of a copper mine, and a view of Havana Harbor by moonlight. As new principals, the management has engaged Emmett Vogan, Edith Lawrence and Eva Webber, together with a chorus and an augmented orchestra.

Miss Janis, at the Orpheum, will be assisted by Robert Brown Farley, pianist; and Walter Vern Pidgeon, baritone. On the bill also are Jean Middleton, violinist; Dave Ferguson, character comedian, in "The Lucky Stiff;" Frank Van Hooven, magician; Kirk and Collier, slack wire performers; Al Fields and Johnny Johnston, and Bostock's "Riding School," showing how circus riders are trained. Joe Weber and Lew Fields, veteran comedians, will lead the Orpheum's schedule next week.

Schiller's "Maria Stuart" at Odeon.

THE Rialto is observing "Jazz Week" with a show enlisting a cast of 25, headed by Roscoe Ails and Katie Pullman, dancers. The Grand Opera House announcement is as follows: The Capman brothers and a company, Jean Boydell, the Ja-da trio, Taylor and Bobbie, Naomi Ray, Alice Bertram and Eddie Harrison, Phil Roy and Roy Arthur, Marion and Jerry Ross, Tan Arakis and the M. E. G. Lime Trio.

In observance of the 165th anniversary of the birth of Friedrich von Schiller, the German Stock Co. will present his drama, "Maria Stuart," tonight at the Odeon. The casting of the principal roles follow: Queen Mary, Marie Hasemann; Queen Elizabeth, Hilda Muempfer; Burleigh, Otto Reuter; Shrewsbury, Paul Gehring; Leicester, Alexander Ritter; Amias Paulet, Felix Marx, and Mortimer, Hans Zeitschke. Owing to the length of the play, the curtain will rise at 7:30. The burlesque show at the Garrick is entitled "The Beauty Paraders."

"A Sainted Devil," Chaney as "He" And "Sandra" Here

Other Local Film Features Are "Find Your Man," "Ramshackle House" and "The Man Who Fights Alone."

THIS is Fourth Anniversary Week at the Missouri Theater, and there is a special and varied program of entertainment. Rudolph Valentino in "A Sainted Devil" from a story by Rex Beach heads the list of features. This is a story of a young South American of social wealth and position whose bride is stolen from him on his wedding day. Don Alonzo (Valentino) swears revenge on the bandits. After two years' search Alonzo visits a dive in Buenos Aires where he is known as "the mysterious stranger." He cares for no one—just seeking one man, waiting and hoping for some word from his bride. When at last the culprit does turn up there is fast moving action. The picture is said to be replete with gorgeous gowns and beautiful sets, and Valentino does the Argentine tango. In the cast are Helen D'Algy, Dagmar Godowsky, Roger Lytton, Nita Naldi and George Siegmann. Most of the scenes were taken in Buenos Aires, "The Paris of America." On the stage the Varsity Club Orchestra, Cliff Wassall conducting, plays a program of dance hits.

Joseph Littau and Milton Slosser have prepared an elaborate musical program for the feature and the specialties. The stage prologue is "The Missouri Birthday Party." On the bill also are the Three Little Maids, eccentric dancers.

The Loew's State feature is "He Who Gets Slapped," with Lon Chaney in the title role. This is based on the great stage play by Andreyev. While Chaney has made a world-wide reputation as a wizard of make-up and simulations of physical deformities, but in this production he relies entirely on straight characterization and pantomime. He has the role of a half-crazed scientist who becomes a clown after his life's work is stolen from him and he is deserted by his wife. Norma Shearer, John Gilbert, Tully Marshall, Marc McDermott, Ford Sterling and other screen celebrities are in the supporting cast. New ideas in photography and weird and mystic effects that lean toward the impressionistic are introduced, carrying out the intention of the producers to give meticulous attention to even trivial details.

On the stage appears the dramatic violinist, Jan Rubini. A prologue in keeping with the feature picture is also offered.

Barbara La Marr in "Sandra," with Bert Lytell, and a stage concert by Gene Rodemich's Orchestra, are attractions for the week at the Grand Central Theater. "Sandra" is an adaptation of the novel by Pearl Doles Bell.

The principal character is a woman of dual personality. Ordinarily she is a good, home-loving wife, but in another mood she imagines herself a famous beauty, with the world at her feet. Dreams beckon to her and ultimately she follows them. In a career of romance and adventure she follows the mirage that leads her on, but never attains happiness. The action takes Miss La Marr through several romances and many scenes of ultra-lavishness. Bert Lytell is cast as her husband.

At the West End Lyric and Capitol Rin-Tin-Tin, the war dog hero, holds the screen in "Find Your Man," his first production since "Where the North Begins." June Marlowe is the heroine and Rin-Tin-Tin is the spectacular hero of a drama dealing with lumber thieves. Lloyd (Ham) Hamilton's new comedy, "Crushed," will be presented as an added attraction at both houses.

"Find Your Man" will play only four days at the West End Lyric, giving away on Wednesday to Lionel Barrymore in "I Am the Man."

Betty Compson, in "Ramshackle House," is featured at the Kings and Rivoli Theaters this week. The story is staged in Florida in the heart of the dismal Everglades Swamps. Betty is the daughter of a genteel loafer, and she is forced to guard the failing fortunes of the family. Romance enters at the start of the picture in the person of Don Counsell, young and good-looking New Yorker, presumably passing a vacation in the swamp land. As he is the only person of her own age for miles around, Betty falls in love. Ernest Riever, another New Yorker, arrives on his palatial yacht with a detective looking for a murderer, and names Counsell as the man.

Betty cannot believe Don guilty. She hides him in one of the Everglades retreats. Then she makes friends with Riever until the latter drops a clew which aids Betty in her hunt for the truth. She suspects Riever of complicity in the murder.

The detectives locate Don and Betty warns him. He comes to her home and is hidden there. But he does not want to hide behind

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.

THE GREAT part of Paris which Mme. Simone did not bring over here with her—"the left bank of the Seine," to use the words of Firmin Gemier, noted star of the Theater National de l'Odeon of France—was transported to American soil and presented for the first time before an American audience in Jolson's Fifty-ninth Street Theater today night.

Applause Sincerely Fervent.

THE generous and sincerely enthusiastic applause which greeted M. Gemier and his fellow actors and actresses could not have left any doubt in their minds that their efforts were heartily appreciated and pleased those present, both French and American.

The ordinary American does not take to the ordinary French play, because the action seems strained. There was nothing of that sort in the Odeon company's performance to give any one cause for complaint. The entire four acts went over so naturally and with so much artistry and finesse that one was carried right along in suspense with the action.

"L'Homme Qui Assassina" is an international drama whose setting is in the picturesque city of Constantinople. Sir Archibald Falkland, an Englishman, director of the Ottoman Debt, is "a man of brutal and unscrupulous nature," to quote the program. His wife, Marie, a Cuban creole, he has ceased to love, and he intrigues to divorce her so he may marry his cousin, Edith, who is his mistress.

Medley of Liaisons.

MARIE endures his cruelties to be near her son, whom she loves. In a moment of loneliness and weakness she yields to Prince Cernuwitz, a friend of her husband and equally unscrupulous. Colonel the Marquis de Sevigny, French Military Attache in Turkey, sympathizes with Lady Falkland and a close friendship develops between them.

Mehmed Pasha, Marshal of the Sultan's palace, informs Sevigny,

One hundred and fifty full blood Indians of the Onondaga and Cattaraugus tribes journeyed from their reservation homes in north central and northwestern New York State to Astoria, L. I., to help Thomas Meighan make "Tongues of Flame" for paramount.

"The Chorus Lady," starring Margaret Livingston is ready for release. Others who appear in the production are Alan Roscoe, Philo Mac Cullough, Virginia Lee Corbin, Lillian Elliott, Lloyd Ingraham, Eve Southern and Mervyn Le Roy.

Anders Randolf, who has been identified with roles of villainy on the screen, has been assigned the part of Ilderim, the sheik, in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of Gen. Lew Wallace's novel "Ben Hur," which is being directed in Rome, Italy, by Fred Niblo.

Whitman Bennett has just finished the production for Vitagraph of Marie Conway Oemler's story, "Two Shall Be Born." The picture

Elena Gerhardt to Be Soloist With Symphony

THE program arranged by Director Ganz for the symphony concerts of Friday afternoon and Saturady evening has three points of interest. Elena Gerhardt, renowned as one of the foremost lieder singers, will appear as soloist, with groups of songs by Hugo Wolf and Richard Strauss. Beethoven's Fourth Symphony, which is rarely played, will have its first St. Louis performance in many years. As a "first time" novelty, the orchestra will present Ravel's "Pavane pour une infante defunte." The program in detail follows:

1. Symphony No. 4 in B-flat Major, Op. 60 ..... Beethoven
   I. Adagio; Allegro vivace.
   II. Adagio.
   III. Allegro vivace; Trio, un poco meno allegro.
   IV. Allegro ma non troppo.
2. Songs with Orchestra..... Wolf
   (a) "Der Freund."
   (b) "Verborgenheit."
   (c) "Er Ist's."
3. "Pavane pour une infante defunte" ..... Ravel
   (First time in St. Louis.)
4. Songs with Orchestra..... Strauss
   (a) "Morgen."
   (b) "Wiegenlied."
   (c) "Caecilie."
5. Tone Poem for Orchestra, "Tod und Verklaerung," Op. 24...Strauss

Jacobsen Today's Soloist.

THE soloist at the popular concert this afternoon at the Odeon will be Sascha Jacobsen, violinist, who will play Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole." Three dances from German's incidental music to "Nell Gwyn" will be played for the first time at these concerts. The program follows:

1. Overture to "Euryanthe".Weber
2. Second Movement, Largo, from Symphony No. 5, in E Minor, Op. 95 ("From the New World")— Dvorak
3. "Symphonie Espagnole" for Violin and Orchestra, Op. 21.....Lalo
4. Three Dances from "Nell Gwyn" German
   (First time.)
5. Melody in F.....Rubenstein (Orchestrated by Vincent d'Indy.)
6. Selections for Violin with Piano Accompaniment—
   (a) "Chanson Meditation"— Cottenet
   (b) Valse ....Levitski-Jacobson
   (c) "Molly on the Shore"— Grainger
7. "Rakoczy March" .....Berlioz

Owing to the fact that Alexander Borovsky, pianist, has decided not to visit America this year, his contract as soloist at the concerts of Nov. 28 and 29 has been canceled. In his stead, the management has engaged Stefi Geyer, Hungarian violinist and pupil of Jeno Hubay, who is making her first tour of the United States this season. She will play Spohr's "Gesangscene" concerto. The program, according to present plans, will also include Deems Taylor's suite, "Through the Looking Glass."

Miss Van Gordon's Program.

THE second concert of the Civic Music League will be given Tuesday night at the Odeon, and will present as soloist Miss Cyrena van Gordon, contralto, of the Chicago Civic Opera Co. Her program is announced as follows:

1. Aria, "L'abborrita rivale," from "Adia" ..... Verdi
2. "Die Lorelei" .....Liszt
3. "Caecilie" ..... Strauss
4. "Coucher de soleil".Lenormand
5. "Tes yeux" .....Rabey
6. "L'heure exquise" ...Poldowski
7. "Le trefle a quatre feuilles"— Lenormand
8. "The Old Road"— John Prindle Scott
9. "Doushka" .....Henry Hadley
10. "Robin, Robin"—

Lieder Singer Who Will Appear With Orchestra

ELENA GERHARDT.

Charles Gilbert Spross
11. "Lorraine, Lorraine, Lorree"— Spross
12. Aria, "Jo-Ho-to-ho," from "Die Walkuere" ..... Wagner

Mr. Galloway's Organ Recital.

THE program for Charles Galloway's free organ recital, at 3 o'clock this afternoon, at Graham Memorial Chapel, Washington University, will include the Allegro from Guilmant's Seventh Sonata, a Prelude and Fugue of Bach, Wolstenholme's Sonata in the style of Handel, Schmindtke's "March of the Toys," Yon's "Humoresque," Barre's Toccata, Kinder's "In Moonlight" and Shelley's "Fanfare."

The Kroeger Alumni Association will give a reception in honor of Ernest R. Kroeger Wednesday evening at the Artists' Guild. A program will be presented by Miss Louise Kroeger, Horace White and Stanley Goldman.

A program of readings and of vocal and piano numbers will be presented at the meeting of the Morning Etude Club, Wednesday morning at Vandervoort Music Hall. A students' recital, free to the public, will be given this evening at the South Side Auditorium of the Strassberger Conservatories, Grand boulevard and Shenandoah avenue. The first students' concert of the season at Lindenwood College, St. Charles, took place on Armistice day.

Musical vesper services, which have been attended by thousands in the last several years, will be renewed at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Second Baptist Church by P. G. Anton, violoncellist, and Arthur Lieber, organist. The Rev. Dr. W. C. Bitting will give a five-minute address.

Nathan Sachs announces a piano recital of modern music for Dec. 9 at the Sheldon Auditorium. John Thomas, head of the music department at Lindenwood College, gave a piano recital Thursday morning at Roemer Auditorium.

a woman's skirts and flees into the swamps.

Betty enlists the aid of the Seminole Indians to find Don. He is rescued and the real murderer is brought to justice.

The Delmonte has "The Man Who Fights Alone," William Farnum's first picture on his return to the screen after an absence of more than a year. Farnum is supported by Lois Wilson and Edward Horton. The story deals with a young civil engineer and his band of empire builder — a sort of advance guard of civilization which is preparing the great West vastness for the tide of humanity which is to follow. A vaudeville act and music features complete the bill.

ACTRESS' RECITAL IN CHURCH

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Cinema shows and religious operas have occasionally been performed in churches, but probably for the first time a well-known actress has given a recital in Christ Church, Westminster.

The church was crowded. The actress mounted the lectern and read a number of poems, the first being the hymn to the American people written by Walt Whitman, beginning "As a strong bird on pinions free." Then followed a prayer by Sir Rabindranath Tagore the Indian poet, and recitations from Shelly's "Hymn to Intellectual Beauty" and the "Ode to the West Wind."

PENSION FOR ACTOR'S COOK

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—Marie, cook and maid of all work for the great actor, Edouard de Max, is to be pensioned by the Comedie Francaise. She took care of her erratic and prodigal master for some 30 years, during which she saw him give away 1000-franc notes and often had to fight off bill collectors.

Her master never forgot to aid his poor comrades, but seldom remembered to pay Marie her wages, which, his friends say, were 44,000 francs ($2500) in arrears when he died recently.

CONSERVATIVES IN FAVOR OF REOPENING EXHIBITION

Will Ask Parliament for Funds; Expect Wembley Show Will Attract Colonial Visitors.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Leaders of the conservative Government, who are of the opinion that the reopening of the British Empire exhibition next year constitutes a necessary background for empire trade revival which the party claims will follow its assuming office, are expected to ask Parliament shortly after the opening session for grant of money to carry on the show another year on condition that the dominions are also willing to bear their part of the financial burden.

It is pointed out that the cost of reopening the Wembley exposition will be only about a tenth of the original expenditure, while the leaders believe that the benefits will be as great as those this year and will also allow thousands of people from the dominions another chance to visit the commercial heart of their empire. All permanent exhibits at Wembley are being kept intact on the supposition that Parliament will readily appropriate the sum requested.

THE 'MIRACLE' TO BE SHOWN IN CLEVELAND AUDITORIUM

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 15.—Max Reinhardt's production of the "Miracle," which closed in New York a week ago after 293 performances, is being dismantled and set up in the Public Auditorium in this city, where the spectacle play and its company of 700 will begin an engagement of three weeks on Dec. 22. To make the project possible, a group of Cleveland citizens has subscribed a guarantee fund of $315,000.

"The Miracle," in New York, represented an outlay of $600,000, and in 10 months at the Century Theater earned $2,000,000. The war tax paid to the Government was $200,000. Its New York run was longer than the engagements at 17 European cities combined, according to the producer, Morris Gest. The undertaking was financed by Otto H. Kahn.

has a notable cast, including Jane Novak, Kenneth Harlan, Sigrid Holmquist, Frank Sheridan, Fuller Mellish, Joseph Burke, Blanche Craig, Joseffa de Bok, Catherine Evans, Walter James, Zyllah Inez Shannon and H. Cooper Cliffe.

Ruth Clifford spent two hours in the makeup chair each day for the purpose of looking like an old lady of 70 for her featured role in Frank Lloyd's "Judgment."

Alec B. Francis has finished work in a featured role in "The Bridge of Sighs," a Warner Bros. production.

Ramon Novarro holds the title of being the most cosmopolitan star of the screen. A Mexican by birth, of Spanish and Aztec blood, he made an instant hit in his first role in pictures, that of the German Rupert in "Zenda." Following that came the Frenchman in "Trifling Women," a Polynesian in "Where the Pavement Ends," a Frenchman in "Scaramouche," a Spaniard in "Thy Name Is Woman," an Apache in "The Red Lily," an Arab in "The Arab," and now the noble Jew of the House of Hur in "Ben Hur."

The Photoplay Magazine gold medal of honor awarded annually for the best picture of the year has been won for 1923 by the Paramount production, "The Covered Wagon." This award is made by the votes of 2,500,000 readers of Photoplay Magazine and is conceded to be the highest mark of distinction in the motion picture world.

Filming of Anzia Yezierska's colorful novel of the Ghetto, "Salome of the Tenements," which created such a stir in literary circles a few months ago, was started at the Paramount Astoria studio last week. It will be a Sidney Olcott production. Jetta Goudal has the role of Sonya, capricious, impulsive daughter of the lower East Side, whose craving for beauty leads to a romance and marriage with a millionaire philanthropist. Manning, the millionaire, is played by Godfrey Tearle, English actor, who is making his American screen debut in this picture.

Constance Bennett has been signed on a long term contract by Paramount. Her first appearance under her new contract will be in a leading role in James Cruze's next production, "The Goose Hangs High." Miss Bennett is the first of the new Cruze cast to be announced.

"Lord Chumley" has been completed by Paramount. This is the screen version of the famous play by Henry C. de Mille and David Belasco. Viola Dana, Raymond Griffith, Theodore Roberts, Cyril Chadwick and Anna May Wong are featured in the cast.

Warner Baxter and Betty Compson seem to be becoming another of those "teams" so popular with theater-goers. Baxter appeared with Miss Compson in "The Female" and has been signed for a featured role in her support in "The Garden of Weeds."

Cable dispatches received from Paris by Famous Players Lasky Corporation state that the task of organizing the cast which will support Gloria Swanson in "Madame Sanse-Gene" has been completed. The cast includes some of the most noted actors and actresses of France. Charles de Roche, the only one besides Miss Swanson who has had any motion picture experience in America, has the role of Le Febvre. De Roche won an enviable reputation as an actor in France before coming to this country and the climax of his career here was the portrayal of the role of Pharaoh in "The Ten Commandments."

The C. B. DeMille road to stardom has been opened to Jane Winton, former Follies show girl, who has been appearing in Paramount pictures at the company's Eastern studio. Miss Winton, who is now working in Bebe Daniels' first starring picture, "Dangerous Money," has been assigned a role in Cecil B. DeMille's forthcoming production, "The Golden Bed," which will soon go into work at the Lasky studio in Hollywood. On finishing her role in the Daniel's picture, Miss Winton will pack her trunks and leave for the West Coast studio to begin work under the direction of Mr. DeMille.

Betty Bronson, who was the choice of Sir James Barrie at the end of a year's world wide search for a girl to play the role of "Peter Pan" on the screen, is different from nine out of 10 American girls for at least one reason—she has yet to succumb to the bobbed hair fad.

David Smith, who directed Vitagraph's production of "Masters of Men" and "Captain Blood," gained his training for work on sea stories during the Spanish-American War, when he served on a ship of the Mosquito Fleet, patrolling the Pacific coastline of the United States.

Adolphe Menjou, who recently completed a role as a philanderer in William de Mille's production for Paramount, "The Fast Set," a screen adaptation of the stage play, "Spring Cleaning," has been chosen to play in "The Swan" in support of Elsie Ferguson.

A location camp covering two square miles has been constructed in Texas by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for the production of Emerson Hough's "North of 36." This ground is only to be used for the housing and care of the people and not for the filming of the production.

who is his friend, that a conspiracy is forming against Lady Falkland. Marie seeks the Colonel to confess her error with the Prince, but is overcome by her emotions. Sevigny, thinking she has fainted, kisses her. Realizing he loves her, Marie finds herself unable to confess, and leaves.

Later she is surprised by her husband in a love-scene with Cernuwitz and Falkland forces his wife to sign a paper relinquishing her rights to their son and his money. Falkland, left alone, is confronted by Sevigny, who stabs him to death and regains the paper the wife had signed. But in the end he leaves her.

To Gemier as Sevigny and Mme. Germaine Rouer as Lady Falkland go first honors for some very excellent dramatic art. Andre Varennes was a most excellent and phlegmatic Pasha, and Charles Vanel as Falkland; Marcel Cabrier as Cernuwitz, Mme. Viera Koretky as Edith and Mme. Yvonne Mirval as Mme. de Servange, faithful friend of Marie and Sevigny, were thoroughly effective in their parts.

"The Steam Roller."

AT the Princess Monday night Janet Beecher and Bruce McRae were presented in "The Steam Roller" by Laurence Eyre. It did seem, after the little comedy had ended, that a bulky, black-haired, bright-eyed woman had been standing on the stage all evening long, talking mostly about herself.

Most everything that happens on the stage comes from the lips of an efficient, headstrong, talkative and highly self-confident spinster, Amelia. Amelia, without doubt, is also a little nutty. And the things Amelia does and the things Amelia says sometimes are extremely funny. It would not be at all unlikely, were this chocolate eating autocrat set going in a play which provided more fireworks and considerably less gabbing, she would come through with an evening of almost continuous amusement. She does pretty well, don't forget, as it is.

True enough, there are at least two romantic plots under way throughout Mr. Eyre's three acts. Aemlia herself, who dotes on building a museum and offering up the last spark of her unflagging energy in service to the cultural advancement of her section of New Jersey, wants, and expects to win, the love of a man whose affection long has been possessed by her sister. Also Amelia's ward is seen falling in love with the housekeeper instead of the respectable little thing Amelia has chosen. But, after all, the play offers not much more than an extremely good caricature of a 100 per cent female go-getter. There is no question about the effective character drawing in this case, and certainly Miss Beecher is the actress to play it.

As for Mr. Bruce McRae, he was there in the role of the man over whom the two sisters waged war, but it didn't seem he was very much wrought up one way or the other.

The title of the play suggests the principal character. Amelia is said, on at least two occasions, to be not unlike a steam roller. She goes steadily onward, tramping flat any obstacle that may fall in her path.

A START of one night was won by St. Louis over New York in the presentation of "Simon Called- Peter," which was offered Monday night at the Klaw Theater, and which received an unfavorable verdict from the Gotham critics. Excerpts from several of the reports follow:

Heywood Broun, in the Morning World: "Simon Called Peter" manages to present a series of sensational incidents and yet remain rather a placid play. By some curious mishap of production, even the big seduction scene of the third episode is definitely tame. This is not the intent, and the failure is not for want of trying.

"Reportorial justice impels this reviewer to note the fact that there were shudders in the audience and cries of horror when the actress who played Madeleine, the French cocette, tore off the greater part of her dress in an effort to embarrass the British army chaplain. But your critic neither shuddered nor shielded his eyes. Something in the technique of the scene was ill-advised, and loud laughter rippled throughout the theater during the greater part of the whole temptation business.

"I never felt that the minister was in any great danger, even though the door of the room was locked and he seemed wholly defenseless. No, his peril was more apparent than real, for by his side stood the Spirit of Burlesque, and with such a chaperon no harm could come to him.

"It may be that the censors will have something to say about the manner in which this particular scene is played, for censors are foolish and seldom concern themselves with anything except externals. And it is perfectly true that there was a rather unusually drastic rending of garments. Still, the effect was not erotic. It is not difficult to conceive the possibility that the third episode of 'Simon Called Peter,' or anything similar, might be played far more seductively by a competent actress who did not even remove a hairpin. The play as it stands is so markedly cheap in design and execution that its boldness seems nothing but effrontery. One performance stands out as first rate. Catherine Willard is excellent as Julie."

"Flat, Futile, Foolish."

EVENING WORLD: "In the drama which has been made from the Keable book and which was presented in New York for the first time Monday night at the Klaw Theater, vice hides a diminished head. It really breaks through but once, when, in the third of the play's four episodes, a certain Madeleine, sadly and pallidly bad, sets temptation to work on Peter Graham as if he were any St. Anthony, and carries her assault to the extreme of a wild and wicked tearing of her corsage.

"Light applause and a few hisses followed this exploit. But there was more of laughter than of either. What had been laboriously designed as the flaming climax of an episode fell flat, futile and foolish.

"Other things besides what we have just indicated have been done to Mr. Keable's book in making it into a play. The principal thing is that the life has been taken out of it. 'Simon, called Peter,' as it is presented on the stage, is thin, theatrical and altogether tiresome."

"Earnest Platitudes."

EVENING SUN: "The theme of 'Simon Called Peter' was old when Henry Arthur Jones wrote his vastly superior 'Michael and His Lost Angel.' It will be older when some future writer stakes his masterpiece on the well-trodden field. Neither Mr. Keable, nor the dramatic doctors who prepared the book for the stage, has anything new to say or any original way of resaying the old. The play is tenuous in several places. Rather startling incident is connected by long harangues. If all the earnest platitudes in the play were placed end to end they would reach from here to the bed-time stories. There,' naturally they would start all over again.

"Undoubtedly the play will raise a furore among the professionally scandalized. The predicament in which the clergyman discovers himself is not lovely. The scene in which the fille de joie uncovers her unappealing self will doubtless stir to wrath those whom its bald childishness does not bore."

Evening Post: "Here is the literary shocker of a season or so ago translated to Mr. Brady's private sawdust trail. It is tinted here and there with the lavender incidents which seemed to help the book to favor, and Dr. Roach Stratton, we are advised, was invited to attend and excite himself to good box office wrath.

"Whether he did or not may not be material evidence, but you would have to have a fair self-start in excitement before much could be got out of 'Simon Called Peter.'"

"Some Shining Moments."

HERALD-TRIBUNE: "This dramatization of Robert Keable's novel has some shining, expansive occasions, contaminated by other moments that drift foggily across like cheap cigarette smoke. Again and again the play chugs grandly on the upgrade, and then the clutch slips. It has such tingling scenes as the several amorous episodes between Catherine Willard and Leonard Willey, particularly that searchlight moment when, with an air raid swooping down, the nurse, Julie, and the English chaplain who has gone into the war to find humanity's soul, discover their love for each other while the airplanes hum a romantic but sinister obligato overhead.

"Again, the shock of real drama spurts across the footlights when H. Tyrrell Davis gives one of the best death scenes of the current season. And then on the darker side of the ledger was the deplorably frowsy taste of cafe scene wherein the French siren of the camps sought to seduce the puritanical chaplain."

Evening Telegram and Mail: When Robert Keable wrote his story he doubtless had in mind the possibility that Peter, the preacher; Julie, the adorable, and all the rest of his interesting array of characters might some day greet an audience across the footlights. But it is quite inconceivable that it ever occurred to him that a strictly minor character out of his novel might, by exaggeration, distortion and crudest invention, be used to furnish a new motif.

Yet that is exactly what the playwrights did with the Cocotte Madeleine—a role execrably acted by June Webster, a veritable intrusion in the piece. Seldom has a Broadway audience been asked to condone a worse presentation of a most unattractive and likewise unnecessary character. There were exceptions to the generally inferior work of the large cast. Catherine Willard, as Julie Gamelyn, made a rich contribution which deserved better surroundings and more background.

Theme Akin to "Rain."

NEW YORK Times: The theme of "Simon Called Peter," that of the contrast between the teachings of the church and this world as it is lived in, is akin to that of "Rain." The Messrs. Goodman and Knoblock have set out rather frankly to develop this idea to the limit of its theatrical possibilities. In writing a play that is pretty bluntly theatrical they have achieved effectiveness most of the time. There was one scene last night—a vampirish bit in which Mr. Keable's minister-hero was attacked—when the entire structure seemed likely to collapse in one good outburst of laughter. Once this ridiculous scene was left behind, however, the play had a rather steady melodramatic sweep.

It weakened a bit in a Broadway epilogue, to be sure. The playwrights did not quite have the courage to carry their theme to its logical conclusion. Julie and Peter Graham went their separate ways in the novel. But this moment of falsity does not greatly weaken a play that has many holding and effective scenes.

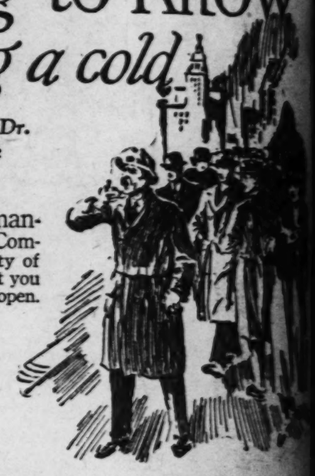
Good Thing to Know about stopping a cold

At the first sniffle take a stiff dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, expel the congestion and avoid a cold



THE commonest afflictions of mankind are constipation and colds. Combined they indirectly cause the majority of untimely deaths. It is when constipated that you are most subject to colds, so keep the bowels open.

Sneezing is almost always the first warning of a cold. Don't wait; don't hope that it will go away of itself. Take a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, cleansing the intestines of accumulated poisons, bundle up warmly and the cold will be gone by morning. Colds cannot "run their course" when stopped at the outset. That spoonful of Syrup Pepsin may stop it.

A good laxative is a necessity in the home. Since Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, over 10 million bottles being sold annually, the majority of families must prefer it.

And rightly so, for in the 30 years it has been on the market it has relieved thousands of people of those ailments it was designed to remedy, such as constipation, biliousness, indigestion, flatulency, sour stomach, dyspepsia, bad breath, fevers and colds. It will relieve any disorder associated with constipation. It is the safest, most gentle intestinal treatment you can get. Mr. J. C. Boney, 969 Main St., Biloxi, Miss., and Mr. Walter Duminske, 797 Wheelock St., Detroit, Mich., are never without a bottle in their homes. They attribute their uniform good health to having it handy when needed. You will find it in every drug store. A dose costs about a cent.

There is no secret about the contents of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and you will find it stated on the package, a vegetable compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasant aromatics, free from narcotics and opiates. It is just such a laxative as is ideally suited to families, and for the young and effective for the old. Make up your mind to buy a bottle, and if for any reason whatever it does not come up to your expectations, your money will be refunded.

Free Sample Bottle Coupon

There are people who very rightly prefer to try a thing before they buy it. Let them clip this coupon, print their name and address to it, and send it to the Pepsin Syrup Co., 518 Washington Street, Monticello, Illinois, and a free sample bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will be sent them postpaid by mail. Do not inclose postage. It is free.

CONCERTS ADD $1400 TO FREE ICE FUND

Amount Sets Season's High Mark for Single Contributions—Total Now $6732.

CONTRIBUTIONS.

Previously acknowledged	$5325.40
Returns from four "pop" symphony concerts by Joseph Littau and the Missouri Theater orchestra	1400.00
Caffarata, 5901 Delmar boulevard	4.50
Elizabeth and Natalie Allison	2.00
Audrey St. Jean, 4221 Flora boulevard	1.00
Total	$6732.90

Returns from the four "pop" symphony concerts given at the Missouri Theater on four Sunday afternoons during October by Joseph Littau and his Missouri Theater Orchestra have added $1400 to the Post-Dispatch Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund, setting the season's high mark for single additions to the fund. Three cash donations increased the fund by $7.50 since the last report, and the total amount contributed during the season is $6732.90. This fully defrays the summer's bills for ice for the twentieth season of the work for the babies, leaving a margin of $130 with which to begin next summer's work.

More than 750 families received ice through the medium of the Post-Dispatch Free Ice for Babies' Milk Fund during the months of June, July, August and September. A social service worker made careful investigation of the merits of each request received by the Fund and the entire amount donated by the public was used for the purpose for which it was given.

In addition to the $1400 from the Missouri Theater, the contributions were $2 from Elizabeth and Natalie Allison, $4.50 from the Caffarata children, 5901 Delmar boulevard, and $1 from Audrey St. Jean.

AMERICAN BUILDING GIANT ASTRONOMICAL MIRROR

Yerkes' Professor's Task in Paris Will Take Four Years to Complete.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—The largest astronomical mirror in the world is to be constructed in the vaulted chamber of the Paris observatory, where Jean Picard and Philippe La Hire, famous astronomers of the days of Louis XIV, carried out their experiments in determining the measurements of the earth and the planets.

Prof. George Willis Ritchey, of Yerkes observatory, who has just received the Janssen gold medal from the Academy of Science, is in charge of the construction. The mirror, when completed, will measure six meters, or nearly 20 feet in diameter.

Astronomy is at present halted by inability to make reflectors of greater dimensions, so that, when the Ritchey mirror is completed, vast strides may be made. Up to the present, large mirrors have been found impracticable, as a slight change in temperature has been sufficient to spoil them, owing to the fact that the surface of the glass is affected more rapidly than the internal mass.

To overcome this, Prof. Ritchey's mirror is to be constructed of glass stuck together by a special preparation, arranged in such a manner as to leave air channels below the surface and throughout the thickness of the mirror. Thus, changes of temperature will affect all parts equally.

At first, mirrors of ordinary dimensions are to be constructed and from these Prof. Ritchey will proceed step by step until he reaches the six-meter reflector which he hopes to do within four years.

NEW OILING SYSTEM SHOWN AT PARIS AUTO EXHIBITION

To Counteract High Speed Motors, a Radiator Is Used to Cool the Oil.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 31.—High-speed motors have brought with them the problem of proper oiling, once thought solved. Engines that turn at 4000 and 5000 revolutions a minute must be well lubricated. At first the oil film is adequate, but the friction of high speed soon heats the oil, thinning it so that the lubrication is insufficient and also allowing the passage of gasoline into the crankcase, causing further deterioration.

To counteract this one car at this year's exhibition in Paris has a radiator to cool the oil and a purifying system, so that oil of the same temperature and quality is fed continuously to the engine.

FUNERALS TAX ON TAXPAYER

State Ceremonies for the Great Heavy Item in France.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—National obsequies have proved a heavy item in this year's expenditures. There have been no less than five funerals at the expense of the state thus far, those of Gen. Maunoury, Charles de Freycinet, Maurice Barres, Anatole France and Gabriel Faure. In addition the solemn removal of the ashes of the great Socialist orator, Jean Jaures, to the Pantheon at the end of this month, will be on similar lines to a state funeral.

These ceremonies cost the taxpayers at least 40,000 francs (normally $8000) each, so that the appropriation this year will amount to about a quarter of a million francs.

Wash Away Pounds of Fat Double Chins and Years of Age with La-Mar Reducing Soap

Shrinks the Skin as it Dissolves the Fat

The new discovery, La-Mar reducing soap, brings quick and amazing results. No dieting, no exercising, nothing to take internally. Reduce any part of the body at will without affecting any other part. La-Mar acts like magic on double chin, big abdomen, ugly, shapeless ankles, wrists and arms, large hips or breasts, or on superfluous fat on any part of the body or all over it. It is easy and pleasant to use and absolutely harmless—cleansing, cooling, soothing and effective. La-Mar reducing soap is sold on a money-back guarantee by Judge & Dolph Drug Stores, Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Enderle Drug Co. and all good drug and department stores, or direct to you by prepaid parcel post if your dealer cannot supply you. Price 50c a cake, or three cakes for $1.00; one to three cakes usually accomplish its purpose. You'll be surprised at results.

Supt. Gannon Feels Fine--Is Enthusiastic

Says Language Cannot Express Good Done

"I have been a sufferer from stomach trouble for years. I have not yet used up the first bottle of Adlerika as I only take it mornings, but have already begun to enjoy good health. Language cannot express the good Adlerika has done and is doing me." (Signed) J. T. Gannon, Superintendent Potomac Gas and Oil Company.

Intestinal Evacuant

There is now offered to the public a liquid preparation which is not only a wonderfully effective and QUICK intestinal evacuant, but which also seems to stimulate the glands of the intestinal tract and to cause expulsion of flatus (GAS). This preparation, known as Adlerika, is a valuable agent for the purpose of cleansing the bowels of matter which has been in the system a long time and which other less effective means have been unable to dislodge. It is often astonishing the great amount of matter Adlerika draws from the intestinal canal—even right after a natural movement it sometimes brings out unsuspected quantities of additional matter. Many times it brings out much GAS, thus relieving pressure in the abdomen. Adlerika is especially valuable when PROMPT action is necessary or to encourage the elimination of metabolic poisons through the bowel.

In slight disorders such as occasional constipation or gas on the stomach and headache (when due to bowel inaction), a single spoonful of Adlerika often produces surprising and gratifying results. In cases of obstinate constipation or stomach trouble, if Adlerika does not bring relief in 24 to 36 hours the advice of a reputable physician should be secured.

Reports from Physicians

"I congratulate you on the good effect from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"Adlerika is the best in my entire 37 years' experience." (Signed) Dr. G. Eggers.

"I prescribed Adlerika with highly satisfactory results." (Signed) Dr. A. C. C. (Name given on request.)

"I can't get along without Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. W. H. Bernhart.

J. E. Puckett (a user of Adlerika) writes: "After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the impurities eliminated from my system."

Adlerika is a big surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines because of its REAL and QUICK action. Sold by leading druggists everywhere. In St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and Enderle Drug Co.

FRENCH BOXER KNOCKED SPEECHLESS FOR 4 DAYS

Doctors Believe Nerve Heretofore Unknown to Science Was Affected by Blow.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 30.—The plea of enthusiastic boxing fans, "Knock him speechless," was literally complied with during a bout between two lumbering heavyweights recently. They had been mauling and pulling each other through round after round when one accidentally caught the other on the point of the chin with a wild swing.

The one on the receiving end of the swing went down like a log. He was revived after a few minutes, but was amazed to find that he could not articulate a single word. Realizing that he had gone completely dumb he fell off into a swoon.

It was four days before the defeated boxer recovered his speech. Doctors attached to the French Boxing Federation declared that his jaw was not dislocated, but that the blow affected a nerve hitherto unknown to science. They are making a further study of the case.

THE KING OF ROMANCE
Rudolph Valentino IN 'A SAINTED DEVIL'
BY REX BEACH
A Paramount Picture

Here is the screen's "greatest lover" in a South American picture of contrasts—the old hacienda life of the Argentine, contrasted with the smart social life of Buenos Aires, the Paris of the Americas. It has fire and dash and is set in surroundings that enhance its pictorial beauty and give zest to the plot; it stirs the emotions to high intensity.

Rudolph Valentino combines the best qualities of "The Sheik" and "Four Horsemen."
—that gives him the greatest role he's ever had—bar none.
—a handsome young blade of the Argentine.
—loving, tangoing, fighting, thrilling as never before!
That's the royal treat awaiting you in "A Sainted Devil."

SAYS AUTOS CAN BE FORBIDDEN ON STREETS

Former Judge Withrow Asserts Legislature Can Act to Reduce Number of Accidents.

Former Circuit Judge James E. Withrow, in urging automobile drivers to exercise more caution, points out that a drastic but sure remedy rests in the Legislature, which has the authority to pass a law forbidding motor vehicles of any kind to use the streets and highways of the State.

"As far as I know, no State Legislature has, as yet, enacted any such law, and it is to be hoped that they will not have to be called upon to do so," Judge Withrow writes to the Post-Dispatch. His letter follows:

Tells of Loss of Life.

"The loss of life and limb in traffic accidents in St. Louis in the past 10 months has made a deep impression upon the public. They have cost the loss of over 150 human lives and hundreds, if not thousands, of more or less serious injuries, and the number seems to be increasing. This has been caused, to a large extent, by the carelessness or incompetency of the drivers, notwithstanding the efforts of the police and numerous safety societies. The want of proper care on the part of some of the pedestrians, too, may have contributed somewhat to the result.

"A large number of those killed or injured in motor vehicle accidents were children and aged persons. A child is only required to exercise such care and prudence for its safety as may be reasonably expected of a person of its age and capacity under similar circumstances.

"The courts have held that the right to use the public highway, by any person, must be exercised in a mode consistent with the equal rights of others to use the highways.

Creates Serious Danger.

"That the motor vehicle, on account of its size and weight, and of the great speed which it is capable of attaining, creates (unless managed by careful and competent operators) a most serious danger both to other travelers on the highway and to the occupants of the vehicles themselves, is too clearly a matter of common knowledge to justify discussion.

"If the Legislature may declare it a crime to use a motor vehicle on the public highway, under any circumstances, there is no reason why it may not equally declare it a crime to use such a vehicle as to injure anyone in person or property. This argument rests upon the proposition that in operating a motor vehicle, the operator exercises a privilege which might be denied him and not an absolute right. It is well established that the Legislature may, with a view to the safety of the public, provide for the complete exclusion of automobiles form a highway on which, in its judgment, such machines should not be allowed. And it may prohibit altogether the use of automobiles and motor vehicles upon the highways and streets of the State.

Right Is Established.

"The right of the Legislature, acting under the police power, to prescribe that automobiles shall not pass over certain streets or public ways in a city or town, is well established upon principle and authority. It may delegate this power to boards of aldermen in cities, within their jurisdiction, from which, in their judgment, the public welfare demands such exclusion.

"There was a grand total of 14,500 motor vehicle fatalities in the United States in 1923. Something should be done, without unnecessary delay, to stop this appalling loss of life and injury to the people. There is one sure but drastic remedy and that is for the Legislautre to pass a law forbidding motor vehicles of any kind to use the streets and highways of the State, under penalty of fine and mipriisonment, or both. As far as I know, no State Legislature has, as yet, enacted any such law and it is to be hoped that they will not have to be called upon to do so. With a half dozen motor vehicle manufactories in Missouri, and hundreds of thousands of owners, dealers in, and operators of such conveyances it would, no doubt, be difficult to pass or enforce such a statute, but it can be done, if necessary.

"With the help of this vast body of manufacturers, owners, dealers and operators, the public authorities and safety societies can do much to lessen ,if not eradicate, the evil."

Seeks Missing Husband.

Mrs. Katherine Scott of 2354 Albion place has asked the Post-Dispatch to help her locate her husband, Samuel C. Scott, 36 years old, who was last heard from on June 25 when he wrote from Lincoln, Neb., saying he was about to depart for Butte, Mont. Scott formerly was a special agent for the American Express Co. Since the war, Mrs. Scott said, he had suffered from the effects of being gassed overseas. He is described as 5 feet 9 inches tall, weight 180, blue eyes, light brown hair, fair complexion, scar on the left cheek.

Is Your Blood Starving For Want Of Iron?

Modern Methods of Cooking and Living Have Made an Alarming Increase in Iron Deficiency in Blood of American Men and Women

WHY NUXATED IRON SO QUICKLY BUILDS UP WEAK, NERVOUS, RUN-DOWN FOLKS—Millions Of People Have Taken It To Increase Their Strength, Power, Energy and Endurance.

"Is your blood starving for want of iron? Iron is red blood food. If you were to go without eating until you became weak, thin and emaciated, you could not do a more serious harm to yourself, than when you let your blood literally starve for want of iron—iron that gives it strength and power to change food into living tissue," said a well-known physician recently.

"Modern methods of cooking and the rapid pace at which people of this country live has made such an alarming increase in iron deficiency in the blood of American men and women that I have often marveled at the large number of people who lack iron in the blood, and who never suspect the cause of their weak, nervous, run-down state. Lack of iron in the blood not only makes a man a physical and mental weakling, nervous, irritable, easily fatigued, but it utterly robs him of that virile force, that stamina and strength of will which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life. It may also transform a beautiful, sweet-tempered woman into one who is cross, nervous and irritable. I have strongly emphasized the great necessity of physicians making blood examinations of their weak, anaemic, run-down patients. Thousands of persons go on year after year suffering from physical weakness and a highly nervous condition due to lack of sufficient iron in their red blood corpuscles without ever realizing the real and true cause of their trouble. Without iron in your blood your food merely passes through the body, something like corn through an old mill, with rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind.

"For want of iron you may be an old man at thirty, dull of intellect, poor in memory, nervous, irritable and all 'run-down,' while at 50or 60 with plenty of iron in your blood you may still be young in feeling, full of life, your whole being brimming over with vim and energy.

"But in my opinion you can't make strong, keen, forceful men and healthy rosy-cheeked women by feeding them on metallic iron. The old forms of metallic iron must go through a digestive process to transform them into organic iron before they are ready to be taken up and assimilated by the human system. Notwithstanding all that has been said and written on this subject by well-known physicians, thousands of people still insist in doing themselves with metallic iron simply, I suppose, because it costs a few cents less. I strongly advise readers in all cases to get a physician's prescription for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—or if you don't want to go to this trouble, then purchase only Nuxated Iron in its original packages and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the package. If you have taken preparations such as Nux and Iron and other similar iron products and failed to get results remember that such products are an entirely different thing from Nuxated Iron."

In commenting upon the value of Nuxated Iron as a means for creating red blood, strength and endurance, another physician says:

"Scarcely a day goes by but that I see women whose careworn faces, dragging steps and generally weak, tired appearance show unmistakable signs of that anaemic, run down condition, usually brought on by lack of iron in the blood.

"There can be no strong, healthy, beautiful women without iron and inasmuch as refining processes and modern cooking methods remove the iron of Mother Earth from so many of our most common foods this iron deficiency should be supplied by using some form of organic iron just as we use salt when our food has not enough salt.

"Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it no matter how much or what you eat your food merely passes through you without doing you good, and as a consequence you become weak, pale, and sickly-looking just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. Pallor means anaemia. The skin of an anaemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby. The memory fails, and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent, melancholy. Give such a woman a short course of Nuxated Iron and she often quickly becomes an entirely different individual—strong, healthy and rosy-cheeked. I have used Nuxated Iron widely in my own practice most severe, aggravated conditions with unfailing results. I have indorsed many other physicians to give it a trial, all of whom have given me most surprising reports in regard to its great power as a tonic and strength builder."

Nuxated Iron may be obtained from any druggist. It is not a secret remedy, but one which is known to druggists the country over. Unlike the old forms of metallic iron which may injure the teeth, make them black and spoil the stomach, Nuxated Iron is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth or upset the stomach, but on the contrary soon makes the gums red and the teeth white and pearl-like. Numerous cases are on record where the use of Nuxated Iron has increased the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous people in two weeks' time as much as 100 per cent or more. If you are not strong or well you can readily see for yourself what a few days' use of this remarkable iron tonic will do for you. At least it is worth a trial, for it is dispensed by druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or your money back.

The "Economy Block" 9

FOR LADIES' AND MISSES' COATS, SUITS, DRES, MILLINER

PLEASE fix your mind on this location—the NORTH side of WASHINGTON AV.—running from BROADWAY to SIXTH ST.—directly across the street from the two large 10c stores—Kresge's and Woolworth's.

In this block, known as the "Economy Block" of St. Louis, are located FOUR separate and distinct retail stores—stores that from the standpoint of quality and values—are probably of greater interest and mean more to the economical women than any other store or group of stores in St. Louis.

These stores, in the order of their location, are Addison's, Jackson's, Harolds and Sterns. They are modern, attractive and friendly stores—with inviting fronts and well-appointed first, second and third floors, devoted exclusively to Women's, Misses' and Children's ready-to-wear apparel.

Here the latest styles and most dependable qualities are shown in an array surpassing anything you have seen. We are not exaggerating when we tell you that in these four stores today there are display over 10,000 coats, over 8,000 dresses and everything else in like profusion. Nowhere in all this city are you offered so wide a choice selection. No other store even claims to show many garments as you will find here.

But, with all that, these stores make no pretention to extreme elegance of appointment. There are no Circassian walnut fixtures, Persian rugs on the floors, no fancy French rooms or other lavish furnishings, that, in the end, the customer must pay for.

Here you don't pay a fancy price for a fancy lo You don't pay for anything you don't get. Th stores don't consider this coat or that dress work of art and price it accordingly. Shoppers From Out of Town

Hundreds of out-of-town women who visit St. Louis at frequent intervals are in the habit of coming straight to "Economy Block"—for they know the values that are awaiting for them there. If you are not in the habit of making "Economy Block" your buying headquarters, it will pay you to get acquainted. When you drive across the beautiful concrete roads of Illinois and cross Eads Bridge, keep right on up Washington avenue to the block between Broadway and Sixth street.

Drop in at any of these four great stores. The savings they offer will more than pay for your traveling expenses and will leave something over for the things you wanted but did not think you could afford to buy. We have every accommodation for our out-of-town visitors, and you will be more than welcome when you call.

That is the big point for you to remember. Style and quality considered, the prices asked in these four stores is actually lower than anywhere else in this city.

They don't ask you to take their word for this. They DO ask you to investigate. They ask you to buy by comparison. They ask you to visit these stores—note the assortments, the styles, the courteous service and the prices—and then they will leave the rest to your own good judgment.

Will you please make this comparison? Will you do this the next time you are downtown? First, stop at any of these four stores and note the values in the windows—that will give you a bird's-eye view of the real saving that awaits you. Then come in—you will be treated courteously—you will be shown what you want to see—you will not be urged to buy—you can come and go in these stores as freely as in your own home. All these stores ask is an opportunity to lay the proofs before you so you may know where your dollars will go the farthest and buy the best value to be had.

Get into the habit of shopping in "Economy Block"—and you will be surprised to see how much greater value you will receive for your money—how much nicer apparel you can buy with the amount you had intended to spend. Here you can treat yourself to the finer styles and finer qualities on which you had set your heart, without overstepping the financial mark.

The saving in buying in this Block is about 25%—sometimes more—sometimes less—but always a real saving without any sacrifice of that real style and right quality that you have a right to expect. Try it and see.

Study— The Window Displays

We want you to come down to ECONOMY BLOCK any day or evening this week and see the values we are displaying in our show windows. We want you to study the window displays very carefully, as they illustrate the savings that our big buying and cash selling bring to you. Go into any of these stores—you will not be urged to buy—just ask the saleslady to show you the window-piece—she will cheerfully and courteously help you make your selection of any one of the 500 garments that are on display in the windows of these four "Economy Stores."

Before you spend a single dollar for your new coat, suit, dress, hat or shoes, see these windows and compare the offerings with those shown elsewhere. You are a judge of values—come and judge the offerings of these four stores in "Economy Block."

"Let Us Alone!" Voters' Order To Politicians in Europe as Well as U.S., Says Lloyd George Britain's War-Time Premier Says Recent Elections Indicate All the World Is Tired of Alarms and Excursions and Wants to Get Down to Business.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, M. P.,
War-Time Premier of Great Britain.
By Cable to the Post-Dispatch. (Copyright, 1924.)

LONDON, Nov. 15.

THE British, American, French, Italian and German elections all point in one direction. The people in every country are tired of alarums and excursions of all kinds, whether military or political, and want to settle down to attend to business, which is not too good.

The electors of Great Britain, the United States, Germany and Italy turned to the right—the French electors turned to the left. But they all, without exception, swung in the direction where they thought tranquility was, for the time being, most likely to be found.

The Conservative party in Britain appealed to the electorate in a lengthy manifesto, full of promises of reform and changes. Had Mr. Baldwin followed President Coolidge's example and said nothing, his party would not have lost a seat by his reticence. The bulk of the people were not asking to be improved and uplifted. They were yearning to be left alone for at least one term by warriors, politicians and labor leaders. That is the present mood of the world and, having regard to the excitements and unheavals of the past 10 years, one ought not be to surprised at it.

Calvin Coolidge and Stanley Baldwin are the Anglo-Saxon expression of the inevitable collapse from the strained temper of high endeavor which the war aroused. Herriot is the incarnation of a disillusioned France. These men have been chosen by their respective countries because they are peculiarly disqualified, by character, disposition or capacity, to lead a nation into or in any venture, whether military, political or economic. They are all meant for a quiet life and look as if they desired it for themselves and others.

The Conservative Mood.

No doubt the defeated parties in all these countries committed blunders which increased the disaster that befell them. In Britain, the Labor Government was guilty of errors in tactics which were incredibly foolish and would have brought the strongest Government to the ground. On the other hand, the Liberals declared war on the Government without taking any thought as to whether they were prepared for battle. These mistakes converted a defeat into a rout.

But the real explanation of the Conservative victory in Britain is that the electors were in a more conservative mood than they have been in for many years. In America they were even more decisively conservative. In Britain, a million Liberal electors must have voted Conservative. This was the most striking feature of the British elections. In normal times, when no Liberal candidate is put up at an election, two-thirds of the Liberal voters who take the trouble to go to the poll at all vote Labor. At this general election, the Labor organizers assumed that the same proportions would be maintained. Hence their miscalculation.

But Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's sneers and insults at Liberalism changed all that. The Russian loan and the Zinovieff letter completed the change. For the first time in my recollection, the Liberals became fiercely anti-Labor. I am told that at the National Liberal Club, when the results were posted, the Conservative gains from Labor were lustily cheered. That never happened before.

Even where the Liberal candidates stood, many Liberal electors cast their votes for a Conservative in preference to their own candidate in order to make sure of the Labor defeat. The Conservative reaction has come at last with a vengeance and we must live through it. What is more important is that we should be ready for the next mood, so as to guide the nation into the ways of safe progress.

What of the Future?

How long will the present temper last? The answer depends on many elements and considerations which no man, how clear soever his vision may be, can accurately gauge and forecast. How will the new government succeed? Will it give the impression of efficiency, strength, wisdom and moderation? Will it make no serious mistakes? What luck will it have? Will trade revive, unemployment disappear and wages rise? Will there be trouble in India or Ireland, and, if there is, will it be well handled by the Government? These are but a few out of many contingencies that will affect the attitude of public opinion toward the new administration and influence the result of the next election. But the issue of the next great electoral struggle will depend even more on the attitude and activities of the opposition parties during the next few years.

The American election gave the Conservatives a positive majority over the other two parties of over 3,000,000 votes. The German election gave similar results. That was not the case at our general election. If votes are to be counted, the Conservatives were in a minority of 1,000,000 on the total poll. The Conservative candidates polled an aggregate of 7,400,000 votes. Labor candidates polled 5,500,000 and Liberals 3,000,000. The present conservative administration thus represents a definite minority of the electorate. It was only a Conservative victory because the party polled 2,000,000 more votes than it did at the preceding election and the anomalous working of our electoral system enabled them, by this increase, to win the preponderating majority of seats against the declared will of the prepondering majority of the voters. Had there been a working arrangement or understanding between the two defeated parties, the Conservatives would have been defeated at the polls.

Labor's Tactics Wrong.

Another decisive fact I have already indicated. At this last election, at least 1,000,000 Liberals cast their votes for Conservative candidates. The Labor Government came into power, not only by the help but with the goodwill of most Liberals. Ten months of arrogance and rudeness effectively soured all this stock of goodwill. Is it possible that this catastrophe has taught the Labor leaders nothing? Will they go on saying: "The Liberals are down to 40—keep on insulting them and they will disappear altogether"? Mr. Wheatley's last utterance is not encouraging. He forgets that the figure he has to operate on is not 40 but 3,000,000 plus the 1,500,000 Liberals dwelling in constituencies where no Liberal candidate was put up this time.

If Labor persists in its acrimonious attacks on Liberalism, then it is safe to predict that its chances of taking part in the Government of the country will be postponed for at least 20 years. Next time the Liberal party will be twice as strong as it is today. This defeat has roused and nerved it to a degree which has astonished those who have not made sufficient allowance for the British spirit, which is always most formidable in disaster. Defeated candidates come in with reports of an astounding revival of Liberal enthusiasm in their respective areas. There is a new resolve which has seized the rank and file of the party in the country. Most remarkable of all are the accounts given of the flocking of youth to the Liberal standard.

The theory upon which Labor builds its hopes that Liberalism is now a party of vanishing grayheards is known to be palpably untrue to those who, like myself, addressed great Liberal meetings in various parts of the country at the last election. I was very struck with the change in that respect which had come over the character and composition of audiences—even in comparison with the two preceding elections. In my own constituency I have not witnessed such a rally of youth for over 20 years.

Red Peril Feared.

The Conservative victory was largely due to the flight to safety from Red peril. Next time, the "reign of terror" will be over. Four years of Tory government will rouse other fears. The million Liberals who voted Tory in a panic will return to their allegiance. The

Make Your Good Clothes Last Longer

Take out the spots

Do your pretty clothes wear out too fast? Of course they do. You like pretty things, and naturally you wear out your prettiest clothes first.

But here is a way to make them last longer.... Take out the spots which make a dress look old. It is easy to remove them with Energine—the perfect dry cleaner. Why, you will be surprised how easily and quickly Energine makes things look like new.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if you could make your old things fresh and new again? Try it. You can get a can of Energine from your druggist—35c. It will clean almost anything.

"LET US ALONE," VOTERS' ORDER, SAYS LLOYD GEORGE

million stay-at-homes who were frightened to the polls will stick to their firesides. Thus the Conservatives will start 2,000,000 down. The Liberal party will have the opportunity to make the new electorate better acquainted with what it stands for. It has the advantage of being in better accord with the British temper and the tradition of steady progress than either of the other two parties. During the past eight years, its unfortunate divisions—not yet entirely healed—have directed to internal strife the energies that ought to have been devoted to growth and to defence against external foes. These divisions have a shattering effect on parties. The Home Rule split kept Liberalism out of real power for 20 years. The Boer War divisions in the Liberal party gave Conservatism an extra five years' term of office.

The Roosevelt split in the Republican party in America kept that party out of power for eight years and there was naturally intense bitterness, not only amongst those whose careers were thus checked, but amongst unselfish party men who believed honestly that Republicanism would have done so much better for America and the world in the Great War and peace. Even as late as last year, when I was in the states, I came across many Republicans who were angry about the way Roosevelt had been treated by his party and many who were just as indignant about the way he had resented that treatment. It takes time to cleanse the rancors and resentments of a bitter family quarrel in any household. It is a process that calls for much forbearance and common sense.

Liberals' Day to Come.

There is a conviction that nothing can weaken, in the heart of every disputant on both sides, that the fault was entirely on the other side and that it calls for superhuman grace to forgive the wrongs and delinquencies from which they have suffered. Much also is said on both sides, in all these disputes, which needs to be forgotten. Unfortunately, after the handshaking takes place, there is an assumption, on the part of some, of spiritual superiority arising from what they consider to be an act of divine forgiveness on their part. This is more irritating than an open feud.

Still, all these things must be overlooked for, if Liberalism is to be saved, there must be real unity. The party needs every ounce of its strength to pull through. And that strength must be mobilized quickly. That can only be done by honestly ignoring faction. Up to the present, it has not frustrated unity but it has prevented the party form reaping its full benefit. That had much to do with the putting off, until the battle was upon us, of the reorganization which was so essential to any Liberal revival. Liberal success at the next election depends on the sterilization of these disintegrating and paralysing influences. If that is accomplished, I look with confidence to a Liberal revival in Britain that will astonish the world.

ILL-GOTTEN GAINS RETURNED

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—Those who defend civic morality from attacks by pessimists criticising the present age as prone to tricks and dishonesty find in the Journal Official a list of 30 anonymous restitutions made during October.

These repentant persons turned nearly half a million francs into the treasury. The largest item was 366,328 francs and the smallest five francs.

Actress Tells Secret

Tells How to Darken Gray Hair With a Home-Made Mixture.

Joicey Williams, the well-known American actress, recently made the following statement about gray hair, and how to darken it, with a home-made mixture:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will gradually darken gray, streaked or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

"These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."

Plan Minnesota Alumni Chapter Here.

A local Minnesota Alumni Chapter will be organized at a dinner, next Saturday, when the former Minnesota students meet at the University Club. All of the alumni are invited to be present.

To Address School Patrons.

H. J. Gerling, assistant superintendent of instruction of the city schools, will address the Shenandoah School Patron's Alliance at their monthly meeting tomorrow night at the schoolhouse.

Parent-Teachers to Meet.

The Cenera Parent-Teachers Association will meet Tuesday evening at 8 in the high school auditorium. The room having the largest representation of parents and teachers will be entertained by the Tivoli Theater, according to an announcement. An address will be made by Dr. Henry H. Forsythe, pastor of the Kingshighway Presbyterian Church.

Aged, Wrinkled Faces Easily Rejuvenated

An aged face is often only a mask to a comparatively youthful person. Beneath is a countenance young and fair to look upon. It's a simple matter to remove the mask. Ordinary mercolized wax, to be had at any drug store, gradually absorbs the worn-out surface skin; in a week or two the user has the loveliest pinky white complexion imaginable. An ounce of the wax usually suffices to complete the transformation. It is put on at night like cold cream and washed off in the morning. This remarkable treatment is invariably effective, no matter how faded, muddy, sallow or discolored the complexion. Freckles, moth-patches, liver spots, pimples and other cutaneous blemishes, naturally vanish with the discarded skin.

To remove wrinkles, here is a recipe that cannot be too highly recommended: Powdered saxolite, one ounce dissolved in one half pint of witch hazel. Use as a wash lotion. It acts immediately and is wonderfully effective.

-:- In Studio and Gallery -:-

So much has been said, written and heard about Prof. Cizek's pupils in Vienna that when even a partial adaptation of his theory of naturalness is put into definite action in this country it arouses interest.

Hull House, probably the most famous Settlement House in America, is an ideal field for such experiment. Situated in the center of a vast Latin tenement district in Chicago, it draws attendance chiefly from the Greek and Italian families. It is with the children of these people in which we become purpose of her division is to afford most interested at this time, through the current exhibition in the art department of the Central Public Library, a display of the pictures made by the Greek and Itilian children from the ages of Italian children from the ages of at Hull House.

Miss Dorothy Loeb, who is in charge of the art department of the institution, explains that the small foreign children a means of expression with view to later artistic developments. The principle upon which operations are based is the naturalness of childhood. It is a well established fact that truth abounds in the child mind to a far greater extent than in the adult consciousness, and that instincts for the beautiful are much clearer and less biased by erroneous teaching. For this reason, children's expressions of thought and feeling are often much purer than mature transcriptions, and to encourage this intuitive clearness and freedom, the children are permitted to express a thought in whatever way they choose, unhampered by academic teaching of hard and fast rules of drawing. Some of the results are startling in their ingenuity and excellence.

The classes at Hull House from which these pictures come, are, first of all, not compulsory. None of the children who come to the picture hours are obliged to do so and consequently the attendance is large and enthusiastic. No instruction whatsoever is given. Small muffin tins filled with showcard paint in the primary colors are given to each child and he is allowed to make a picture of whatever pleases him. If advice is asked of Miss Loeb, she readily gives her suggestions, but her opinions are never insisted upon the children. Remembering our own artistic efforts in grade-school days, we experience a pang of positive envy when we see what fun these youngsters must have had in making pictures their own way.

On the two front screens in the Art Department of the Library are some pictures which have decided merit. The center picture on the right screen contains a well-balanced sense of design and proportion. Unaccustomed hands have held the brush applying the color, and the lines are perhaps uncertain. But their intention is perfectly fixed. The work of the hands is too new to be exactly co-ordinated with the work of the mind. But the mind's work is sincere and evident.

A three-color picture of houses with snow-covered roofs which is the center sheet on the left screen possesses a feeling of solidity that is an expression of thought, not just an accidental result of heavy painting and wide lines. The picture is "posteresque" and immediately impresses one with its force and direct message.

The collection of these pictures by Hull House children has been shown at the University of Oklahoma by Oscar Jacobsen, head of the Art Department, and at the University of Kansas by Albert Bloch, director of the department of drawing and painting in the School of Fine Arts.

"THE FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES OF MOHAMMEDAN ART" is the subject of an important lecture to be delivered at the City Art Museum next Thursday afternoon at 3:15 by Arthur Upham Pope, prominent authority on Oriental art. This lecture bears directly upon many of the museum's objects and collections, and will be instructive not only in relating these things, but in acquiring a greater appreciation of their beauties. The admission is free and the public is invited.

On Nov. 22, the Art Alliance will hold a reception at the City Art Museum. The Russian exhibit will be studied and Miss Mary Powell will talk about the pictures.

Under the auspices of the St. Louis Society of the Archeological Institute of America and the City Art Museum, Prof. Jean Capart of the University of Liege, Belgium, gave illustrated lectures last Thursday and Friday evenings on "The Ruins of Thebes and "Masterpieces of Egyptian Art." Prof. Capart is director of education at the Royal Museum in Brussels, Corresponding Fellow of the British Academy, director of the Queen Elizabeth Egyptology Foundation, professor of the History of Art and Archeology, grand officer of the Order of the Nile, etc., and has conducted five expeditions to Egypt. He is a well-known authority on Egyptology and Oriental art.

The Artists' Guild's annual open competitive show opened formally last evening with a reception and private showing. An unusually large number of works comprise the exhibit. The display will now be open to the public on week days from 1 till 5.

SURPRISE at the seriousness and "sanity" of the Russian exhibit is the general sentiment felt by visitors to the special exhibition in progress at the City Art Museum this month. Popular expectation conjured up visions of florid eccentricity, of Russian boots, blouses or ballet of proverbial association. The absence of these alleged Russian "characteristics" again proves the power of commercialism. To find that real Russian art is not wholly typified by the stage sets and costumes of "Chauve-Souris," however delightful and piquant its charms, is like discovering that French life is not typified by that staged in enterprising Paris cafes for the benefit of American tourists.

In anticipating the Russian exhibit, people either expected high comedy or high tragedy. Absence of pyrotechnics of this sort is somewhat confounding to those whose ideas of Russia are so superficial. The show is most impressive in its thoughtfulness, its sincerity and its tremendous artistic merit.

The work of three painters stands out most forcibly to us in the exhibition. Study of their work requires a complete research of the various developments through which it has evolved to reach its present state. Perhaps these steps can be outlined specifically in a following review and for this reason, the paintings by Igor Grabar, Vitold Bialinitski-Birulia and Peter Konchalovski will be considered at a later date.

It is of extreme interest to painters to know that the paintings by the most prominent artists represented here are the product of years of adherence to cubism. "Morning Landscape," by Nikolai Krymov in Gallery 26; "The Park," by Ilya Mashkov in Gallery 30; "Before the Mirror," "Wild Flowers" and "Autumn," by Peter Konchalovski in Gallery 31 have all been born from cubistic influence.

Program at Settlement House.

Friends of St. Joseph Settlement, 1439 North Eleventh street, are invited to attend a program of drama, songs and recitations this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Your Hair—a Crowning Glory or Streaked with Tell-Tale Gray?

Nature never intended you to have the gray hair that comes from care, worry, or unnatural scalp conditions.

Never before have women realized the vital importance of beautiful hair as they do today. Whether your hair is long, or bobbed in the mode of the hour, it is your privilege to possess that most attractive of all characteristics.

You often hear the expression, 'Such a young, lovely face—but so gray!" Why not give the same thought and care to your hair, as to your complexion? Gray hair is an unfortunate condition that can be easily corrected — not something to endure and resign yourself to.

Gray Hair Unnecessary

There is no reason in the world why you should worry any longer over the gray in your hair that has taken so much from your youth and attractiveness. It is so easy to apply NORMOGEN, "The Gray Hair Corrective." Even if you have been gray for years, it will supply that vital something which has caused your hair to lose its natural color, brilliancy and charm.

No Experiment

NORMOGEN was discovered over 4 years ago. Since then it has been tested under every conceivable condition of gray hair. These tests have been so conclusive that we can now offer it to you, under an absolute Money-Back Guarantee. If you are not satisfied with results we will refund your money.

Shampoo and Wave Hair As Usual

You can shampoo your hair as often as you wish—you can have your marcel or permanent wave and NORMOGEN works on, absolutely without interference of any kind.

NORMOGEN is a stainless liquid which may be used in any quantity with perfect safety. It is easy to apply and does not make your hair or hands sticky, mussy, or greasy. On the contrary, NORMOGEN endows your hair with the sheen and lustre of youth and keeps the scalp in a clean and healthy condition.

NOT A DYE

NORMOGEN is pure, colorless and stainless. It does not give your hair a harsh dyed appearance but restores the glorious natural color. One preparation for all colors of hair. No more bother or worry trying to match the shade.

Try Normogen At Our Risk

You are invited to try NORMOGEN at our risk. This guaranteed treatment is open to everybody — young or old. Your hair may be snow white, streaked or faded—yet NORMOGEN is bound to restore it to its original color in a perfectly natural way—without fuss, embarassment or inconvenience.

Every Bottle of NORMOGEN Is Backed by a Positive Money-Back Guarantee. You Are the Sole Judge, If You Are Not Satisfied With Results, We Will Refund Your Money.

Was a "Bear Cat"

"My wife was never an angel, but after five years of liver and stomach trouble she became a 'bear cat.' No doctor or medicine helped her, and we thought there was no help for her. Our grocer told me Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, which had helped him for same trouble, so I got a home a bottle, but she promptly threw it out. I got it back and after a while coaxed her into taking it. She is now enjoying the best of health and temper. It is a simple, harmless preparation, removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. Go! Get It!

Progress is proof of merit. He who awaits with satisfied air for someone to discover his wares of merit will find himself comparable to the cow's tail: BEHIND.

The saying: "A path through the woods will be made to get to an article of merit" may be true, but the business concern of modern days that "Gets things done" is not satisfied to await such a happening.

The publicity route in the form of truthful information enlightens the public in a comprehensive manner. THAT'S PROGRESS! PROGRESS INDICATES PROSPERITY!

Dolly Olive's Bed is unusual, too. It's a real Bed, with real springs and mattress—an exact duplicate, in miniature, of the full-size famous Smith & Davis Beds. 20 inches long, 15 inches high at the head and 12 inches at the foot, enameled in white, blue or pink, it is at once a dainty and durable Bed worthy in every way of the exceptional Dolly that will grace it. Delivered ready for assembly in light-weight mailing case.

Just 2 Persons who do not now read the Daily Post-Dispatch to sign the subscription order blank. See that all names and addresses are written plainly.

Dolly Olive is a new, attractive and life-like member of the Doll family. She is representative of a new and wonderful achievement in Doll making—the Doll Supreme—sure to find permanent place in the hearts of little girls who "mother" her. She has real hair and a pretty rosy complexion. Her face can be washed with soap and water, her hair combed, brushed and kept beautiful. Her head will not fade, chip or crack. It is made of the strongest composition now known to science —as nearly unbreakable as a doll's head can be made. Her body and limbs are filled with pure white, new cotton, which gives her that pleasant, soft, cuddly feeling that every little girl likes in her dolly.

Dolly Olive is attractively dressed. Her dainty costume is made of fine quality, sheer organdie, with bonnet to match. Both bonnet and dress are tastefully trimmed with ribbon and lace. The undergarments are of dimity, and neatly sewed. She has mercerized stockings and real patent leather slippers. She closes both her eyes when put to sleep, and wakes up calling MAMA, as a real baby does. She can be made to wink and blink and roll her eyes from side to side, in the gayest, coyest, most delightful baby manner. Her natural, laughing blue eyes are inserted in drilled sockets by a patented process, and cannot get out of order. They are a marvel of doll craftsmanship that puts Dolly Olive in a class by herself.

Dolly Olive is of just the right height and proportions to fit snugly into the 20-inch Bed that the Post-Dispatch offers with her in the FREE combination offer of a Doll and Doll Bed for only two new six-months subscriptions to the Daily Post-Dispatch.

Important: This new Dolly Olive and Her Dainty Bed offer is entirely apart from the Janesville Wagon-Sherwood Racer offer for four subscriptions. While both offers are exceptional in terms of generous value, they must not be confused in the minds of our boy and girl friends, and we cannot consent to transfer of credits based upon subscription orders from one plan to the other.

Subscriptions received here under the terms of the Janesville Wagon-Sherwood Racer offer will not be credited toward a Dolly Olive-Dainty Bed award, nor vice versa.

Was a "Bear Cat"

"My wife was never an angel, but after five years of liver and stomach trouble she became a 'bear cat.' No doctor or medicine helped her, and we thought there was no help for her. Our grocer told me of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, which had helped him for same trouble, so I brought home a bottle, but she promptly threw it out. I got it back and after a week coaxed her into taking it. She is now enjoying the best of health and disposition. It is a simple, harmless preparation, that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded.

PUBLIC LIBRARY'S LIST OF BOOKS FOR BOYS

Librarian Botswick Prepares Selection of Volumes Good for Coming Men to Read.

Arthur E. Bostwick, Public Librarian, has sent to the Post-Dispatch the following supplemental list of books that are especially worthy of attention for those interested in Children's Book Week. This list is for boys, and any book on it will be sent by parcel post to cardholders, on receipt of postage, in order of application.

Autobiography of Buffalo Bill, by W. F. Cody; illustrated by N. C. Wyeth. Tells why he was called Buffalo Bill, how he served as a scout during the Civil War, about Indian raids, stage-coach adventures and his trips abroad with his Wild West show.

A Book of Discovery; the History of the World's Exploration From the Earliest Times to the Finding of the South Pole, by M. B. Synge. A truly fascinating book containing curious illustrations from old woodcuts, drawings, paintings and miniatures and reproductions of primitive maps and the "joyous charts" of the middle ages. Many of the explorers tell part of their own story in their own words.

Boy's Book of Verse, compiled by Helen D. Fish. A collection of poems which especially appeal to boys. There are all the old favorites and a splendid selection from the best late poetry, including those made famous by the Great War.

Boys' Life of Abraham Lincoln, by Helen Nicolay. A simple and inspiring story of our great President, based on the standard life of Lincoln by Nicolay and Hay.

Boys' Life of Edison, by William H. Meadowcroft. The story of a great inventor who earned his fame by hard work and earnest application to the task which he set out to do.

Boys' Life of Theodore Roosevelt, by Hermann Hagedorn. The story of a frail and timid boy who grew to be a strong leader, noted for his determination, his fighting spirit and his love of fair play.

Brown Wolf and Other Jack London stories, by Jack London; edited by Frank K. Mathiews. Twelve short stories of adventure in the Far West, the Klondike and on the sea, chosen for boys by the chief librarian of the Boy Scouts of America.

The Dark Frigate, by Charles Boardman Hawes. A stirring tale of pirates during the days of Cromwell.

Guld, the Cavern King, by Mary L. Branch. A fascinating story of the country of the kobolds; how Guld proved that he was worthy, and how he at last led his people out from their underground home into the light.

Story of King Arthur and His Knights, by Howard Pyle. The greatest and most inspiring cycle of mediaeval romances is that concerned with the adventures of King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table.

The Old Tobacco Shop; a true account of what befell a little boy in search of adventure, by William Bowen. Freddy's adventures began when he smoked a pipeful of the magic black tobacco which was kept in the Chinaman's head on a shelf on the Old Tobacco Shop. After that, captures by pirates, enchantments and disenchantments became ordinary occurrences.

Simba, by Stewart Edward White. The story of a little African savage who, by his loyalty, courage and determination finally won the proud and responsible post of gunbearer to the greatest of ivory hunters.

Track's End, by Hayden Carruth. Very real seems this primitive frontier town, the prey of bands of Indians, robbers and wolves, and deserted by all living creatures save the beasts in the stable, Kaiser the dog, Pawsy the cat, and Judson Pitcher, who tells the tale.

The Voyages of Capt. Scott, by C. Turley, with an introduction by Sir James Barrie. A stirring record of a gallant fight which is a vivid revelation of the meaning of courage.

3,000,000 RATS KILLED IN WEEK BY LONDONERS

Professional Rodent-Catchers, Citizens and School Children Join in Campaign.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Rats which infest old London houses, office buildings, restaurants, sewers and subways—and cost the city £1,000,000 ($4,500,000) annually in damage—had a hard time of it during "rat week," just ended.

It was estimated that more than 3,000,000 rodents met death at the hands of professional rat-catchers, school boys and girls, and private citizens, who hunted the pests out with every conceivable means. One vermin-chasing company alone was reported to have acbcounted for 800,000 rats.

The press took up the campaign and one enthusiastic writer asserted he had seen on moonlight nights whole companies of rats frolicing through Piccadilly. One hospital manager declared he had discovered tight-rope walking brown coats entering the hospital along electric light wires stretched from the roof across the street.

London sanitation officials do and want the crusade against the rodents to end with the mere annihilation of 3,000,000, and they urge that the campaign be kept up until the body of London's last rat is given a place in the city museum.

AMERICAN LITERATURE SUFFERS FROM HYPOCRITICAL PERSISTENCE OF WRITERS IN "MORAL PURPOSE," SAYS MENCKEN

Under the Delusion That They Have a Duty to Perform Just as Every American Thinks He Must Be an Uplifter and a Policeman.

Points to James Branch Cabell as an Example of a Real Artist Because He Ignores This Obsession and Paints Life as It Really Is.

(This is the second of a series of articles Mr. Mencken is writing for the Post-Dispatch, one of which will be printed every Sunday till the series is exhausted.)

By H. L. MENCKEN,
Editor of the American Mercury and America's Most Widely Known Literary Critic.

I.

WHAT ails American literature, fundamentally, is what ails the whole of American culture; a delusion of moral duty. The Americano, whatever his real business otherwise, is at least the most assiduous of all known uplifters and policemen. The chief aim and function of his country, as he sees it, is to save the rest of the world from sin; his own principal obligation and passion is to police his neighbors. To this business he devotes nearly all of his free energy. Even his vices are contaminated by moral purpose. If he goes to a Kiwanis club, bawls idiotic songs and listens to a shoe drummer lecturing on mental magnetism, it is because such recreations Build Character. If he steals an afternoon off to play golf, it is because a Healthy Mind, fit for Correct Thinking, must be housed in a Healthy Body. If he goes to a concert, it is because music is educational, and education is a form of Service.

HENRY L. MENCKEN.

When he scandalizes his relatives by setting up shop as creative artist, this heat to do good commonly cools a bit, but not enough to lose all its glow. The American, as maker and singer, remains an American, and so he can't forget the whispers of duty. If he writes novels, they denounce something and teach something. If he is a poet, he is indignant about the doings of some other poet. If, being too intelligent to write either novels or poetry, he becomes a critic, then the chances are at least 10 to 1 that he will erect a small but extremely stout steel hoop, firmly anchored in concrete, and call upon the Polizei, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and all good men to proceed against any author who can't or won't jump through it.

Exceptions are rare—just as rare, indeed, in Greenwich village as in the klavern of the National Institute of Arts and Letters. Esthetics in the village tends to become a sort of antinomian Methodism. There are those who understand and smack their lips over the poetry of Carlos Williams, E. E. Cummings, and other such revolutionaries—and there are dolts, poltroons, Ku Kluxers, scoundrels. The Little Review, even before the police had at it, was more evangelical than the War Cry. Any one who presumed to balk at its pathological fiction and college yell poetry was at once a Presbyterian and an agent of the kaiser. Its aim was to Do Good, to Save Art, to Emancipate Humanity, artistically and sexually.

II.

SUCH is the national habit of expostulation and reform, the national belief in swamp roots and perunas. There is at least one American, however, who stands outside the praying band, the passion for Service dead in his heart—a bad American, I sometimes fear, and secretly lamenting that Pakenham, Stonewall Jackson, and Hindenburg did not win. His name is James Branch Cabell, and he inhabits, unnoticed by Rotary, the medieval walled town of Richmond, in Virginia, once capital of the confederate states. This Cabell is at once the anti-Brandes Matthews and the anti-Harry Kemp. In moral endeavor he is a complete nihilist. For the fate of millions, terrestrial and postmortem, he cares nothing. His one aim in life is to make himself a first rate artist, and this aim he has come nearer to realizing than any other American of his time.

In his latest book, "Straws and Prayer Books," he deplores (politely, of course, and without repining) the fact that he is chiefly known to his countrymen, north, east, south and west, as the author of "Jurgen," and that "Jurgen" is regarded by most of them as an extremely naughty book, to be read only on Sunday afternoons, with the children asleep and the blinds down. His discontent has good ground, for "Jurgen" is nothing of the sort. What gave it its evil name is not anything that Cabell himself put into it, but simply the things that the Comstocks read between the lines. Who remembers that a New York court decided that the Comstocks were fools? Not many. So "Jurgen" lives in the finishing schools as a naughty book, and the fact that it is a first rate work is half forgotten. Worse, it is forgotten that Cabell has also written many other books, and that some of them are quite as good and perhaps even better. Such are the penalties that a moral republic lays upon a genuine artist. If he is not hot for virtue, it is assumed almost at once that he is in the service of sin.

III.

IN "Straws and Prayer Books," Cabell discusses this misunderstanding at great length and with vast ingenuity and humor, and then proceeds to prod into the nature of art and the motives of the artist. What is it, in brief, that the artist tries to do? The orthodox American answer is that his purpose is, first, to depict the life that he observes about him; and, second, to criticize it—in other words, to show how it could be improved, and to argue for his private scheme of improvement with all the voluptuous eloquence that he can muster—in yet other words, to make ideas appetizing by wrapping them in beauty.

From this Cabell dissents sharply. The true artist, he says, has no such purpose, save in the

A Gleamy Mass of Hair

35c "Danderine" does Wonders for Any Girl's Hair

Girls! Try this! When combing and dressing your hair, just moisten your hair-brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! You can do your hair up immediately, and it will appear twice as thick and heavy—a mass of gleamy hair, sparkling with life and possessing that incomparable softness, freshness and luxuriance.

While beautifying the hair "Danderine" is also toning and stimulating each single hair to grow thick, long and strong. Hair stops falling out and dandruff disappears. Get a bottle of "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter and just see how healthy and youthful your hair appears after this delightful, refreshing dressing.

AMERICAN LITERATURE SUFFERS FROM "MORAL PURPOSE," SAYS MENCKEN

sense, perhaps, that "prison breaking is a criticism of the penitentiary." His real aim is not to suggest improvements in the life about him; it is to escape that life autogether. What he tries to do is to construct a world that shall be better than the world of everyday. He does not denounce his fellowmen for being satisfied with that everyday world, and he does not urge them to improve it; he simply invites them to take a ride with him and enjoy the lovelier scenery that he has discovered. The butt of his dream, if a dream may be said to have a butt, is not man but God. His business is to show that the stupendous achievements described in Genesis I., praiseworthy though they were, were yet not the last word in cosmic engineering—that immense progress has been made since then, theoretically if not actually, and that man, as artist, can now imagine a world as much superior to the one we all know as the one we know is superior to the city dump of Harrison, N. J

IV.

SUCH notions, of course, have a contumacious and even ribald smack, and so the artist is doubly suspect—first, because he is devoid of moral purpose and seems to be anesthetic to the Larger Good; and, secondly, because he approaches Genesis I. in a bilious and insolent spirit. This is sufficient to explain, says Cabell, his general disrepute in society. When he is admired at all by respectable folk it is somewhat sneakingly, as a bootlegger is admired. Mainly, he is not admired at all, but distrusted and disliked, and whenever moral passions begin to run high he gets a kick or two, and maybe a coat of tar and feathers. No artist could be elected President of the United States or dean of Harvard. The best any member of the profession may hope for is to be overlooked, or, like Cabell, to be attacked only by persons who are unpopular with the courts.

His offending in the last analysis, lies in the simple fact that he doesn't take life seriously enough. He is too willing and eager to turn his back upon it, and to seek release and happiness on the high peaks where goats run wild, and the cities appear as mere smudges of smoke upon the horizon, and there are no policemen. He is a traitor to responsibility, to high purpose, to Service. While the jails and lunatic asylums bulge, and the hangman misses meal after meal, and thousands come down with gallstones and diabetes, he departs for the hills with a banjo and a ham sandwich, and entertains himself matching his fancy with God's. The night the American Legion has a parade, he goes to hear a string quartet. All of Columbus day, from dawn to dark, he labors upon a sonnet or a woodcut. Turning his back upon statistics, however deplorable, he pursues, snares, and kisses a pretty girl.

V.

UNQUESTIONABLY, this life has its charms. It lures, indeed, many a yokel from the plow and the wagon spoke works, and many a yokel female from the little red schoolhouse and the bungalow kitchen. Greenwich village is full of them; they are happy, at least while youth lasts. But what of the bitter that goes with the sweet? What of the net produce of this strange, immoral life? How does it appear to a man weighing 160 pounds and 45 years old—in other words, to Cabell himself? Such a man still enjoys dreams, of course, but he also knows the value of Liberty bonds, balloon tires, public respect. There are blue days, no doubt, on which he yearns for the dignity and puissance of a bank president, a bishop, a United States Senator.

Why, then, does such a man devote himself to the fine arts—especially in America, where they are less esteemed than anywhere else? Cabell sta himself that question and answers it with great subtlety. I make it simple and hint at his answer by changing the form of it slightly. Why does a cat chase its tail? Why is a humming bird not a hippopotamus? Why did God create the world?

THE HUB
Washington at Seventh
CHAS. F. LEVY Pres.

Monday, Nov. 17th, Starts Our First Annual

Founder's Week

One Week of Sensational Underselling to Commemorate the Value-Giving Policies of the Founder of The Hub

ONCE each November we intend setting aside a week for super value-giving in honor of the memory of the man of broad vision, who laid the foundation of the Hub, 35 years ago. In 1889 L. H. Levy opened the doors of the Hub for the first time. In the intervening years it has grown from an obscure furniture store to one of the most prominent mercantile establishments in St. Louis, now occupying the entire building of nine floors at Seventh and Washington.

This continuous growth has been built upon the liberal policies established in 1889—fair and square treatment of all, lowest prices possible, courteous service and the most convenient credit terms.

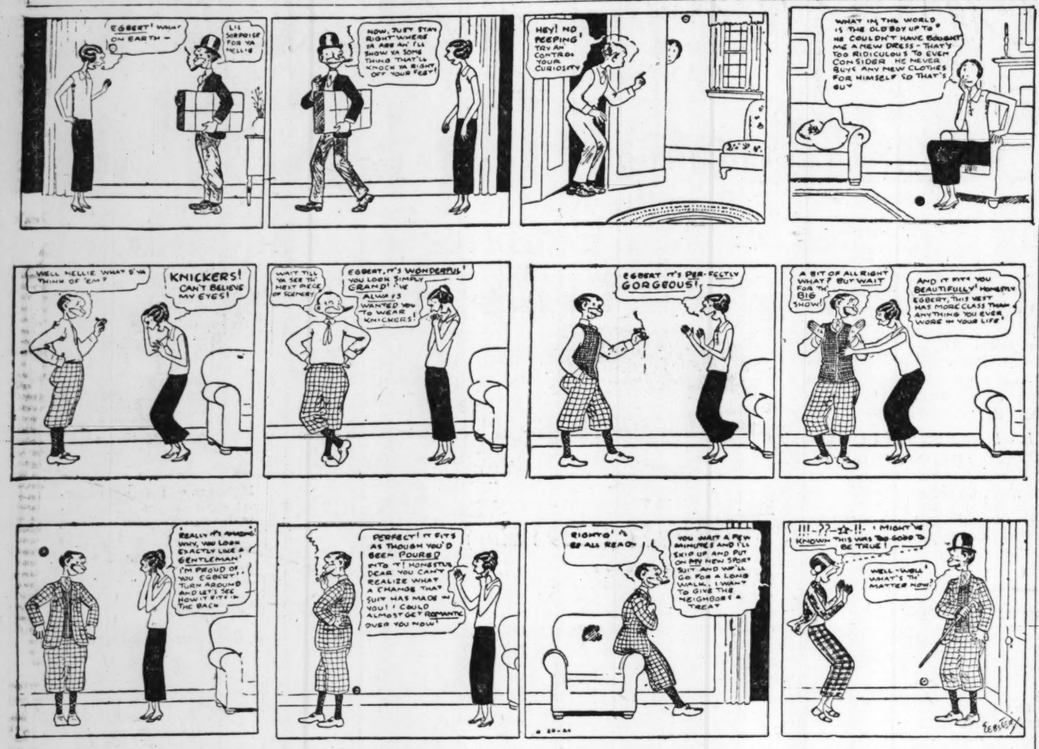
HERE ARE THE WINNERS IN THE FIRST "TANGLED COMIC" COMPETITION

List of Successful Solvers in the Second of the Series Will Be Printed Next Sunday



THE illustration above shows the first "Tangled Comic," printed in the Sunday Post-Dispatch Nov. 2, all untangled and with all the characters and lines put back in their proper places. List of prize winners appear on this page.

A surprising amount of ingenuity was shown by readers of the Post-Dispatch in reassembling the disarranged comics. The most common error was a transposition of squares three and four.

No less remarkable than the cleverness shown in the mounting of solutions was the neatness with which the work was done.

The misspelled words were "gorgious" for gorgeous, and "realise" for realize. Words spelled according to sound, to represent slang or common dialect, are not really misspelled since phonetic spelling is the correct way to represent such language.

MINISTERS TO SPEAK ON COMMUNITY FUND

Most Protestant Pastors to Devote Sermons Today to Charity Campaign.

Community Fund Sunday will be observed today by 204 Protestant Churches in St. Louis and St. Louis County in co-operation with the campaign, started yesterday to raise $1,751,521 for welfare work by 50 charitable and philanthropic agencies comprising the Community Fund.

In most of the churches pastors will devote their entire sermons to various aspects of the campaign and the humanitarian work of the organizations. Others will call attention to the drive by special announcements and through Sunday School classes. This activity, however, will be designed only to direct attention of churchgoers to the campaign. There will be no actual solicitation of funds in the churches.

Cost of Conducting Work Out.

In its two years of operation, the Community Fund reduced by more than 50 per cent the cost of raising and disbursing funds for philanthropic work. The total cost of the campaign last year was 3.9 per cent of the subscriptions obtained. This year the cost is believed to be held to 3 per cent. The low figure is made possible through concentration of 50 campaigns in one drive which covers the field for all member agencies at once.

The Individual Subscribers' Division, which began work with the start of the drive yesterday morning, is the largest division of solicitors in the campaign, numbering about 1400 volunteer workers. These are conducting a house-to-house canvass in order to give every resident an opportunity to subscribe. The Employes' Division, which will solicit employes in the various industries, will not begin work until tomorrow morning. It is estimated that about 6000 persons will take part in the solicitation work and directors of the drive express a belief that at least 125,000 subscribers will be enrolled this year. Last year there were 80,000 and the year before, 75,000.

Solicitation of the negro sections of the city will be done by a negro division under the leadership of Daniel W. Bowles.

Letter From Rabbi Harrison.

A letter from Rabbi Leon Harrison outlining five reasons "why I am a contributor to the Community Fund," was made public yesterday by Thomas N. Dysart, chairman of the Campaign Executive Committee. The five reasons are as follows:

"1. Because it saves a great waste of labor and money in collecting for the many charities and philanthropies in St. Louis at one time and in one campaign.

"2. It collects much more money than the sum total of all the individual charities added together; because it is a city-wide systematic drive, with every resource of publicity and with the full pressure of public opinion behind it.

Safeguards From Fraud.

"3. It safeguards our citizens from the unauthorized and sometimes fraudulent solicitations of persons, often representing no worthy charity.

"4. It proteets me and everyone from petty annoyance of being solicited over and over again, for each of the many charities of the city. There is but one solicitation. There is only one fund. Theer is but one contribution from each giver, which he can depend upon being economically administered and wisely employed.

"5. I am above all in favor of the Community Fund because it unites all men, of whatever religion and rate, in the common cause of humanity. It promotes public spirit, and a civic sense of responsibility. The Community Fund is one of the best and noblest movements ever undertaken by the citizens of St. Louis, for the good and benefit of the givers, as well as of the beneficiaries of their philanthropy."

6700 CASES HANDLED IN 10 MONTHS BY HUMANE SOCIETY

386 Horses Were Destroyed and 108 Treated—Two Turtles Among Animals Cared For.

More than 6700 cases of suffering among animals and birds were cared for by the Missouri Humane Society and its workers in the first 10 months of 1924, according to the report of Robert E. Seller, executive secretary. The cases ranged from those in which horses were rescued from misfortune, to one in which was involved a rattlesnake. Two turtles, too, were among the animals coming under the care of the organization.

There were 39 cases in which horses were severely whipped or beaten before rescue, and many others of overloading, overdriving, overworking or otherwise maltreating equines. Seven were rescued from manholes or quarries into which they had fallen. The society destroyed 386 horses and in its clinic treated 108 others.

Of 3206 dog cases, 495 were animals treated at the society's clinic. There were 2495 calls for the society to take charge of sick, injured, stray or undesirable dogs and 1995 calls to care for cats of similar description. For four of 14 birds needing the society's aid homes were found. In the list of animals cared for were 56 cows, 17 calves, 6 goats, 5 rabbits, 4 monkeys and 76 crates of poultry.

The society maintains an animal shelter at 1618 Carr street, which it operates on a 24-hour schedule. It asks that cases of cruelty be reported immediately to it by telephone.

Many Auto Dealers Begin Sunday Closing in St. Louis

Some of Largest Distributers Among Signers of Agreement to Keep Places Closed Saturday Nights as Well.

The movement to have the automobile dealers of St. Louis go on a six-day basis appears about to succeed. A number of firms, including some of the largest distributers in the city, have signed an agreement to close their new and used car departments from 6 p. m. Saturday until Monday morning, beginning yesterday. Others are expected to sign as soon as the plans can be thoroughly presented to them. Sixteen had signed by Thursday noon, and signatures are being added steadily.

For a long time employes on Auto Row have felt that they should have their Saturday nights and Sunday and that the automobile business should observe Sunday as do concerns in other lines. Also dealers are realizing that men who work seven days out of seven are not so efficient as those who have their day of rest and recreation.

Most of the used-car departments have been kept open Saturday nights and Sundays and some new-car departments. In the past many dealers have wished to close Sundays, but felt they could not if their competitors were to remain open. Now it is felt by those signing the closing agreement that fully as many cars, both new and used, can be sold in six days as in seven.

Service departments of most of the dealers have been closing Sundays, their emergency work Saturday night and Sundays being cared for by the Nelson Motor Maintenance Co.

Among the dealers signing the agreement to close Sundays are: Southwest Nash Co., Ward Motor Co., Berry Motor Car Co., Weber Implement and Automobile Co., Lambert-Graves Motor Co. (Lincoln division), Mound City Automobile Co., Cleveland Motor Sales Co., Mississippi Valley Motor Co., Tate Motor Co., Inc.; Spalding Motor Co., Inc.; Cadillac Automobile Co. of St. Louis, Vesper-Buick Auto Co., Schroeder Motor Co. and Kardell Motor Co.

MEXICANS HOPE CALLES WILL BUILD HIGHWAYS

MONTEREY, Mexico, Nov. 15.—The fact that President-elect Calles is pledged to support a project for Federal aid in building a system of trunk highways which will lead from Mexico City to Rio Grande River border points and gulf ports leads to the hope by automobile owners of this country that this work may be started soon after he becomes President.

According to engineers who have made preliminary surveys for the proposed highways, the first to be built will run between the capital and Laredo, passing through Monterey, Saltillo, San Luis Potosi and a number of other important towns. At Laredo connection will be made with the Glacier to Gulf and the Meridian highways through the United States.

KENTUCKY CITY BARS AUTOS FROM STREETS FROM 10 P. M. TO 5 A. M.

MOTOR vehicles have been barred in Princeton, Ky., by a city ordinance, between the hours of 10 p. m. and 5 a. m. Special guards patrol the streets to see that the ordinance is obeyed. Anyone caught driving during the hours is fined not less than $20 and imprisoned at the discretion of the court.

LOS ANGELES TO SPEND MILLIONS ON TRAFFIC PLAN

City-Wide Project to End Congestion Expected Eventually to Cost Fully $100,000,000.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 15.—A comprehensive, city-wide plan for lessening vehicular and pedestrian traffic congestion and future street development was adopted by Los Angeles by a vote of three to one at the recent election.

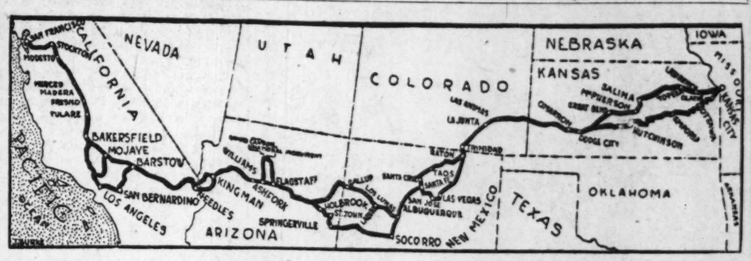
Two propositions were submitted to the voters. One provided for adoption of a major traffic street plan, prepared by three experts from the East. The other provided $5,000,000 for the city's share of the cost of the first unit of the proposed traffic relief.

This action indicates approval by the citizens generally of a street plan that will cost approximately $100,000,000 and will include widening downtown traffic arteries, extension of heavily traveled streets into through thoroughfares, and future street development on scientific lines.

Los Angeles found itself facing an unusual situation. It not only has more automobiles per capita than any other place in the world, but it is a center for motor tourists who annually add one-third to the normal motor traffic. More than 400,000 resident motorists use the streets, and during the year some 200,000 motorists from other states come sightseeing, making the problem of handling traffic more difficult than in the average city.

The relief plan adopted by the voters not only provides funds for immediate traffic relief, but formally adopts a plan designed to care for the constantly increasing numbers of vehicles in years to come.

Late Fall and Winter Route to the Pacific Coast



The Santa Fe Trail from Kansas City westward, with options to Taos, Socorro and the Petrified Forest, side trip to the Grand Canyon, and options to Los Angeles and San Fancisco. The Santa Fe Trail goes through Emporia, but motorists are advised to use the U. P. Trail from Kansas City to Salina, dropping down to the Santa Fe Trail again at McPherson.

Conditions on Santa Fe Trail to Pacific Coast

Survey of Roads Encountered on Great Highway Through Southwest to Los Angeles and San Francisco.

For the benefit of motorists planning to drive through to California this fall and winter, the following report on road conditions along the route via Kansas City and the Santa Fe Trail has been obtained:

The route generally recommended to Kansas City is that south of the Missouri River via Union, Jefferson City and Sedalia.

From Kansas City westward, motorists are advised to take the U. P. Trail to Salina and then go south to the Santa Fe Trail at McPherson, following the trail through Great Bend, Kinsley, Dodge City, Garden City and Syracuse to Lamar, Colo., 547 miles from Kansas City. This route offers concrete to Topeka, gravel to Manhattan, Kan., and then dirt, with occasional stretches of concrete in and out of cities, to Lamar. In wet weather the dirt road is bad. When dry, it is good going.

Lamar to Las Vegas.

From Lamar to Trinidad, 147 miles through Las Animas, La Junta and Delhi, there is a graded, gravel-surfaced road. Many arroyos and creeks are crossed, but, as a rule, exceptionally good time may be made.

The next section of the trail is 141 miles long, from Trinidad to Las Vegas. There is stone-surfaced road to the summit of Raton Pass, and an excellent hard-surfaced road winds down easy grades and finally runs into an excellent gravel road. From French to Springer the road is reported as fair, but there are several detours around construction work that when met are impassable without chains. There is an excellent gravel road from Springer through Wagon Mound to Shoemaker, then rather rough old road to Watrous, and new grade, in excellent condition, to Onova, then fair dirt road to Las Vegas.

To Santa Fe and Albuquerque.

There is an excellent graveled road from Las Vegas to Pecos, then 12 miles of old road, very rough in places, to Glorietta, and then an excellent graveled road to Santa Fe, 70 miles from Las Vegas.

The road from Santa Fe to the 1¼-mile long La Bajada grade is

BUS PASSENGERS PAY WHAT THEY CONSIDER TRIP IN IOWA IS WORTH

The Lincoln Highway Tours and Transportation Co., Inc., operating from Marshalltown to Waterloo, Iowa Falls, Ames, Eldora, Des Moines and Cedar Rapids, Ia., recently started bus service under a plan new to this section of the country. Passengers are permitted to pay as fares any amount they consider the service worth. No regular charges are fixed for any part of the routes, according to General Manager F. J. Smith.

The officials of this firm of but operators believe, the public can be depended upon to return fair treatment when service is good and they are going to risk expensive equipment and their time to prove their case.

NEW RECORD FOR ROAD BUILDING EXPECTED IN 1925

Illinois Shows Way to Speeding Up Construction by Building 1300 Miles This Year.

With money cheaper and the public more appreciative of the need of good roads, indications are that highway construction will be one of the country's biggest industries in 1925. About $5,000,000 barrels of cement, a quarter of the cement used in the country, went into highways this year, and there is warrant for the prediction that a larger proportion of the total will be used next year by the road engineers. Also the various State highway departments are getting into full stride and surpassing all expectations as to the rate of construction possible.

For instance, the official forecast is that Illinois will complete 1000 miles of State highway paving and 300 miles of State supervised county road construction before Dec. 31. Not so long ago there was general agreement that planning to build 1000 miles of road in any state in a year was folly. Another State highway department found that its program of 400 miles for the year as the utmost possible was easily exceeded by a large margin. The Missouri Highway Commission has its road-construction organization in shape to go ahead full speed, now that Proposition No. 5 has been passed.

What real speeding up highway work means is shown by the statement, in a report by Frank T. Sheets, Illinois Highway Superintendent, that, at the peak of the season, more than 9750 men and 2475 teams, to say nothing of tractors and other machinery, were employed directly on State road

THEY CAN'T LAUGH THIS OFF

Everybody knows there is terrific competition for supremacy between the big-production manufacturers of motor cars.

Each seems to be out to beat the other in building the most cars.

Their advertisements ring with the war cries of their sales battle.

As a matter of fact, do you care who builds the most or who builds the best cars?

It is because some of these big-production builders have put the smaller manufacturers in the wrong light that we hope to clarify the atmosphere by this advertisement.

These big producers claim, because of their big volume, they can build a better automobile and give more value for your money.

That sounds good in theory but how does it actually work in practice?

One big-production factory admits a profit of $163 net on each car. In fact that factory has to make $125 per car, on many thousands of cars, to pay 7% on its enormous investment. If there were no high finance tricks being played, no stock jobbing, no speculation, no bonded indebtedness involved in big-production strategy, there would be much more truth to their claims. But, often such things more than offset the savings that result from big-production economies.

We can absolutely prove that a smaller company like Auburn, free from all financial embarrassments and speculative ambitions, can actually build a better car and give more value for the money than big-production units shackled with high finance programs.

Auburn is capitalized at $1,250,000 with a nice surplus drawing interest in the bank. Auburn only has to get a profit of $25 per car on 5,000 cars a year to earn 10% on its capital stock. Auburn has never failed to discount a bill in 24 years successful manufacture.

Auburn's position is liquid, at all times. They can start or stop production plans immediately. They do not have to buy materials in July of this year and hold them until July of next year, thus tying up finances months ahead of time. Auburn does not have to put a vast quantity of material on the market simply because they have their money in it.

Take the case of one "big producer" who had to go ahead and deliver several thousand cars with defective pistons. He couldn't change. Either he had to scrap the pistons and bear the loss himself or use them and pass the expense for adjustment and repairs on to his dealers and the dear public. He used the pistons. That is not an exceptional illustration of how the "economies of big-production" often work out.

If such a thing ever developed in the case of Auburn, it would be stopped immediately—there is only one standard in Auburn factories—only one aim, quality not quantity.

This applies even in our relationship and attitude towards our dealers.

Auburn dealers are not mere pawns used to play a factory's game; to be told how many cars they must take; to be made to get rid of them or lose their franchise.

The Auburn dealer is an independent business man, an asset to the community he services, who has a voice at the Auburn factory.

Our policy is to help make our dealers, not to break them. They live and work for you and themselves, and not to make "sacrifice plays" in some factory's game for sales.

They are the kind of dealers with whom you want to do business and upon whom you can depend after you buy from them.

Proof that Auburn cannot be surpassed by any manufacturer in giving quality and value does not have to be sought any further than the intrinsic worth of the new Auburn 8-In-Line.

We announced this new 8-In-Line in a way no other manufacturer has ever done. We simply invited the public to come in and see it—study its sturdy construction and excellence in every detail—notice its complete equipment—drive it—put it to every conceivable test! Then if the car did not sell itself, we did not ask them to buy.

We did not tell them in a loud bass voice that it would do 75 miles an hour—

Or take the hills on high with magic smoothness—

Or crawl along at less than a mile an hour in traffic—

Or operate with a complete lack of vibration. We got away from all the old extravagant statements about motor cars and got right down to brass tacks, in other words, the car itself and put it squarely up to the public to do its own judging.

Of course you know the result of such frankness and fairness. People had confidence. They came, even our competitors, dealers and salesmen. They saw where we had simply poured quality into the new Auburn 8-In-Line. They saw strength, durability, performance and refinement, impossible in cars that are cheaply built and slopped out in a hurly, burly "big production" way.

ILLINOIS COUNTY FINDS ROAD PATROLING PAYS

Eight Patrolmen Awarded Prizes by Freeport Club for Good Work.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FREEPORT, Ill., Nov. 15.—After thorough trial, the patrol system of maintaining the dirt roads of Stephenson County has been voted a complete success. Ever since the system was started the country roads of the county have been kept in excellent condition.

An interesting incident is the recent award by the Rotary Club of this city of prizes to the eight road patrolmen who have made the best showing during the year in maintenance work. The awards were made at the annual good roads dinner of the club.

The $50 prize for doing the best road work in the county went to J. W. Stukey, who has charge of route 12, from the town of Davis to the Wisconsin state line. Second prize, of the same amount, went to Daniel Horstmeier, in charge of route 14, between Rock City and Berlin, for making the most improvement in the condition of a road during the year in face of all difficulties. A third prize of $50 went to Herman Wismach, route 28, from Davis to the Grant highway, for the greatest amount of gravel hauled for road improvement. John Rockow, Charles Krienke, Isaac Lapp, Lyle Rinehart and John Johnson were given $5 each for making the next best showing.

The prizes proved a stimulus to all of the patrolmen of the county to improve the roads in their care, and the rivalry for first honors brought about results that fully justified the action of the Rotarians in offering the rewards. A committee from the club inspected every patrolled road. There are 28 patrolmen on duty in Stephenson County, and each has about the same amount of territory to look after. It has been found that as a result of the patrol system the dirt roads of this county are greatly improved over former years without any appreciable increase in the cost to taxpayers.

The distribution of prizes will be continued in 1925. The committee will take into consideration only actual road conditions, so that patrolmen who have won honors in preceding years will be eligible for prizes again.

CONDITIONS ALONG SANTA FE TRAIL TO PACIFIC COAST

reported as good. The grade is steep and twisting, and should be driven carefully. From the bottom of the grade there is good gravel road to a point within three miles of Bernalillo, where rough dirt road is encountered. From Bernalillo there is 16 miles of pavement to Albuquerque, 66 miles from Santa Fe.

The west river road out of Albuquerque is reported closed for construction, so traffic is using the East River road to Istella, whence there is excellent graveled road through Los Lunas and Belen to Socorro, 86 miles from Albuquerque.

Continuing via Springerville, the Petrified Forest and Holbrook, there is excellent gravel road from Socorro to the foot of the grade and a fair road, though a little rocky in places, through the Blue Canyon, then a good gravel road following the railroad to Magdalena. From Magdalena through Datil Canyon the road is mostly improved gravel to the Continental Divide, whence the road, it is reported, is in fair condition to and through Quemado Valley. The road is rough and rocky in places through Quemado Canyon to Blaine Lake, whence there is improved road to the Arizona-New Mexico line, and then fair dirt road to Springerville, 154 miles from Socorro.

There are fair conditions for 10 miles beyond Springerville, then new road to within 16 miles of St. John's, and then an excellent gravel road through St. John's, Concho and Hunt and along the edge of the Petrified Forest to Holbrook, 95 miles from Springerville. There are, however, a few rough stretches between St. John's and Concho.

Gallup to Flagstaff.

The more direct road westward from Albuquerque follows the Socorro route as far as Los Lunas, where it swings off on an excellent road that permits making very good time through Cubero and San Fidel to about one and one-half miles from McCartney's. Here there is a rough detour for the one and one-half miles, and then a well-graded road to Blue Water, whence there is a fair road to Thoreau. The old road over the Continental Divide is in only fair shape to within 25 miles of Gallup, but then there is graveled road into Gallup, 142 miles from Los Lunas.

From Gallup there is graded gravel to the Arizona line, then the road is in good condition, except for occasional rough stretches at Lupton, to Allentown and Chambers, whence there is an improved graded road into Holbrook, 105 miles from Gallup.

There are 32 miles of excellent gravel-surfaced road from Holbrook to Winslow.

Out of Winslow there is a fair dirt road, rough in places, then nine miles of excellent graded road past Meteor Mountain, then rather rough road to Canyon Diablo, then 22 miles of very rough and slow road, and finally an excellent graded road into Flagstaff, 67 miles from Winslow.

To the Grand Canyon.

The road to the Grand Canyon from Maine Station is 64 miles long. It is good gravel from Maine to the Tusayan Forest boundary line, then a good graded road, rough in places, to the junction with the road from Williams, then excellent gravel to the Canyon.

The road from Williams to the Grand Canyon also is 64 miles long. There is improved gravel road for eight miles, then about 34 miles of graded road, somewhat rough and chucky in places, then a fair unimproved road, which is becoming chucky and dusty, to the park boundary line, whence there is excellent gravel to the Canyon.

The road west from Flagstaff is excellent gravel for 81 miles through Williams and Ash Fork to Seligman.

From Seligman there is excellent graveled road for 90 miles through Hackberry and Peach Springs to Kingman. When the writer last drove this road, in 1918, it was abominable from Seligman for about 15 miles and then positively the world's worst road for 30 miles through Peach Springs to within a few miles of the Indian school, east of Kingman. The improvement there is typical of that along the Santa Fe Trail.

From Kingman there is an excellent gravel road to the foot of the Gold Roads grade, which is in excellent condition, then a steep down grade from Gold Roads to Oatman. Then there is a long, winding down grade and a short run through the river bottom to Topock, where the Colorado River is crossed. Then there is 16 miles of fair natural gravel road, with many short, winding grades and numerous dry streams and arroyos, into Needles, Cal., 69 miles from Kingman. This route avoids the road through Yucca, which used to be extraordinarily bad in stretches.

Across the Mojave Desert.

From Needles there is desert road, in very good condition, to Goffs, then more good desert road through Danby to Amboy, with a 4½-mile strip of oiled macadam and 13½ miles of good oiled macadam in between to encourage the motorist. At Amboy, it is better to take the road south of the railroad as it is in better condition than that north of the tracks. There is good road from Ludlow to Newberry Station, then improved desert road to Daggett and graveled road to Barstow, 162 miles from Needles.

There is 37 miles of good graded dirt road, desert type, between Barstow and Victorville, with a short detour near Oro Grande.

From Victorville there is paved road the entire 101 miles to Los Angeles.

The Santa Fe Trail is now travelable virtually any time. An arch is being erected over it at the New Mexico-Colorado line, on which is to be cut an inscription stating that the Raton Pass is open 365 days a year. In case of a temporary snow blockade in the Flagstaff region, one can swing south from Socorro toward El Paso and take the cut-off through Lordsburg, Tucson and Phoenix to Yuma, El Centro, Mecca, Beaumont, San Bernardino and Los Angeles.

Santa Fe Trail Side Trips.

There are a number of side trips of great interest that may be taken from the Santa Fe Trail. Some of the finest mountain scenery in Colorado is easily accessible from Trinidad, including the splendid Spanish Peaks, the Sangre de Cristo range and the Stonewall Gap region.

Santa Fe is St. Augustine's rival for fame as the oldest white man's city in this country, and is the gateway to most interesting cliff dwellers' country and picturesque mountains and canyons.

From Gallup one can take the desert road north to the Shiprock country or south to the Zuni pueblos, or swing through the Navajo and Hopi Indian reservations, visiting the pueblos at Oraibi and other Hopi villages, or the wonderful Canyon de Chelly at Chin Lee. This canyon cuts through red sandstone, its main stem being about eight miles long, while each of two branches is about 10 miles long. The canyon and its branches range in depth to 1700 and 1000 feet, and high up on the inaccessible walls are many cliff dwellings. One also can get from Chin Lee to Keyenta and the huge natural bridges.

Near Flagstaff are several small extinct volcanic cones, ice caves and lava flows, while from Maine Station and Williams roads lead to the Grand Canyon. The Petrified Forest may be reached from Holbrook.

Not far from Amboy, in the Mojave Desert of California, and about three miles off the road, is a large extinct volcanic crater that is seldom visited, but would attract thousands of persons yearly if in Europe.

From Barstow there is a road into Death Valley. This side trip is reported to be safe, especially in the colder months, if proper precautions about water and supplies are taken.

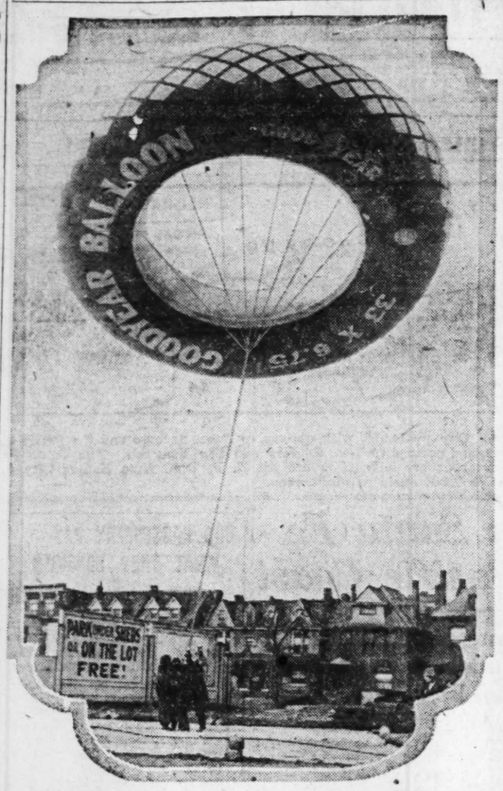
Plenty of Pulling Power in This Sign



The Goodyear tire balloon leaving the ground at McPherson and Vandeventer avenues.

BIG BALLON TIRE FLOATS OVER CITY

A huge tire floating several hundred feet in air above the junction of McPherson and Vandeventer avenues, inscribed "Goodyear 33x 6.75 Balloon," attracted the attention of the thousands of motorists who use Lindell and McPherson avenue for several days the past week. Boys and girls flocked to see it from all parts of the city, and as long as it floated crowds were continually assembling to gaze up at it.

The balloon, which is made of the same fabric as the Zeppelin dirigibles, which the Goodyear company now has the exclusive right to make, was hauled down each evening and sent up again the next morning. It will be taken to Chicago, and is to be flown at the Yale-Harvapd game.

The balloon, which is in the form of a tire, apparently mounted on a rim and showing the characteristic Goodyear tread, is 37 feet in diameter and 9 feet thick. It is larger than a similar tire balloon which has been shown in New York City. Monday, when it was sent up here, was the first time it had been flown, except in factory tests.

It is of 6000 cubic feet capacity, and Monday 40 flasks of hydogen gas were required to inflate it. Theoretically, it is able to left itself and the steel cable by which it is fastened to the winch used for raising and lowering it and 150 pounds additional weight. As a matter of fact, with a breeze it exerted a pull of a ton or more in a factory test and snapped the cable, and here several men had trouble holding it down.

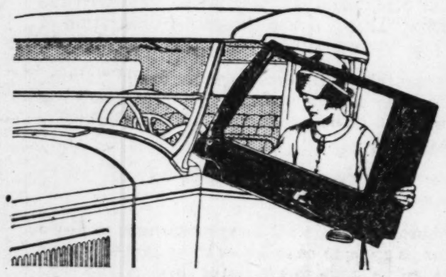
On or Off In Four Minutes



AN ENTIRE set of Glassmobile panels can be put on or taken off in four minutes; without tools and from the inside of the car when necessary. No other equipment built for the same use equals Glassmobile for quick detachability or replacement.

It is this exclusive feature of Glassmobile design and construction in particular that makes it the ideal all-weather equipment for the open car—just as useful in summer as in winter.

But quick detachability or replacement is only one of Glassmobile's many advantages. It is handsome, snug-fitting, durable, free from glass breakage or rattles and is carried flat in a shallow container when not in use—always with the car.

Glassmobile combines closed car comfort and convenience with open car economy at a small fraction of sedan cost while doubling the open car's usefulness.

TIRE TALKS.

HAT Smith and I happened to get talking about tires was a logical outcome of events. He invited me to his country club for dinner. We were rolling along roadway at a smart pace when tire punctured. Smith has been driving for about four months so with cord tires all around he does not look for blowouts—yet.

But it appeared he was not even looking for punctures, for when I stopped out with the idea of making a quick change to the spare and I found there was nothing in the way of a tire hanging on the rear of the car.

"Where's your spare?" I asked.

"On the car," was the reply. "Didn't you just hear it puncture?"

I looked at the flat tire and recognized it as the fabric extra which I had had bought soon after acquiring the machine.

"But where is the original tire that was on this wheel?" I asked him.

"It is being repaired," Smith said. "It isn't ready."

"You mean, you aren't ready," I snorted. "A driver can be rather certain of blowouts, but punctures are different. They come in bunches like bad luck. See, there's a nail right through the shoe and into the tube. We'll have to fix this job on the road. Either that or ride along and ruin your shoe and tire."

Because Smith had taken my recent advice about being prepared for what might happen, he was able to produce a can of material to mend inner tubes. This helped considerably; at least, so we thought upon looking at the can. Its contents, however, were not very encouraging. The dealer who sold him the can must have had it on the shelf for years, for the cement was dry and the rubber hard. We decided to worry over that later. At least, Smith was about to have a little experience in repairing tubes on the road, so we went ahead as though we really had something with which to do the job.

I watched Smith try to raise the left front wheel. He placed the jack under the right front spring and began trying to raise the car. He worked for some time, and then, just as the front of the car began to leave the ground, the machine rolled back a few inches and slipped off the jack.

"Pull on your emergency brake when you are changing a front tire," I suggested. "Whenever a rear tire is being changed it is best to place a rock or something in front or in back of one of the front wheels, so that the car can't move of its own accord."

He followed my suggestion and once again began trying to raise the car by placing the jack under one of the front springs. When the jack had been turned up to its limit he found the car only about a half inch above the round. There was hardly room enough to change the tire. He complained about the jack.

"It's the way you are using it," I said. "You're simply compressing the spring and not really raising the car. Always place your jack under the axle. And if, for any reason, you can't raise the car high enough that way, then place something under the jack."

When we had removed the tire from the wheel and the shoe from the rim, we were ready for the real job.

"Now, what?" Smith asked, trying his best to mold the hard piece of rubber. "Might as well put a stone on the tube. This will never hold."

"Try it anyway," I suggested. "I once had the same experience. I hammered the hard rubber over the hole in the tube until it stuck just so that it wouldn't fall off while I put the tube in the shoe. The pressure of the tube against the inside of the shoe, and the heat, finally made a perfect patch. I drove 300 miles without changing the tire; even then the trouble was due to a fresh puncture. What happens once will happen again."

It did. We pumped up the tire, and it held. Smith was enthusiastic.

"Say," he explained, when we had arrived at our destination, "that tire is still holding up."

"I know it is," I replied. "I didn't put too much air in it."

Smith wanted to hear more about the knack of keeping the air pressure in tires balanced between under and over inflation, but we were interrupted by a third man. Cares of tires is a story in itself, anyway.

NEW PEERLESS EIGHT DISPLAYED

Car Vibrationless at Every Speed, Tests Are Said to Prove.

A new Peerless eight with a V-type 90-degree motor that is said to be vibrationless at all engine speeds has just been announced by the Peerless Motor Car Co. and is being shown in St. Louis by the Park Automobile Co. It is known as "the Peerless Equipoised Eight."

In preliminary demonstrations at the Peerless factory in Cleveland the new car is said to have operated with a smoothness that will astonish even those who are most critical of car performance.

The car derives its name, "Equipoised," from the perfect balance which Peerless officials declare they have achieved in building the new power plant.

Eliminating Vibration.

"We have succeeded in combining a counterbalanced crankshaft with scientifically co-ordinated silent timing gears," says D. A. Burke, president and general manager of the Peerless Motor Car Co. "The resulting equipoise is the principal factor in enabling us to eliminate vibration and produce a new quality of smoothness.

"What we actually have done is to neutralize what engineers know as inertia forces. It is these forces which have always tended to cause vibration in an automobile engine.

"The smoothness of operation which we have succeeded in building into the new Peerless Equipoised Eight is also aided by other refinements. Improved carburetion permits instant pickup with wide-open throttle at any speed, from a slow, idling gait up.

We have also made a definite advance in transmission design and construction which helps materially to rob motoring of the annoyances that come from vibration.

Placing the propeller shaft in running balance eliminates the vibration which accompanies whipping at high speeds in the ordinary car. A torque arm of exclusive Peerless design contributes to the general effect of equipoise.

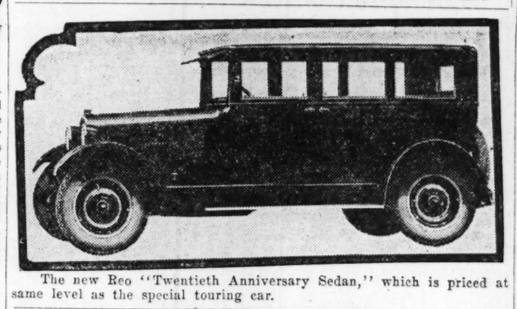
New Radiator and Hood Lines.

The smoothness of this new Peerless applies not only to the action of the motor, but also to the riding qualities. Balloon tires are standard. So are Peerless lockhead hydraulic four-wheel brakes The new steering gear, especially designed for balloon tires, is a revelation of easy steering.

The car is as striking in appearance as in performance. There is a grace of line and proportion in radiator, hood and cowl that is exceedingly attractive. The radiator is entirely new in design and is nickeled. Handsome drug type headlamps and cowl lamps are of special noncorrosive metal which requires no nickeling. Another nickeled lamp at the rear on the car serves not only as a tall lamp but also embodies an electric stop signal and back up light stop.

Seven body styles, a four-passenger touring phaeton, and six enclosed models. All have wheelbase of 128 inches. Handbuffed black Spanish grained leather is used in open cars, while highest quality mohair upholstering lends atmosphere of luxury to the interiors of the closed models. This is accentuated by fittings of dull silver.

New Closed Model Seen in St. Louis



The new Reo "Twentieth Anniversary Sedan," which is priced at same level as the special touring car.

REO SEDAN AT OPEN CAR PRICE

New "Twentieth Anniversary" Model Is Full-Sized 4-Door Type.

The first of the new Reo sedans, at the same price as a touring car and introduced by the Reo Motor Car Co. to celebrate its twentieth anniversary, are being displayed by the Kardell Motor Co. at its showrooms, 3145 Locust boulevard. The new model is a full-sized 4-door, 5-passenger sedan, built substantially on the standard Reo 6-cylinder chassis, and is priced exactly with the "T6" special touring, the most popular open Reo model.

The new sedan has the exclusive Reo subframe construction, which has the lower center of gravity of the car and gives an almost horizontal line of drive between engine and rear axle. The T6 engine with intake valves in head and exhaust valves in the cylinder block is small and cleanly built, yet develops 50 horsepower at 2000 revolutions a minute. Genuine baloon tires on disc wheels are standard on this car as on all other Reo passenger models.

The frame of the body is constructed of the best kiln-dried and seasoned ash and maple than can be procured. Joints are carefully fashioned and all are glued and bolted. Steel and iron braces are used to reinforce joints at the points of greatest stress. The body is covered with steel panels formed on dies and fastened to the frame in a substantial manner.

The roof is of the approved type of slatted construction, padded and covered with waterproof fabric to make it sound-proof and watertight. A drip moulding over doors and windows serves to carry off water and adds to general convenience of the body.

The windshield is made in one piece and when closed completely is water-tight. An adjustable visor is fitted over the windshield.

Doors are exceptionally wide and each is hung on three hinges. Double catches are fitted to each door to prevent accidental opening.

All glass in doors and windows is 3-16-inch plate, set in channels to prevent rattle. The rear glass is of the same thickness, and it is set in rubber. Mouldings, finished in walnut, surround all window and door openings.

The body is upholstered in an exceptionally good grade of material, and the interior is lighted with a dome fixture of satin-finished nickel, with frosted glass. Parking lights, mounted on the cowl, are included in the lighting system of the car.

MAN'S DAILY WORK SAID TO INFLUENCE HIS DRIVING OF CAR

ister at the city's leading hotel before making their business calls are said to be nearly as cautious as the average motor tourist, though prone to be a bit dull and careless through fatigue occasioned by driving long distances over tiresome roads.

Salesmen who plan only to stop in a town or city to visit customers are said to give entirely too little attention to the business of driving. This is particularly true of salesmen-drivers who are covering new territory and so are unfamiliar with the cities in which they are looking for business. Reading firm names and wandering about in search of prospects, they are said to become frequently involved in unnecessary collisions.

Persons in exacting lines of work, such as banking, are expected to show a high record of safety in their driving, but such facts will have to be proved by statistics before the average motorist will be convinced. The psychologist reasons that as banks balance their books before closing their employes have nothing in a business way to preoccupy their attention when they drive home in their cars. The men in this business who carry the weight of the responsibility—the executives—as in other lines of business often employ chauffeurs, their business therefore not influencing their driving.

Responsibility in business, apparently, does not encourage responsibility in driving where the business man handles his own car. His safety is believed to be in inverse proportion to his concentration upon business matters. This is said to be demonstrated by the large number of accidents in which intelligent persons are involved because "I was not thinking what I was doing."

Physicians invariably drive fast on emergency calls and so represent the sort of safety characteristic of the experienced fast driver, in that their attention is centered upon the job in hand, their minds having less opportunity to wander than in the case of the very slow driver. Like the fast driver, however, the physician-motorist is likely to get into serious trouble if he gets into trouble at all.

The physician is unique, however, in that he invariably knows his ground, so is able to drive fast much more wisely than the average so-called fast driver. He knows where the danger points are and can apportion his speed accordingly. It is only when his mind wanders off that he is likely to forget what he is doing, but such trouble as he gets into is likely to be the sort that calls for an ambulance.

A physician, rushing to a hospital, recently ran headlong into a street car that was approaching. His excuse was that he thought it was going in the opposite direction. Those who support the theory that one's business is largely responsible for one's characteristics and driving record contend that he was merely the victim of his profession.

According to the Department of Commerce there has been too little consideration of the ability of many persons who are buying cars on small first payments to drive safely, and since a large percentage of the time-payment purchases represents buying by the skilled laborer there is agitation for investigation of the part such citizens play in safe driving. Many contend that because cars come easy to those who earn high wages there should be a tendency to be careless in the operation of such cars, but some of the facts do not support this conclusion.

It is shown, for instance, that while the purchase of cars is greatly simplified, the average laborer-motorist does not find maintenance any too easy, particularly since he is coming to discover that his wages are high only in figure, his purchasing power being actually less in some instances. This motorist does not usually insure his car or take out a public liability policy, thus he has a double reason for being careful when he is at the wheel. Insurance, however, is not considered by intelligent people to be an incentive to carelessness, for the man who buys coverage for his car is generally enlightened enough to know that it is doubly effective if used in connection with his own vigilance.

The working man who drives a car is generally considered to be as safe as the average. The proposed investigation, however, may prove otherwise, particularly if it is discovered that certain occupational diseases render their victims undesirable as motor drivers. It may be discovered, for instance, that a bricklayer makes a better driver on the average than a plasterer, or vice versa.

Walter P. Chrysler Announces

25 Miles to the Gallon
58 Miles per Hour
5 to 25 Miles in 8 Seconds

With a full sense of the seriousness of the statement—carefully weighing the meaning of every word—Chrysler-Maxwell engineers, without reservation, promise you, in this new Maxwell, performance surpassing in every essential any four-cylinder car in the world today.

To make that sweeping assurance more definite and specific—we promise you in speed, in power, in pliability of power, in swift response, and even more particularly in riding steadiness and comfort, results no four-cylinder car has yet been able to attain.

To go still further into details, the new Maxwell has speed capacities far beyond any car of its type and class, and in the rare instances in which they may have to be used, will register them with an absence of vibration without precedent in four-cylinder construction.

Chrysler-Maxwell engineers have been actuated by the conviction that in addition to its inherent and natural economies, the four-cylinder principle possessed possibilities of power and speed capable of being translated into ease and steadiness which have never been fully developed.

No one can doubt that success has crowned their efforts, after even so short an experience as a half hour's driving demonstration of the car.

Judged by the unusual and extraordinary character of its performance, this Maxwell is literally a new and immeasurably better type of four-cylinder motor car.

W. P. Chrysler
President and Chairman of the Board
Maxwell Motor Sales Corporation, Detroit
Maxwell-Chrysler Motor Co. of Canada, Ltd., Windsor, Ontario

The new transmission lock protects the owner against theft when the car is left unattended.

The new grouping of dials on the instrument panel is not only exceedingly handsome but extremely practical.

The new good Maxwell is remarkably easy to steer. The short spark and throttle controls and horn button at the top of the steering column add to the convenience of the driver.

A new feature on all models is the combination tail and stop-light, in a distinctive Maxwell design.

New fenders especially designed for balloon tires—wider, heavier and with deeper skirt—protecting body from mud-splashing and adding to the beauty of the cars—onward distinctive design lamps.

A larger radiator, of new shape and more massive, greatly improves the appearance of the forward part of the car.

Balloon tires, natural wood wheels, stop-light, transmission lock, Duco finish standard on all Maxwell models. Shrouded visor, integral with roof, and heater are standard on all closed models.

On Auto Row

Fast Run Over Dirt Roads.

RUNNING 50, 55 and 60 miles an hour on every straightaway that was clear, despite the fact that there were 2½ miles of dirt for every mile of hard-surfaced roads, a Franklin sedan has just made a trip from Baltimore, Md., to Richmond, Va., and return in 12 hours and 25 minutes; and between Washington and Richmond both ways averaged 41 miles an hour. A box containing a dozen eggs was carried on the floor of the car throughout the trip without cracking a shell. The car averaged 16 miles to the gallon of gasoline, despite the high speed. On the Maryland roads it was held within the State speed limits. The driver, C. J. Peach, a salesman for made a trip from Baltimore, Md., the Baltimore Franklin dealer, was arrested for speeding and delayed some time just beyond Washington. Quick pickup, comfortable riding, good brakes and steady maintaining of speed made the fast run possible. The three passengers in the car reported that the driver drove carefully.

Travels Far Cheaply.

Capt. Charles A. Palludan, an old sea captain, who turned landsman temporarily, three years ago, when he bought a Chevrolet touring car in California and became infatuated with wandering by motor car instead of steamer, was in St. Louis the past week. He has driven the car 43,800 miles since 1921, visiting virtually every part of this country. On one of his trips he drove 3088 miles on 163 gallons of gasoline, his expense being $37 for gasoline, $10.10 for oil and grease, $17.20 for tires and tubes, $7.50 for road and bridge tolls, and $37 for repairs due to breaking a spring and smashing a flywheel on bad roads. On this trip his expense totaled $110.05, or 3¾ cents a mile. He carried one and two passengers and 346 pounds of camping outfit. On his present trip he made 1547 miles, from Laredo, Tex., to Kansas City and St. Louis, with a total expense of $43.45, averaging 21.4 miles to the gallon of gasoline. On a 4936-mile trip from coast to coast his expenses were $195.50.

Old Scout Visits City.

One of the scouts who served under Generals Miles, Howard and Sherman in Indian campaign was a visitor in St. Louis recently when Col. King Stanley, who is touring the country in a Cleveland sedan that he has painted with Western scenes, spent a few days with the Cleveland Motor Sales Co. He is accompanied by his wife, a former Brooklyn lawyer and newspaper woman. Their wedding last year at Station WOR in Newark, N. Y., is said to have been the first ever broadcasted by radio in this country. Both are radio fans, and they have their car equipped with receiving and sending sets. Stanley was active in the old West for years, and guided many parties of immigrants across the plains and mountains to California. He is physically alert despite his 71 years, and ascribes his health to the fact that he has been motoring steadily ever since 1899.

118 M. P. H. for 250 Miles.

Champion plugs have made a record in the winning cars in eight consecutive big races. Tommy Milton used them in his car in the race that opened the new speedway at Charlotte, N. C., when he averaged 118.17 miles an hour for 250 miles.

Closed Car Sales Run Strongly.

A sales increase of 112 per cent over the same month a year ago is reported by the Velie Motors Corporation for October. Today Velie sales are running 84 per cent closed cars, largely due to reduction of the differential between closed and open models.

Join Sales Forces.

A. E. Hall, who has sold trucks here for nine years, has joined the sales force of the Autocar factory branch here.

O. T. Blank, well-known on Auto Row, is to sell Maxwells and Chryslers for the Ward Motor Car Co.

Cars Presented to Aviators.

When Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, commander of theworld flyers, and his assistant, Lieut. Leslie P. Arnold, stopped in Chicago on their flight to the Pacific Coast to finish their journey, each was promised an automobile as a gift from the citizens of Chicago. They formed the crew of the flagship Chicago. Told they could pick any automobile manufactured in the world, Lieuts. Smith and Arnold chose Packard straight eights.

Long Run in High Gear.

A Peerless eight has just run from Patterson, N. J., to Cleveland, O., and back, a distance of 1207 miles, with the gear shift lever locked in high. The trip required only 36 hours and 8 minutes, so the average speed was 33½ miles an hour. The gear lever was sealed and the run was observed by newspaper men who were passengers in the car. A number of formidable grades were encountered on the run.

12,000 Miles in a 1916 Car.

A 1916 Buick carried 10 persons and dragged a trailer loaded with 500 pounds recently from Woodland, Cal., to Portland, Ore., and then was driven by George Chambers, of Woodland, 12,000 miles across the country and back without mechanical trouble. The car had run 75,000 miles before this trip began. Chambers reported a whole day in low gear bucking Montana mud and a 300-mile tow of another car from Needles, Cal., to Los Angeles.

Breaks Mountain Climbing Record.

Dispatches from California state that a stock Cleveland six, driven by Ralph Mulford and carrying a passenger, has just climbed the 11 miles to the summit of Mount Diablo, Cal., to a height of 4000 feet in 22 minutes 36 3-5 seconds, averaging 30 miles an hour and at times 40 miles an hour. The feat was officially timed. The best previous record for this climb by a stock car was 25 minutes flat and for a nonstock car, stripped for the occasion, was 24 minutes 30 seconds. Rain the day before the climb turned much of the road into mud, so the Cleveland's feat was the more creditable.

Gardner Represented in Chicago

W. H. Yeidell, sales and advertising manager of the Gardner Motor Co., has just closed a deal whereby the interests of the Gardner car will be represented in Chicago by the Louis Geyler Co., operating as wholesale distributer. Geyler is one of the largest and best-known automobile dealers in the middle West and has operated in Chicago for over 20 years. He is exclusively a wholesaler, not competing with his own dealers in the retailing of cars.

Vaudeville by Motor Car.

Discarding railroad time tables and their uncertainties as well as the vicissitude of hotel life in the "sticks," with which the average show "trouper" has to contend for 40 or more weeks in the year, "Tim" and Betty Myers are covering their cross-continent vaudeville itinerary this season in an Overland coupe-sedan. They left New York March 15 and have made all their "jumps" from one engagement to the next in their car and have slept in the car every night since leaving Broadway. They have not missed a show. They have cut their expenses in half. After reaching the Pacific Coast they plan to return East over the Southern route.

PRICES LOWERED ON MOON CARS

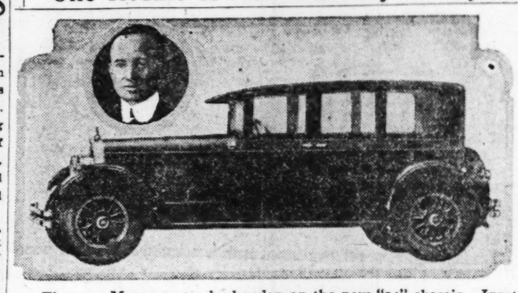
The Moon Motor Car Co. announced substantial reductions in the prices of all its current models that became effective yesterday. The new prices in no way affecting the quality, style or equipment of the cars. Full-size balloon tires, hydraulic four-wheel brakes and Duco finish remain standard on all models.

The lower prices of Moon cars, says Stewart McDonald, president of the company, are due to greatly increased production at the Moon factory in St. Louis.

In the spring, says McDonald, it looked as if all automobile production and sales would be far below that in 1923, but with the introduction of the 1925 models in June, Moon business took a decided upward trend and production has been increased to such an extent that lower prices have been made possible.

Although 1924 has been an off year for business in general and for the automobile business in particular, production and sales of Moon cars this year have exceeded the high record established in 1923, says McDonald.

One Result of New Factory Policy



The new Marmon standard sedan on the new "74" chassis. Inset —E. A. More, President of the More Automobile Co., Marmon distributer in the St. Louis district.

TEN NEW MODELS IN MARMON LINE

Series "74" Better Looking and More Powerful Than Previous Marmons.

Some of the most interesting cars seen this year are the seven closed and three open models in the new Marmon "74" line, which is distributed in this district by the More Automobile Co. Features among these new models are a five-passenger sedan and a five-passenger, four-door broughamcoupe that cost only 4 per cent more than the open Marmons.

These cars, which include standard and de luxe models, are the outcome of the new policy at the Marmon factory, where a new organization, new plans and great economies of space and mechanism have permitted production of the best looking, most powerful Marmon cars ever made.

Changes in Appearance.

The famous Marmon 34 chassis has been retained practically in its entirety. The frame is of the well-known patented Marmon deep "Z" type with integral steel running boards and cross cantilever rear springs. The engine of six cylinders, 3¾x5½, overhead valve, 84-horsepower is retained, being refined by an improved oiling system for complete quietness and long life of the valve mechanism. Improved carburetion is provided by including the intake manifold in the header casting. Improved springs and deepening of the frame to 10 inches are features.

The appearance of the line as a whole has been altered quite a bit, in harmony with a series of design improvements. Thus the radiator front has been raised and widened, improving cooling conditions, as well as changing the front aspect somewhat.

In addition to the usual switch control, the lamps may be dimmed by a foot button located between clutch and brake pedals. The rear end now carries the gasoline tank, as well as a special carrier for spare tires.

Open cars are longer and lower, having that fleet, custom-built look so desired. In the closed models no detail looking to comfort and elegance has been overlooked in the interior equipment.

Duco finish is the standard for all models, the color schemes having been selected with the utmost care. The lighter shade in the two-tone effects is always above the darker, thus reversing the customary order with pleasing results.

De Luxe Models.

The de luxe models are finished in a variety of color schemes. The coupe, for example, is finished in two-tone green gray; the seven-passenger sedan in Buckingham gray and black, and blue and black; the five-passenger sedan in Buckingham gray and black, and green gray and black. The roadster is two-tone green gray, the phaeton either two-tone gray or blue and black. The touring car is finished in three styles, namely, Duco gray and black, Duco blue and black, and green and black.

Balloon tires are standard equipment on all models—6.20x20 on open models, and 7.30x20 on the closed cars. Front wheel brakes are supplied at an extra cost. Wire wheels also may be had at extra cost.

NEW RECORD FOR ROAD BUILDING EXPECTED IN 1925

work, and nearly 60 miles of concrete pavement was being completed each week.

An interesting aspect of the highway situation is the fact that already engineers are preparing for the day when highways must be widened and new ones must be built much wider than in the past. For example, Pennsylvania's highway department recognizes the necessity of widening the Lincoln Highway to 40 feet from Philadelphia to Gettysburg, and possibly clear across the State, when the more pressing needs of sections that have no paving are cared for.

So, too, the time will come when the growth of traffic will necessitate widening of at least one of the main highways between St. Louis and Chicago and probably of a highway from St. Louis to Cairo.

At present the trend of engineering opinion seems to be away from the position of those who would build two 18 or 20-foot roads instead of one 40-foot highway. With most of the grading already done, and the fact that existing bridges and culverts can be widened, many engineers prefer to draft their plans for the future toward widening existing roads instead of building additional highways.

Do You Know Cars?

ONE popular make of car is using a German silver radiator instead of nickel. Do you know which one it is?

What make of car is using an adjustable wrist pin bearing?

What car uses a fan that automatically disengages at speeds of 40 and over?

How many cars are using air cleaners? What are their names?

Do you know the name of the car that carries its rain curtains in back of the back seat cushion?

What car is now using a brake pedal set up higher than the clutch pedal in order to get greater leverage?

What car holds the record for the quickest stop?

With what car can you shift from high to second and then to low at any speed?

In what eight-cylinder car do you pour engine oil in through openings in the cylinder heads?

On what car do you adjust the fan belt by turning a wing nut?

The starter button is on the dash of one make of car. Do you know which one?

Who's making a sleeve-valve straight-eight car?

Yet you thought you were "up" on automobiles!

It's the deafening grind of wheels in the head that keep some drivers from hearing the train coming.

SIGN SHOWS WAY FOR TWO ROUTES THROUGH ST. LOUIS

The Automobile Club of Missouri has placed a brilliant sign at Lindell boulevard and Kingshighway to direct traffic in Lindell boulevard through the city on State Highway Route No. 9 and to Route No. 2. No. 9 runs from Southeast Missouri north to Hannibal, while No. 2 is the so-called airline route to Kansas City that is to be concrete the entire distance.

The sign is so made that when rays from a headlight fall on it, it appears to be illuminated from behind. It also is very legible by daylight.

St. Louis Poster Poplar.

Novel "Give Her a Car for Christmas" posters, inspired and designed in St. Louis, are being used all over the country. The idea was suggested to the National Association of Automobile Show Managers at Atlantic City last summer by its president, Robert E Lee of St. Louis, and he was authorized to have one designed for approval. Walter Bringhurst of St. Louis made the design which was accepted. Already orders for the posters have been received from more than 30 cities.

THIS CLUB SEDAN PRICE A SURPRISE TO THOUSANDS

The chief comment heard regarding this Club Sedan is that a Hupmobile closed car at such a price was never thought possible.

Hupmobile—finely built, reliable, long-lived, brilliant in performance, low in upkeep costs—is a car which thousands have desired to own.

This Club Sedan enables these thousands to enjoy closed car comfort plus Hupmobile's superior mechanism, at little more than open car cost.

This Club Sedan affords plenty of leg room. It has doors front and rear, regular sedan width.

It is finished in Duco blue or beige, with nickel radiator and cowl lamps. There is an unusually large trunk in rear. Balloon tires and natural wood or disc wheels are optional at nominal extra cost.

Phone for a demonstrator to call at your home or office. No obligation.

134 STAR OWNERS AVERAGE 24 9/10 MILES PER GALLON

ONE hundred thirty four Star owners, driving an aggregate of one and a half million miles, averaged 24 9/10 miles per gallon of gas.

This record was made in Georgia and Alabama mud, in Texas and Idaho sand, in Maine and Vermont snow and in the high altitudes of the Rocky Mountains. It was made by ordinary Star cars, driven by ordinary drivers. It represents Star performance under average conditions as they exist today throughout the United States and Canada.

True, many Star owners get more than 24 9/10 miles from a gallon of gas. In sections where good roads predominate, many Star owners report 28 to 38 miles.

If you are seeking a car sparing in the use of gas you will find that the unusual power of the Star motor is not developed by the extravagant use of fuel.

The small gas consumption of the Star car is another reason why those who seek reliable transportation at a minimum of expense should consider the Star first.

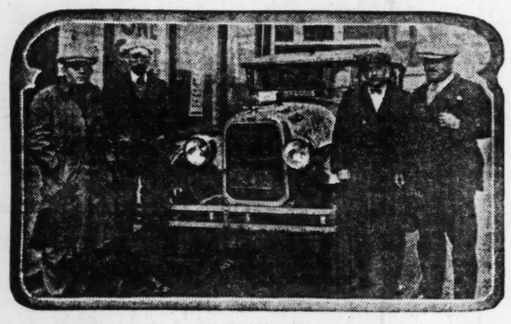
2236.1 Miles in 48 Hours!

A Startling Nation-Wide Demonstration of Motor Car Stamina, Speed and Economy

How the Local Entry Performed



Total Mileage—2328.

Average Speed—48.5 miles per hour.

Gasoline Consumption—23.8 miles per gallon.

Driver—G. A. Morris of Cleveland Motor Sales Co.

Observer—D. E. Sawyer of Automotive Electric Company.

This Cleveland Six stock model had the same Schebler Carbureter used on all Cleveland models.

St. Louis entry won fourth prize out of 86 entries.

Car on exhibition now at Cleveland Motor Sales Co., 2650-52 Locust Bl.

(The "One-Shot" Lubrication System is licensed under Bowen Products Co. patents)

Touring $1095 New Brougham $1545
f. o. b. Cleveland

Here is an amazing exhibition of motor car stamina, speed and economy—the most magnificent ever given the American public.

For 48 continuous hours, scores of Cleveland Sixes roared over the highways of America—

—participating simultaneously in a National Non-Stop Economy Run——demonstrating clearly and conclusively that the 1925 Cleveland Six is destined to go into history as one of the epoch making cars!

The winner went 2,236.1 miles at an average speed of 46.5 m.p.h., averaging 28.3 miles to the gallon.

The eight leading entries covered an average of 2117.3 miles in 48 hours at an average speed of 44.1 m.p.h. and averaged 25.5 miles to the gallon.

And all 86 participating cars showed a grand average mileage of 1565 for the 48 hours; a grand average speed of 32.6 m.p.h. and a grand average economy of 21.4 miles per gallon!

There have been non-stop runs before—but never one like this. Never one so comprehensive in its scope—so free from any suspicion of "stunt" performance—so full of meaty facts.

All entries were standard 1925 Cleveland Sixes—exactly the car you see on the street.

Professional racing drivers were barred. Salesmen, executives, mechanics, accountants, newspaper men and even stenographers handled the wheel in various parts of the country.

Every car carried at least one passenger. Every motor ran 48 hours without stopping. Every car was officially observed. Every result was sworn to.

The records were not made on banked and guarded speedways—but in every section of the country over every conceivable sort of road, under every conceivable driving condition.

Here the highways were concrete, level and dry. There the roads ran with rain and clinging mud clutched at the wheels.

Here the going was gravel, loose and treacherous. Here again it was some dusty trail that led uphill and down through six or seven states.

At times the roads were clear and speeds of 50-60-70 miles an hour could be maintained. At others, congested traffic called for sure, swift, certain brakes and a steering gear that responded with split-second speed.

The average man will rarely do two months driving in two days—will rarely want to travel some 2,000 miles at a speed of 46 miles an hour regardless of road or weather.

But the average man DOES want a car that can come through such a racking, gruelling grind with flying colors.

And the man who has a Cleveland Six knows that his car will do all that—and more!

He knows that the Mileage Motor gives him an undreamed-of combination of power, endurance, speed and flawless operation——that he can safely expect 20 miles to the gallon in normal driving—

—that he can count on long life and inexpensive maintenance—

—and that, no matter what model he chooses, it will have the same fine materials, the same inspired engineering, and the same scrupulous workmanship that made these brilliant results an actuality!

"ONE-SHOT" Lubrication System

The amazing feats here recorded were to a large extent made possible by the "One-Shot" Lubrication System.

This exclusive patented feature enabled all drivers to keep all chassis parts perfectly lubricated at all times.

Whether going 60 miles an hour or taking on gasoline, they simply stepped on the plunger—and oiled all 23 chassis parts. No squeaks. No punished bearings.

HOW NEW TRAFFIC IS CREATED WHEN ROAD IS IMPROVED

Roads to Relieve Victory Highway Between Kansas City and Topeka Must Be Built.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 15.—An illustration of the effect of concentration on road improvement is offered by that part of the Victory Highway which passes through St. Louis, between Kansas Cit, Kan., and Topeka, Kan., the national headquarters of the Victory Highway Association. For a number of years that stretch of road was dreaded by cross-country motorists, as well as the residents of the two cities, as one of the worst in the State.

It was only in August of this year that the paving of the stretch between the two cities was completed on the last of the fills which required time to settle.

Now L. R. Tillotson, State Highway Engineer for Kansas, says the State faces the immediate necessity of improving at least one, and probably two, more roads between the two cities, to care for the traffic which is following the Victory Highway.

Traffic Jams the Road.

About a year ago, most of the concrete had been laid and was open to tourists. But regulations of the Federal Bureau of Roads made it necessary to allow the fills 12 months in which to settle before the concrete slab could be laid upon them.

Long before the fills had been made the road was carrying all the traffic it could handle. With them coompleted, the road is carrying an overload of traffic between the two cities.

The traffic volume which jams the 18-foot pavement is made up of all the elements which fill a city street, a country road or a transcontinental highway.

Prefer Bus or Car to Train.

Motorbuses, each carrying 22 passengers, maintain a regular half-hourly schedule between Topeka and Kansas City, maintaining a speed of nearly 40 miles an hour over the pavement. Residents on the farms which flank the highway use it as the most convenient artery for transportation of farm products to one city or the other, and follow it to one or the other when they wish to do their shopping.

Topeka and Kansas City residents seldom think of taking a railroad train from either place—the trip can be made almost as quickly by motor car as by train. As a result, the passenger departments of the three main lines of railway connecting the two cities admit that local passenger traffic has dropped off considerably since the Victor Highway was paved.

Tourists Thick on This Road.

Cross-country motor tourists make up a large percentage of the traffic which fills the road.

The Victory Highway between Kansas City and Topeka spans a gap between the pavements of the former city to a point in Kansas where road conditions are nearly always excellent, regardless of the weather. Extending westward from Topeka, there is a considerable amount of graveled and paved road which delivers the tourists safely into the semiarid region of the West, where rains are not the barrier to motor traffic which they constitute in the east end of Kansas and in states east of Kansas. Consequently, motorists from several Eastern states head for Kansas City to take advantage of the pavement on the Victory highway westward.

Tillotson points out that an improved highway must be adequate to care for not only the traffic which existed on the road before its improvement, but also for the traffic which is attracted to the route as the news of its improvement spreads

It is this new traffic which has sought the Victory Highway through eastern Kansas, made it the main highway of the State, with more traffic than any other road of the state carries for the same distance, and will make necessary construction of one or more additional roads.

CARS AND CONGESTION.

It is rapidly being recognized that business is following the automobile and that better distribution of city congestion, real estate values and population is already in process because of the necessity for parking and the difficulty under present conditions.

Ignition Should Be "On" In Using Engine as Brake

In Modern Automoblie Motor Considerable Fuel Gets Into Cylinders When Throttle Is "Closed."

The resistance of the engine should be used to help the brakes when an automobile is descending steep grades, but the ignition should not be shut off when so doing, declares Ernest C. Garland, technical manager of the Cadillac Motor Car Co.

Using the motor for braking purposes has become recognized by engineers as correct procedure, and the application of the practice is not limited to automobiles. On electrically driven trains of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, for example, on down grades the motor is so used for braking. In this case it has an added advantage in that the motor becomes a dynamo, and the power absorbed is transformed into electricity and put back into the line.

Leave Ignition On.

In using the automobile engine for braking, it should be clear that the faster the engine is driven in relation to the speed of the car, the greater will be the resistance offered. On gradual down grades, the resistance offered by the engine when the transmission is in high gear, or direct drive, may be sufficient. On steeper grades it is best to shift into intermediate gear before beginning the descent. On very steep mountain grades, on which one should proceed slowly, it is advisable to shift even into low gear.

In using the engine to assist the brakes, it is natural to think it will help still further to switch off the ignition. This should not be done, Garland says. Even when the throttle is "closed," enough fuel is admitted to the cylinders to drive the engine at a speed of about 300 revolutions per minute. If this fuel is not burned, it condenses in the cylinder wall and washes off the oil by which the pistons are lubricated. At the same time, the power developed by the burning of this small amount of fuel is insignificant compared with the power absorbed.

Switching off the ignition when coasting, with the car driving the engine, does not appreciably increase the resistance, and is almost sure to have injurious results, even though the throttle may be "closed."

Matter of Engine Control.

In climbing hills, good driving, so far as the car is concerned, is wholly a matter of engine control. There is always a thrill of achievement in taking a difficult hill "in high." Sometimes this is a mark of good driving; sometimes otherwise. There is a tendency among American drivers to avoid shifting gears. European drivers, who shift gears on what we would call the slightest pretext, find it hard to understand this American attitude.

Some of the highest grade multiple-cylinder engines have a great reserve power and can exert an enormous amount of it without detriment. Even in some of the lighter cars, in which there is a favorable power to weight ratio, good results are also obtained. However, in places where deep sand, mud or steep up grades make excessive demands upon any engine driven in high gear, waiting too long, and allowing the car to lose its momentum before shifting gears may make it necessary to resort to low instead of second gear.

If drivers will learn these two lessons about driving in hilly regions, to use the engine for breaking purposes, but not to turn off the switch, and to sense the moment at which to shift into lower gears when climbing, they will be rewarded by better braking service with fewer brake adjustments, and longer life with better performance from the engine.

HOW BEST TO GET CAR READY FOR THE WINTER AFTER SUMMER DRIVING

ANY car that has seen a good deal of service during the past summer deserves consideration before being subjected to the rigors of dinter driving. Your car should be given a careful inspection, preferably by an authorized dealer, before cold weather sets in.

Change transmission and axle oil while weather is mild.

See if brakes need relining or adjustment.

Replace missing oiling devices and lubricate all around.

Look tires over for breaks that should be vulcanized.

Is battery full of electrolytic and properly charged?

Clean battery terminals by washing with boiling water.

Check breaker point and spark plug gaps.

Clean out water system, installing hose if old is at all worn.

Repack water pump.

Drain gasoline tank and thoroughly clean strainer and gas lines.

See that hot air connection is in operation.

Clean out oil pan, oil lines and strainer on oil suction line.

Tighten car all over.

Repair any top or side curtain defects and see that curtain fasteners are intact.

LUXURIOUS 11,000-POUND MOTOR CAR VISITS ST. LOUIS

One of the most elaborately equipped motor cars ever seen in St. Louis is "The Ark," owned by W. K. Kellogg, chairman of the board of the Kellogg Co., of Battle Creek, Mich., which arrived here Monday and departed for Kansas City and the Pacific Coast. It was in charge of the owner's son, Karl Kellogg, and the latter's wife, who planned to pick up the elder Kellogg in Kansas City.

The car has a special luxurious body built on a White truck chassis with a wheel base of 198 inches, and the total weight is more than 11,000 pounds. It has electric lights, ice machine, shower bath, Pullman tables and chairs as well as Pullman window ventilators, lavatory and toilet, beds, telephone to chauffeur's compartment, electric fans, kitchenette and every possible household convenience. The kitchenette is supplied with a special combination electric heater, boiler and egg poacher, and there are also an electric flatiron, curling iron and hot water heater. An oil stove is carried for emergencies. Another feature is a 16-foot folding boat with gasoline motor for use when the road takes the owner near a lake.

In addition there is a long distance radio outfit, "on board" over which Kellogg can "get" all of the more prominent broadcasting stations.

The shower bath is supplied with water from a 40-gallon pressure tank, while the car carries a supply of 35 gallons of gasoline. The mileage averages about seven and one-half to eight miles a gallon, and the speed of the car is 30 to 35 miles an hour.

CHRYSLER-BUILT MAXWELLS HERE

Five New Models, Faster and More Powerful, Shown in St. Louis.

Improvements in appearance, power and performance that bear out the promises of the Chrystler six engineering staff that they would show something new in four-cylinder car performing ability, are outstanding features of five brand-new Maxwells which are being shown in St. Louis by the Ward Motor Co., Inc.

For some time there has been keen interest in the work of the Chrysler engineers on the Maxwell, and these models—a club sedan, a sedan, a coupe, a touring car and a roadster—embody the results of their work. The Chrysler engineers declare these new Maxwells will average 25 miles to the gallon of gasoline, run 58 miles an hour and show even great economies of operation than former models.

Some of the Improvements.

Bodies of all models are lower, with lower running boards. Balloon tires are standard on all models. The nickeled radiator is higher and wider. There is a new instrument board. One-piece windshields are on all closed models. The visors on all enclosed cars are shrouded and integral with the roof, thus eliminating the irritating vibration always encountered at higher speeds with the ordinary type visor on every priced motor car.

Duco is standard finish, except for the sport touring, which retains the gray-green paint shade heretofore used. Open cars and the coupe are finished in Spanish leather upholstery, and special leather also can be had in the club sedan. Appearance of the closed cars, particularly, is enhanced by new body improvements, with the standard sedan an outstanding illustration. The headlights are larger and of improved appearance, while stop lights are standard. All closed cars have watermeters.

Engineering Features.

There are a number of interesting mechanical features. One is installation of the special Chrysler combustion chamber in the engine, this resulting in greater power. The length of the piston skirts has been increased.

The front end of the engine is suspended on a 13-leaf spring, which absorbs vibrations, resulting in surprising smoothness of operation at all speeds. Each cylinder is completely surrounded by water, and all valve seats are water cooled. Force feed lubrication is continued and improved.

Special steering gear for balloon tires has been installed, and the steering wheel has been lowered. An improvement that will be appreciated is the placing of the throttle and spark levers above, instead of underneath, the wheel.

Prices remain as before, with one exception. Only the sedan price is changed, there being a slight increase in view of new body and more and finer equipment.

Getting into Practice.

The long trip can be made far more enjoyable if a little practice in long distance driving is had before starting on the trip. A few 100-mile jaunts during the two weeks prior to a long trip will put you in trim for 200-mile driving better than anything else. The first 100 miles are the hardest and if you can skip over them "just as you did the other day" the trip will not be so fatguing.

The Sunday Motorist

STEADY DRIVING BEST.

GOOD time in touring is more a matter of few delays rather than speed. The man who is constantly passing others and always stepping on the gas invariably takes more time in the long run for the trip because he stops more frequently, sometimes to change a tire that has been injured through speed, sometimes to give the engine certain attention which it needs when it is being run at top speed.

The motorist who drives consistently and constantly, on the other hand, usually gets to his destination first, and without trouble. This is because he knows how important it is not to "wait a minute" when a high average mileage per hour is desired.

He attempts to attend to everything before he starts. He knows that if he is averaging 25 miles an hour, and it becomes necessary to wait by the roadside just two minutes the average is cut down to 24.18. Even if he waited but two minutes it must also be considered that some time is consumed at less than the 25-mile per hour average, due to slowing down and going through the gears in starting off.

Steady driving offers the best opportunity for good time. Figure it out the next time you make a half a dozen stops en route. If you ordinarily drive 30 miles per hour over a state highway and you stop a total of 10 minutes, you have lost the time it takes to travel five miles.

PITHY SUGGESTIONS.

When in "low" or "second," keep the engine pulling the car and do not allow the car to "run" the engine any more than is absolutely necessary, except in descending steep hills. When the engine pulls part of the time and the car pushes the rest, there is wear on both sides of each gear tooth as well as a strain caused by the switch from one side of each gear tooth to the other. This encourages excessive gear wear and noise.

If forced to run into another car or object try, if possible, to hit with the center of your front bumper. The bumper has more "spring" at this point than at any other, which is the same as saying that when struck at this point it is a more efficient guard.

If you want to ride with the rain curtains up, yet need an extra amount of ventilation, as on a hot day, attach them so that the second one from the front overlaps the first and the third overlaps the second. Plenty of air will come in through the openings without letting in the rain, unless one is driving in a downpour. In the customary way of attaching the curtains the overlapping points become airtight as the car travels faster.

DID YOU KNOW——

That if the motometer registers lower than usual on a hot day, the radiator needs water? A motometer will not register so high when the water is not so near it, though it will promptly register danger if the water falls to too low a point. An unusually low motometer reading, therefore, may be an advance warning worth noting.

That you like your old car, not because of its virtues, but because you are used to it? Like an old shoe, it fits in with your way of doing things. Keep in mind that the reason why many a new car does not appeal so strongly is simply because you are not accustomed to it.

JUST FOR A SMILE.

Presumably in an effort to give a little more class to the more common terms in use throughout motordom, a youthful auto salesman insists upon referring to the Bendix drive as the Benedicks drive. He takes lunch with the fellows who sell "coups" and "seedans."

The fellow who invented those motormeter caps that won't come off again until the car is turned upside down ought to make a fortune applying his idea to general merchandising in order to save money at the return desk.

NOW YOU KNOW WHY.

The idea in keeping the crankcase filled with good oil in the case of motors lubricated by the circulating splash system is to insure better quality for every drop of oil that is splashed upon the walls of the cylinders or fed to the bearings. The oil dip pans, or troughs, hold but a comparatively small amount of lubricant so that if there is enough oil to prime the pump the engine will have enough oil to work on even when there are but two or three quarts in the crankcase, but because there is so little oil its quality will be cut to the danger point. Two quarts of oil would heat up so rapidly as to seriously damage the motor. When the case is generously supplied with oil all the lubricant operates at a lower temperature and is thus able to withstand heat and adequately lubricate the motor.

WORTH REMEMBERING.

Do not shellac the cylinder head gasket when replacing the head after grinding in the valves. Use hard oil, or grease. Shellac burns. So does the grease, but the latter leaves a sort of crust that seals the gasket exceptionally well. Use white lead for gaskets and hose connections.

Do not have the tappets adjusted to normal clearance after grinding in the valves. Let them be free to pound down and get properly seated.

A straight side tire can be removed from a rim with much less exertion if the motorist will first loose the bead of the tire thoroughly before unlocking the rim. If the bead is allowed to stick to the rim much difficulty will be encountered.

Jack up the front wheels when lubricating the steering bolts. This takes the weight of the car off the bearings and gives quicker results are had than oiling or greasing.

NUMBER OF CLASS 'B' STATIONS INCREASING

Sixty-four Now in Operation and Many of Other Classes Expected to Transfer.

Although the general plan of allotting new class "B" wave lengths is progressing favorably, and supervisors in Seattle and Baltimore have reported the allocations made as satisfactory, radio attaches of the Departemnt of Commerce are still perplexed by the growing number of class "B" applications and the available channels for this type of broadcasting station.

The licensing of station WREO of the Reo Motor Car Co. at Lansing, Mich., brought the total "B" stations operating to 64. Sixteen existing stations in classes "A" and "C" are expecting to transfer to class "B," and 17 other new stations are under construction or their erection is proposed. This would make 97 class "B" stations, for which there are now available less than 60 channels, including the duplication of 10 channels on the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. It is seen that although the conference laid out a program of wave-length allocation, the application of it is difficult indeed.

Progress and co-operation, however, are reported from the Seventh District, which includes the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Wyoming, where Supervisor O. R. Redfern, at Seattle, indicates an amicable acceptance of the three major wave lengths assigned tenatively. Seattle will have the 405 meter channel; Portland, 508 meters, and Pullman, Wash., 349. The allocation provides a separate channel for each of the three class "B" stations in that district. In some of the districts where there is congestion, negotiations with the station owners is less promising. In the first, or New England area, for example, Boston is appealing for two exclusive channels, and about 2000 telegrams have been received by Secretary Hoover, claiming that Boston needs two separate wave lengths. The two Boston stations cannot be considered alone by the Radio Supervisor, simply because there are Class "B" stations in South Dartmouth, Springfield, Hartford, and two in Providence, a total of seven "B" stations in the district, whereas he has a maximum number of separate wave lengths of four. Before the conference this district had but two "B" channels, and if four are assigned, as now planned, it is difficult to se how Boston could justly claim two of them.

Another district difficult to cludes New York City and its environs, where 11 "B" stations are situated. Two more are proposed in New York; one for the Freed Eiseman Co., the other a prominent hotel. Chicago has nearly as many Class "B" stations as New York, and a satisfactory distribution there, with the necessary time splitting, is causing delays.

On the Pacific Coast fewer difficulties are arising. The Northwest is satisfied and reports of co-operation from broadcasters in the Southwest are expected very soon at radio headquarters in Washington.

Of the 14 cities planning or constructing new Class "B" stations, there are informal bids from New York and Chicago for two such stations; also two from Nashville, Tenn., and one each from Hartford, Tucson, Hot Springs, Denver, Atlantic City, Houston, New Orleans, Beaumont, Bay City, Mich.; Bristow, Ok.; and Fayettville, Ark.; a total of 17. Rumors indicate still other stations are contemplated.

Eight Class "A" stations operating in East Lansing, Pittsburg, Boston, Providence, Beloit, Wis.; Auburn, Ala.; Elgin, Ill., and Mooseheart, Ill., are planning to request transfers to a Class "B" status. Eight of the Class "C" stations will probably apply for transfers to Class "B" wave lengths as follows: Providence, Houston, Madison, Columbus, South Bend, South Dartmouth, Northfield, Minn., and Norman, Ok.

Under the old plan, which of course, is still in operation, out of 60 Class "B" stations, 36 had to divide time on wave lengths, and it is now believed that about 66 of the present and proposed stations will have to divide time or share wave lengths when the new distribution becomes effective. This, however, will be arranged so as to give each station its proportionate share of time and the fans the best possible service and programs.

Radiograms.

England has issued 1,000,000 licenses for broadcast reception.

The slogan adopted by Station 6KW, Tuinucu, Cuba, is: "If you hear the coo of the cuckoo you are in tune with Tuinucu.

Vienna has 15,000 radio listeners who have received permission to install radio sets in their homes. A tax ranging from $3 to $11 must be paid annually, according to the income of the owner of the set.

Midshipmen of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis have to take up radio and pass a thorough examination before graduation. One of the requirements is to build a workable receiver.

The first transatlantic radio chess-match will take place this month between Haverford College and Oxford University, England. This contest will be conducted through the college broadcasting station, 3BVN, and the British private station, G-2NM.

The frying sound in a set is sometimes due to deterioration of the "B" battery.

It is poor policy to tear a manufactured set apart just because it does not work. Batteries may be incorrectly connected or the aerial and ground systems may be faulty.

HOT SPRINGS STATION TO GO ON AIR IN DECEMBER

New Arlington Hotel Expected to Operate on Class "B" License.

The new broadcasting station of the new Arlington Hotel, at Hot Springs, Ark., is expected to go on the air soon after Dec. 15. This station is being equipped with a Western Electric 500-watt transmitter and will apply for a Class "B" license.

Its director wil be G. C. Arnoux, who for over two years has been program director, radio editor and chief announcer for WBAP at Fort Worth, Tex. The Fort Worth Star-Telegram station will be directed by W. E. Branch, formerly the technician. E. L. Olds, who has been operator of this station, will become radio editor of the Star-Telegram, when Mr. Arnoux goes to Hot Springs.

For the Notebook.

Tubes and batteries are about all that wear out in a set.

Porcelain insulators of the corrugated type are best for use on aerials.

When rope is used as guys for the aerial it should be slacked out during rainy weather.

Never use oil on any working part of a set, as the oil will attract dust and will cause leakage of the high-frequency current.

The ideal length of antenna for reception of broadcasting stations is about 100 feet. An increase in the size of the antenna would impare its selectivity.

Care of Headphones.

Never remove the caps from headphones. This is decidedly harmful to the receiver; that is, it impairs the efficiency of the units for the following reason: When the phones are tested in the factory the receiver caps are tightened until the pressure upon the diaphragm is just right. This test is made with delicate instruments.

Large Dials Best.

Three-inch dials are about as small as will afford suitable grip for operating, and four-inch dials are better. Even a three and one-half inch is better than the smaller size. If small dials are used, however, the principal tuning control ought to have a large dial and knob. Fine adjustment is impossible with a tiny knob.

Soldering Flux.

An excellent soldering flux may be made by dissolving one ounce of resin in one ounce of alcohol. This mixture should be kept in a bottle with a tight-fitting cork. After soldering a joint, wipe off excess soldering flux with a rag dipped in alcohol.

FIVE-TUBE SUPERFLEX MAY BE EASILY MADE

Reflex Receiver Combines Great Volume With Unusual Selectivity.

The reflex type of receiver is daily gaining in favor with all classes of listeners. The user of a reflex circuit is enthusiastic on account of the beautiful tone quality and absence of distortion. The next-door neighbor is in favor of the reflex due to the fact that it does not cause squeals and howls in his set.

In the reflex type of receiver the crystal is used to change the current from radio to audio frequency. Up to the present time no rectifier of current has been found that can equal the crystal for clearness and faithfulness of reproduction. This accounts for a great deal of the quality of the reflex receiver. The crystal further prevents any feedback of oscillation to the aerial that might cause interference with nearby sets.

The Erla duo-reflex with a stage of push pull amplification makes a reflex receiver that has sufficient volume and power to bring in distant stations on a loud speaker, and selective enough to cut through local stations. The receiver has but two controls, one for wave length and the other for volume. This makes it easier to handle than sets having three tuning dials to adjust. The circuit can be logged.

The 23-plate variable condenser for tuning is placed across the selectoformer, the fixed coupler that replaces the usual variocoupler or variometer in other circuits. In this way the troublesome taps and switch levers and the extra control dial are eliminated. The apparatus needed for this circuit is as follows:

2 audio frequency transformers, 3½ to 1 ratio
1—input push pull transformer
1—output push pull transformer
1—selectoformer
1—No. 1 reflex transformer
1—No. 2 reflex transformer
1—fixed crystal
1—.00025 Mfd. variable condenser
1—.0005 Mfd. variable condenser
1—.001 Mfd., 1—.002 Mfd., and 1—.00025 Mfd. fixed Mica condensers
5—sockets
Rheostats—25 ohms each for "A" tubes.
"B" battery 90 to 135 volts.
"C" battery of from 4½ to 9 volts.
'A" battery
Loudspeaker

Mount the apparatus as shown in the diagram. Place the condensers, rheostats, jacks and switch on the front panel. The two binding post strips should be mounted at the rear of the baseboard, so that holes can be drilled through the rear of the cabinet for the battery wires.

Place the first three sockets in line with the panel in about the middle of the baseboard. Place the selectoformer and the two radio frequency transformers in line to the left and just behind the sockets. Make all connections as short and direct as possible. In making connections to the fixed condensers you should use small machine screws and nuts to avoid changing the capacity by the heat of the soldering iron.

The crystal detector attaches directly to the binding post of the first audio frequency transformer.

Experiment with the value of the fixed condenser placed across the secondary of the first audio frequency transformer. Try values from .0001 to .00025 Mfd. Leave the condenser that works best in the circuit and no further changes need to be made.

Beware "Cut-Rate" Batteries.

Many times a dealer may have a stock of old batteries, which will show the rated voltage, but are nevertheless shy of the necessary amperage. These batteries he must disposed of, and to sell them quickly he cuts, or rather slashes the price. It is always better policy to buy batteries of a legitimate make at a fair price than to try to save a few cents and get something that will last for only a fraction of the time that is expected.

RADIO POPULAR WITH FARMERS

More Than 370,000 Sets in Use, According to Government Estimate.

More than 370,000 radio sets are in use on farms, according to a survey made by the Department of Agriculture. A year ago there were only 145,000.

The department's radio market news service has been developed during the past three years until now it is possible for farmers throughout the country to receive daily market quotations and agricultural reports by radio.

Noncorrosive Flux.

Celluloid dissolved in acetone makes a very good binder for radio work. It should be used in place of shellac, collodion, etc. Rosin dissolved in rubbing alcohol, with a couple of drops of glycerin, makes an absolutely noncorrosive flux. A drop on a piece of wire suffices for most joints and makes a neat and noiseless job.

PROJECT DEVISED TO LESSEN INTERFERENCE

Standardizing of Frequencies Is Plan of Bureau of Standards.

The Bureau of Standards has devised a method, after months of experimenting, of standardizing the frequency of radio waves. Since the success of the project means lessened interference between broadcasting stations, it is attracting great interest among manufacturers, broadcasters and fans.

One of the chief worries of the Radio Bureau of the Department of Commerce, the Bureau of Standards and broadcasting stations is the interference between stations. To avoid this, the Radio Bureau separates broadcasting stations by a large band of frequencies. For instance, stations in the same zone are placed 50 frequencies apart, stations in adjoining 20 and those in separated zones by 10.

Through its experiments, the Bureau of Standards has recently increased the accuracy of its standard of radio frequency. The standard has been established by methods which cover a wide range of frequencies and which give the desired accuracy. One of the methods is based on the use of very short waves, the length of which is directly measured on a system of parallel wires. The standard wavemeter may be compared with the frequencies of these short waves by means of the harmonics from a local generating set.

A similar procedure was used in the earliest days of radio. There are, however, three essential differences between the parallel wire system employed by the Bureau of Standards and the classical two-wire system, namely: (a) The high-frequency voltages are impressed on the wires instead of being caused by discharges originating on the wires; (b) they are sustained instead of being damped; and (c) a current indicating instrument is used instead of a device for measuring voltage.

Interference of All Kinds Being Reduced

Various Forms Being Eliminated With Great Success, According to Dr. Dellinger.

Interference, which has kept many potential fans from accepting radio seriously, is gradually being eliminated, according to Dr. J. H. Dellinger of the Bureau of Standards. Fans who suffer from local interference have learned how to avoid it by using a selective receiving set, a short aerial instead of a long one, a loop antenna, when the design of the receiver permits, or hooking in of a wave trap. On the other hand, there are still some listeners-in so behind the times as to wonder why they cannot separate two broadcasting stations when they have nothing but a fixed crystal set. Washington broadcast listeners whose crystal sets were equipped with a simple tuner, found little difficulty in getting either WRC or WCAP during the recent simultaneous tests on separate wave lengths. Obviously the development of the radio art, in up to the engineers; it is dependent to a considerable extent on the fans themselves, who must keep posted on developments and make their sets as selective as possible.

"There is no simple cure-all for radio interference," Dr. Dellinger declares. Both natural and "man-made interference" must be coped with, and the former is found the more difficult to overcome. Nevertheless, this brilliant radio research worker is confident that the ether will gradually be cleared of impediments, or, that these difficulties will be overcome by scientific progress, and that "radio will go on developing to new triumphs and greater service." Dr. Dellinger points out that interference arises from many causes. Vast effort is being made to analyze these causes and to apply remedies. In a recent discussion he said in part:

"The radio apparatus first used produced waves of very broad tuning, so that it was very difficult to tune out other waves. Improvement in tuning has gone steadily on, until we have now about reached the limit of improvement in that direction—a fact which is not commonly realized.

There are also other sources of interference, in the reduction of which we are fast approaching the limit attainable. One is atmospheric electrical disturbances, both natural and artificial, which always exist in greater or less intensity and are particularly troublesome in the summer and in certain places. The radio public is going to have to learn to distinguish between removable interference and inevitable interference. Science will find ways to circumvent those sources of interference which science cannot remove. The slight electrical discharges always going on in the atmosphere, similar to very, tiny lightning discharges, cause a certain background of noise in a radio receiving set, and these discharges can probably never be prevented any more than variations of weather can be prevented. They are a sort of natural limit to what a receiving set can do, for if the waves from a distant station are weaker than the average of these atmospheric disturbances, no increase of amplification in the receiving set can bring in the distant station without the interference.

For the growing radio public, which demands real service and quality in the radio programs, this situation means that there are definite limits to the distance from a broadcast station at which satisfactory reception is possible. To increase that distance, higher power must be used in the broadcasting stations. This is now recognized, and there will be increases in the power of many of the stations. Considerable fear had been expressed that the use of high power, while of obvious benefit to the farmers and others remote from the stations, would make it harder for city dwellers to tune out the nearest station when they wished to receive others. This fear will not be realized if the stations of higher and higher power are located farther and farther away from centers of population. Reception conditions then will be better for city dwellers than at present, when the principal stations are located in the very midst of the cities.

To deal effectively with the various sources of interference, it is important that there be exact knowledge of their prevalence. Some information of this kind is available as a result of observations carried on by the Bureau of Standards during the past two years with the co-operation of about 200 voluntary observers, located up to 400 miles from two selected broadcasting stations. Preliminary results show the following averages for all observers; first, no interference, 23 per cent of the time when reception was attempted; interference from other broadcast stations, 32 per cent; atmospheric disturbances, 18 per cent; fading or irregular variation of intensity of received signal, 13 per cent; amateur transmitting stations, 6 per cent; radiating receiving sets, 5 per cent; commercial radio telegraph stations, 2 per cent, and nonradio electrical interference, 1 per cent. More complete results will show decreases in the percentages for the causes under the control of man, and corresponding increases in the percentages from atmospheric disturbances and fading. The man-made interference of the various types is of local character, some types of it being confined to very small areas around the source.

The source of largest interference, that from other broadcast stations, will soon be still further reduced as a result of the new assignments of wave lengths made by the conference. The broadcasting stations are distributed through a somewhat wider range of frequencies, and the removal of ship radio communications from the broadcast range. Broadcast stations in different localities are kept from interfering by working on different frequencies. Some interference results from slight variations from the assigned frequencies, but there is marked improvement in the accuracy with which these frequencies are held.

Interference from amateurs and commercial radio telegraph stations has been steadily decreasing, partly because of closer attention to staying within the assigned frequencies, and partly because of rapidly increasing use of the continuous-wave system, which produces much less interference than the old spark apparatus.

Interference from radiating receiving sets is growing less of a problem than it was. Manufacturers are more inclined to limit their efforts to sell radiating sets to the rural districts, where such sets cause no trouble. The listeners are learning how to operate regenerative sets so as to produce little or no radiation. As a result, interference of this type is now largely confined to congested city districts, particularly in apartment houses, in the reception of distant stations. Progress in receiving set design will continue to reduce this annoyance.

A campaign is now on to reduce interference from non-radio electrical apparatus. Such interference arises from electric power lines, faulty insulators, violet-ray machines, sparking commutators and sometimes from domestic devices. Means of reducing such interference by shunting condensers, electrical filters, etc., either at the source of interference, or at the receiving set, are being worked out. Some of these electrical causes of interference are, like atmospheric disturbances, part of the omnipresent background of slight electrical discharges which necessarily drown out signals below a certain intensity and set up a definite limit on reception from distant stations.

MANY SMALL DEVICES WILL BE SEEN AT CHICAGO SHOW

Smallest Radio Appliances in the World to Be on Exhibition Next Week.

One of the many unusually interesting features at the Third Annual Chicago Radio Show, which opens in the Coliseum at 1 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 18, and continues until midnight Sunday, Nov. 23, will be a collection of the smallest workable radio devices in the world.

Some of the tiny receiving sets are built on the lines of the old open style apparatus, while others are mounted on diminutive panels which are in turn fastened upon little cabinets. None weigh over an ounce, but radio broadcasting can actually be received on all of them. In fact, workability is one of the requirements for admission to the "Miniature Model Exhibit."

One receiver, for instance, about the size of a small marble, has a perfect little tuning coil, a crystal detector and two switches which touch minute contact points on a Lilliputian panel. This set was built by Mrs. Edith Bornemann of Bethany, Neb. Another even smaller, built by T. L. Cranston of Toronto, Canada, has a flat wound coil and is incased in ivory.

There is a perfect telephone receiver built by E. Dickey of Dayton, O., among the models, that is considerably smaller than a shoe-button. There is also a wonderful miniature loud speaker weighing only a few pennyweights made of solid gold, the work of Ivan T. Nedland of Hillsboro, N. D., that actually speaks. Its magnets are wound with wire so fine that if a single strand were stretched out on a table it would hardly be visible to the naked eye.

A battery cell not a half inch high, made by Patsy Cordi of Derry, Pa., actually gives current that can be measured by suitable instruments.

The FANSTEEL Balkite Battery Charger
cannot discharge, short circuit or damage the battery by overcharging
The Balkite Battery Charger is entirely noiseless. It can be used while the radio set is in use. It does not create disturbances in either your set or your neighbor's. It has no moving parts, vibrators or bulbs, and has nothing to break, adjust or get out of order. It is simple and unfailing in operation. Besides charging "A" batteries it will also charge "B" batteries of the lead type in multiples of 6 cells. Sold by all leading radio dealers.

In the RADIO LABORATORY

This column is a regular feature of the Sunday Post-Dispatch. In it will be found reports of tests conducted with standard manufacturers' parts and sets and appliances which have been submitted to the laboratory for examination.

Apparatus tested during the past week consisted of the following:

Day-Fan OEM four-tube receiver.

Paragon type two receiver.

DAY-FAN RECEIVER.

THE model OEM Day-Fan receiver employs a circuit somewhat different from the average receiver in that separate and distinct paths are provided in the plate circuit of the amplifier tubes for the radio and audio frequency currents. This principle of separating radio frequency from direct current, or audio frequency, is not new. It has been used in transmitting sets since the early days of the use of the vacuum tube, but it is new in the receiving set field and, according to the builders of this receiver, this application has never before been made.

The dual frequency path in the Day-Fan OEM Circuit is accomplished by the use of the blocking condenser and choke coil principle. The choke coil will not permit the passage of radio frequency, while the condenser obstructs the flow of the low frequency audio currents. By the use of this principle, therefore, the two frequencies of current are forced to follow entirely separate paths.

The result of this new method is a receiver which is selective to the nth degree. The outstanding feature of the set, however, is the fact that the dials can be set according to the chart which accompanies the receiver, and with practically any outdoor or indoor aerial, the desired station will be heard—provided atmospheric conditions are favorable and an efficient ground connection is made.

This unusual feature is due to the incorporation in the set of a "selector coil" which provides compensation for varying lengths and heights of aerials to which the set may be attached.

The writer used three "A" tubes and one UV-200 tube. Separate rheostats are provided for the amplifier and detector tubes, which is believed by many to be a great advantage, particularly in selective tuning.

The set was tried with both indoor and outdoor aerials and one station after another came in with excellent loud speaker volume in both cases. With each slight change of the tuning controls, there was a corresponding change from one station to another. Excellent results were had, particularly when the indoor antenna was used.

Another feature of the Day-Fan receptor is the fact that the four-tube set consumes only nine milliamperes of "B" battery current with normal tubes and this consumption is one-half to one-fifth of that found in other sets. This characteristic means a much longer life for "B" batteries, a point which concerns every fan using a multi-tube receiver.

PARAGON TWO-RECEIVER.

The Paragon Type Two-Receiver employs two tubes, having a detector and one stage of audio frequency amplification. Satisfactory results may be had using either WD-12, UV-199 or UV-201-A tubes.

The outstanding feature of the set is the fact that it has only one major dial control for tuning. This makes the set particularly desirable for those who prefer the utmost simplicity in a receiver. The variable condenser controlled by this dial is of the "straight-line" type and, during the tests, it was found that stations were equally spaced throughout its entire scale. No difficulty was had in tuning out nearby broadcasters and the volume was sufficient to operate a loud speaker when listening to local stations, although for East coast stations as well as others equally distant it was necessary to use the headphones.

Both indoor and outdoor aerials were tried and it was found that best results were obtained when the latter was employed.

IDO, NEW COMPOSITE LANGUAGE, ADVOCATED

"Most Perfect" for Universal Use, Says John Carroll University Instructor.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 15.—A new universal language, Ido, which he terms "the most perfect language in existence," is being advocated by the Rev. F. L. Odenbach, seismograph observer of John Carroll University here.

Speaking recently of Ido, Father Odenbach said: "The telephone and radio have brought the peoples of this earth within speaking distance, but the scenes enacted are suggestive of what must have happened at the Tower of Babel. The remedy, however, is in Ido, a language which may be learned at home in a few months. The salient features of this new and perfect vehicle of thought follow: The alphabet is the English one, with a single sound for each letter, the spelling is absolutely phonetic; every word has but one invariable meaning.

"The accent is governed by a single rule: The infinitive form has the accent on the last syllable; all other words of more than one syllable on the last but one.

"There are but 20 grammatical endings to be learned by heart. All nouns end in "O," all adjectives in "A," and all adverbs in "E," the rest are used for the conjugation of the verb.

"A dictionary of 10,000 roots, with about 75 suffixes, forms the material of this auxiliary language. The Ido dictionary thus puts at our disposal some 30,000 words, twice as many as Shakspeare used.

"Since the roots were all chosen from the living cultured languages. Americans and the English will recognize 79 per cent of the words at first sight; the Germans 61 per cent, the French 91 per cent and Spaniards 79 per cent. There are no exceptions in its grammar."

Repairing Panels.

Sealing wax will restore an old panel that has been bored with many holes. Obtain some sealing wax the same color as the panel. Then lay the panel down on a smooth surface and heat the wax over the holes to be filled. When each hole has been filled to the top with the wax, go over the entire surface of the panel with fine sandpaper, rubbing in one direction only. The finished product will not show the covered holes and will closely resemble the factory-grained product.

SHIPS LOSE 300 AND 450 METER WAVE BAND

Old 600 Meter Wave Now to Be Used Only for Calling and Distress Signals.

Department of Commerce [illegible] Supervisors have been advised by the Commissioner of Navigation that ships may no longer operate on the 300 and 450 meter wave lengths, in accordance with the recommendations of the Third International Radio Conference. The Marine Service, however, is permitted to send and receive radio signals on some new short waves assigned mobile stations, between 100 and 120 meters. The old 600 meter wave is now to be used for calling and distress signals only. Traffic may be conducted on 706 and 1,000 meters, radio compass service operates on 800 and coast radio beacons on 1000 meters. ICW and CW spark transmitters may operate on 600, 706, 800 and 875 meters, the new regulations state. This will considerably in clearing the broadcast bands of interference from ships.

Owners and operators of ships sailing under the American flag are reported as taking steps to place in immediate effect the recommendations of the Radio Conference with reference to improving communications at sea. Merchant Marine skippers, including Captains of the vessels of the U. S. Fleet Corporation, are readjusting their transmitters to handle all traffic and "distress messages," on the new wave lengths assigned.

Efforts are also being made to keep decrement to a minimum. The law sets the permitted decrement at 0.2, but the recent conference recommended that it be reduced to 0.14, and before six months it is hoped by the Merchant Marine that it may be reduced further to 0.1. This action will tend to eliminate interference ashore as well as at sea and reduce complaints of broadcast reception along the coasts and especially at American ports.

Ship owners have also made an earnest effort to bring spark emissions to a point of favorable comparison with ICW transmitters. This has been accomplished partly by the reduction of the decrement and the employment of single-wire ship's antenna. Many ship owners cannot afford to install tube sets but they are hopeful of improving their spark so as to eliminate the constant complaints of fans, some of whom fail to realize that radio transmission is the only method of communication available between ships and shore stations. Although ships were first to accept radio as a practical means of communication, a method which soon became compulsory by law, they are now blamed for using it at all by some intolerant radio fans who are convinced that broadcasting is the only essential for mof radio communication.

Avoid Sharp Bends.

A sharp bend in a wire not only offers a good point for energy to be radiated but it may also change the resistance of the wire. All wires should be led directly to the proper terminal without bending, if possible. Where it is necessary to bend a wire at right angles, use round-nose pliers or some other tool to make the curve a large one.

How to Become a Genuine "Amateur."

THE term amateur is used frequently in radio columns in many different ways. This is most confusing to the new radio fan who attempts to be educated by reading the many radio supplements. The writer has often-times observed the word amateur placed in such a manner that most any fan would be puzzled as to the true meaning of this phrase.

The word amateur is at present used for the broadcast listener and the transmitting amateur, who, by the way, have an additional term applied to them, which is the word "Ham." This latter term is used by many writers, but there are others who refer to both classes as amateurs.

Many persons who have been interested in radio for only a few months refer to themselves as amateurs. There is no doubt but what they are amateurs in a sense, but it would be much better to refer to this class as Broadcast Listeners, leaving the term amateur to be applied to the person who is interested in transmitting.

The amateur, or the "old-timer," as he is known, is becoming particular about the name applied to him. If you called him a listener, he would no doubt give you a call for using that term in connection with him. The term old-timer is generally used in reference to persons who had transmitting stations before the war.

It is a well known fact that the amateur has sufficient knowledge to pick out the good and the bad among the radio apparatus. If the new fan will consult one of these old-timers, he will do well, as the true amateur will always give him the best advice. The reason for this may be that he himself had to wade through the early stages of wireless without any assistance.

You may ask: "How can I become an amateur?" This is not answered in a moment's time. The first qualification of an amateur is to have grit and plenty of perseverence. He will need these characteristics if he is to study for license qualification. I mention study. This word is truly spoken here. The prospective operator will need plenty of time if he is to conquer the code and the questions which the radio inspectors will ask him when being examined at the Custom House.

But you can sum up the requirements when you say that a working knowledge of the code (at least ten words per minute) and some knowledge of transmitters and receivers will be necessary for the man who wishes to have an amateur license.

If you intend to be a "transmitting amateur," join a radio club and begin the study of the code. You will find this interesting and at the same time it will brighten up the brain, as it requires quick and accurate thinking to be a good operator. When you attend the club meetings ask plenty of intelligent questions. The less you appear to know the more you will learn, as the hams will then endeavor to start you right.

The strangest part of the BCL type of radio fan is that he generally thinks that the amateur is a small boy in knee trousers. He does not know that lawyers, doctors—by the way, there are over 200 doctors that have transmitting licenses—brokers and many millionaires have become interested in the transmitting game. The best part of it all is that a poor man may converse with a rich man without a thought to his status in society. I have oftentimes witnessed a very wealthy man trying to meet his friend on the air who may have worked for his next-door neighbor. The amateurs are probably the most democratic individuals in the United States.

Amateurs Tell of Working Shenandoah During Trip.

Among the amateur stations in the vicinity of Tucson, Ariz., which gave valuable service in communicating with the Shenandoah during its transcontinental flight was that of the University of Arizona, 6YB, operated by Oliver Wright and six other student operators with the assistance of Professor Cloke, head of the Department of Electrical Engineering. Immediately upon receiving word from the American Radio Relay League that amateurs were needed to keep the big airship in contact with the ground, preparations were made to have the university radio station in readiness for any emergency that might arise.

By the time that the dirigible was hovering in the vicinity of the Tucson mountains 6YB had been twice rebuilt and the antenna system arranged for the reception of short waves. Wright had been in touch with NKF, the station of the Naval Radio Research Laboratory at Bellevue, D. C., and had picked up an official message which the Navy Department wished to have forwarded to the Shenandoah. The crew of the airship as it approached Tucson were uncertain as to their location and were pleased when radio contact was made with the university station and information desired was received.

"The first time that the Shenandoah was copied at this station," said Wright, "she was a little more than 100 miles east of Fort Worth on the way west. We heard her very nicely on the loud speaker at 4:05 p. m., while she was working 5HW. The sun was still high. At 4:40 a. m. the airship's operator told 6BUR that her location was five miles east of Benson, Ariz., but as a matter of fact she was passing over Dragoon, Ariz., about 20 miles east. Then, when Benson was sighted it could not be accounted for, and the operator called us for check. The Southern Pacific Telegraph Co. reported them over Benson at 5:20 a. m. You see, it was not anything serious, but we helped to get the bearings for sure.

"We rigged up a blinker to work her, but the sun came up as she passed over, so we had no need for it. The operator told us the crew had seen it while the ship was 20 miles east of Tucson. When she got right over us the operator complained our transmitter blocked the set so, upon his request, we hooked a microphone in the ground. When the ship returned over Arizona, we did not have such good luck with our communication. We raised the operator when the ship was 120 miles northwest of us, but the long wave transmitter was going and he could not copy us very well.

"We heard NKF calling her all the evening and 5ZA had a message for her, so we rigged another blinker on the roof of the building, using an automobile spotlight which was pointed to the sky. We didn't see her until she was about two miles away as the running lights were the same brightness as the stars."

The service given the Shenandoah by this group of students was typical of the spirit and enthusiasm in which amateurs in the South and West took advantage of the opportunity offered to co-operate with the Navy Department by their radio contact with the airship. At Dayton, Ore., H. Louis, operator of amateur station 7EO received 800 words of press from the ship which appeared in newspapers all over the country the following morning. L. Eldon Smith and W. S. Wiggins, joint operators of station 6BUR at Los Nietos Cal., forwarded two messages from the Navy Department, while scores of others heard the Shenandoah copied dozens of messages and were otherwise prepared to give their help.

Night School Radio Classes in Session

Every radio enthusiast interested in learning more about the science is invited to attend the night-school radio classes on Monday and Wednesday evenings at Soldan High School, from 7:30 to 9:30. The tuition is free and the classes are taught by a competent instructor. There is a special class for the instruction of those who desire to learn the Continental Morse code, and another class in the theory and practice of radio.

Club Holds Installation.

The annual dinner and installation of officers of the St. Louis Radio Association took place at the Claridge Hotel, Friday evening, Nov. 7.

The next meeing will be held at 8 p. m., Friday, Nov. 21, at the Claridge Hotel. Everyone interested in radio is invited to attend.

Use Care With Tubes.

Never take the tubes out of the sockets any more than is necessary. Many tubes have been injured by rough usage. The tube will not stand the rough treatment given them by many fans. The tips are sometimes broken and thus make poor contacts.

NEW ARRIVALS ON THE RADIO MART

THE constant effort of radio engineers to produce precision instruments that will make receiving sets selective, simple of operation and satisfactory in results has brought forth a multitude of devices designed to assure perfect tuning. Prominent among these is a vernier variable condenser that has been placed on the market by the Joseph W. Jones Radio Manufacturing Co.

The Jones condenser is made of aluminum, with the stator plates thoroughly insulated from the base plate, with hard rubber bushings of suitable area used as the dialectric. Both sets of plates are spaced with precision washers under heavy pressure, thus assuring minimum internal resistance. The rotor plates are grounded on the base, thus preventing body capacity. They are supported on hardened and ground steel shafts which rotate in a long bearing, with a large brass thrust washer, which assures even rotation, positive contact and the maintaining of adjustment in any position.

The vernier attachment is a striking point. It consists of a small knob beside the main knob, and which turns an eccentric cam. A steel fork is placed around the cam and is connected with the rotor, so that when the knob is turned the action of the plates is backward and forward over a small arc, thus assuring the peak of fine tuning, considering that almost the ultimate result may be obtained through the use of the main knob.

The condenser is completely encased in a dust-proof aluminum case, with the binding posts outside. This keeps dust and moisture off the plates. Moreover, the condenser is provided with a threaded bushing and lock nut for single-hole panel mounting, if so desired, though the top of the case is an enameled dial, carefully graduated, so that the instrument may be used in a table mounting if desired, or as a wave trap condenser.

Each Jones condenser is tested to 500 volts, has a straight line capacity curve, and a phase angle difference of less than one minute at 500,000 cycles. They come in various capacities, including an 11-plate type, suitable for neutrodyne circuits, and having a mounting for an air core transformer.

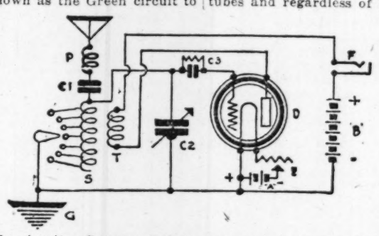
The Rathbun variable condensers are unique, inasmuch as they require but one hole for panel mounting. Single hole mounting eliminates tension strain on the plates, insures shaft at right angles to panel allowing dials to run true. The end plates of this condenser are full round discs adding rigidity and protecting the plates in all positions. A split bronze contact spring grips the shaft around the entire diamater, insures positive contact and noiseless action. The condenser is made in all sizes.

The new Bremer-Tully Lifetime condenser is said to have all the essential features of condenser perfection. A two step adjustable thrust type lubricated bearing which can be adjusted without changing the alignment of any of the plates. A special designed cut away and plate, reduces capacity effects. A pigtailed rotor, exclusive design of die cast rotor and statoc plates give positive contact and minimum resistance. The condenser is made in all sizes.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

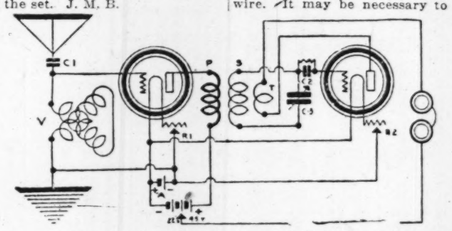
The Post-Dispatch Radio Department cannot undertake to answer questions by mail.

Q. Enclosed please find a diagram of the circuit which I am using. I desire to change this circuit known as the Green circuit to a Hardy circuit. Can you supply me with the necessary diagram and advise me if I can use the same tube and rheostat in this new circuit? L. M.



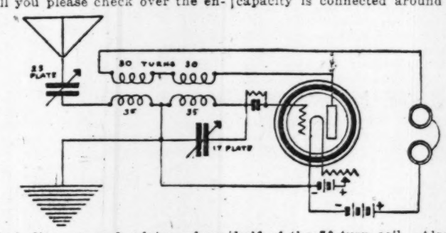
A. Changing the circuit does not mean that you will have to change your rheostat. You are using "A" tubes and regardless of the circuit you may use, the rheostat resistance should always be the same. A diagram of the Hardy circuit is shown above.

Q. Is it possible to arrange a circuit so as to obtain radio frequency and regenerative amplification on the idea of a single circuit receiver? If so, please show the hook-up with the necessary information for building the set. J. M. B.



A. Yes, it is possible to construct a circuit but this combination is usually found difficult to control. In the diagram above P. S. T. indicates a specially designed radio frequency tuner. It is made from a specially reconstructed variocoupler. The rotor and stator of the coupler remain unchanged, but a coil is wound over the secondary changed, provided the primary or stator contains approximately 40 turns of wire and the secondary or rotor some 35 turns. Over the primary coil wind 12 turns of No. 20 wire. It may be necessary to experiment with the amount of wire in the tickler to determine the proper number of turns in order to get the break over the point on all wave lengths. The condenser C1 may be of .0001 mfd. capacity, C2 of .00025 mfd. and C3, the usual .0005 mfd.

Q. I have tried to get the S. X. circuit to work but have failed thus far. All I can hear is the click when I connect in the telephones. Will you please check over the enclosed diagram and advise where my trouble might be? I am sure the WD-12 tube I have is allright as I have had it tested in another set. J. E.

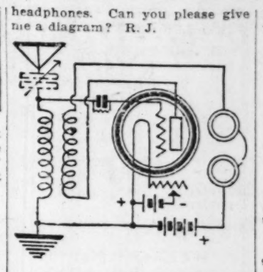


A. You have the number of turns on the specially wound coils correct, but they are wired up wrong. You will note from the diagram that the smaller variable capacity is connected around one-half of the 70-turn coil. Also the plate is connected to the opposite coil insead of to the same one around which he condenser is shunted. The correct diagram is shown above.

Q. Referring to your article in the Radio Guide dealing with the construction of a wave-meter, I would like to ask the following questions: Instead of using a .001 mfd. variable condenser, can the UV-1819 condenser manufactured by the Radio Corporation be substituted? H. W. K.

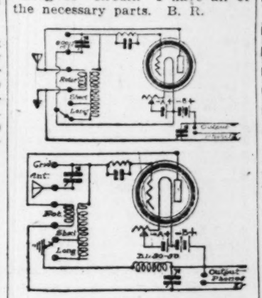
A. The condenser you refer to does not easily lend itself to portable work, the low-loss type. A wave meter is an instrument whose position is often changed and this shifting is bound to cause a change in capacity which will affect the accuracy of the readings. This condenser is, however, of the low-loss type.

Q. I have the following radio apparatus from which I would like to construct a set. One Shamrock coupler, one .00025 mfd. fixed condenser, one WD-12 tube, two Red Seal batteries, one 6-ohm rheostat, one socket and a pair of Brandes headphones. Can you please give me a diagram? R. J.



A. The diagram which we are showing indicates a variable condenser in the antenna circuit which is optional. If you have a long antenna you may find this condenser necessary in tuning in on the shorter wave lengths. The diagram appears above.

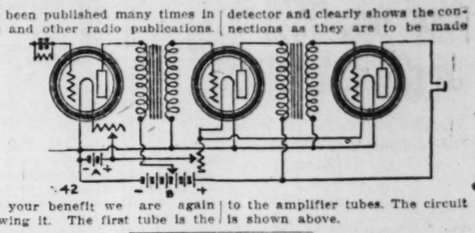
Q. I am very much in need of a hook-up and am asking you to print the detector unit of the "Long 45" circuit. I have all of the necessary parts. B. R.



A. There are many variations of the circular you request. We are therefore showing the two most important. The first shows a regulation tickler in the plate circuit and the second shows this same tickler being used as the primary inductance. The two diagrams are shown herewith.

Q. Some time ago I requested a diagram of a two-stage audio frequency amplifier which could be connected to my present set. Up to date I have not seen this diagram published. M. C.

A. The diagram you requested has been published many times in this and other radio publications.



For your benefit we are again showing it. The first tube is the detector and clearly shows the connections as they are to be made to the amplifier tubes. The circuit is shown above.

Q. I have a 105-ampere Exide storage battery and an Apco charger, both of which are new. The highest the battery will charge is 1270, no matter how long I leave it on charge, which has been up to 30 hours, although it will charge to 1270 usually in about 10 hours. What is the matter with it? One cell is alway about 10 per cent lower than the other two, what is the cause of this? L. E. S.

A. It is quite likely that the acid is weak in your battery. If the acid is of the proper strength it should read 1300 when fully charged. It may be that some of the acid has been spilled out and the continuous adding of distilled water has weakened it still more. As for the one cell whose specific gravity reads 10 per cent lower than the other two, it is very possible that this particular cell lost more acid than the other two. We would suggest that you take the battery to a reliable battery repair shop for examination.

A panel material that "stays put"
THE fine mechanical qualities of Formica assure you that whatever you fasten to your panel will stay tight and exactly as you have placed them indefinitely. There will be no sagging or warping to displace the instruments. Pressure of a screw or binding post will not force out the material and cause the fastening to loosen up.
That is one of the big reasons why 125 leading radio manufacturers use Formica. Other reasons are the high beautiful finish in black, walnut or mahogany, and the uniform electrical strength.
Insist on Formica and know that you are getting the best.

RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT

RADIO WILL CHECK UP ON LONGITUDE VALUES

World-Wide Radio Net to Aid Astronomers in Correcting Calculations.

A world-wide radio net is soon to be established to check up on the values accepted for the longitudes of places all over the globe.

Word to this effect has reached Washington from William Bowie, chief of the Division of Godesy of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey. Mr. Bowie is now in London attending the biennial meeting of the International Geodetic and Geophysical Union. In a letter written by Mr. Bowie describing the sessions of the meeting was this brief paragraph:

"It was decided to start preparations for a world-wide (radio) net by using Geodetic instruments and methods."

For a number of years there has been apparent a slight variation in the time signals sent out by leading observatories all over the world. This variation, although it has seldom amounted to more than a fraction of a second, has caused concern to leading scientists and has given rise to many theories that the world is slipping.

Time is determined in observatories by observation of the stars. As an example, a certain star is supposed to appear above the meridian at a certain time. No single star is used for this purpose. The observations range over a period of five or six days, when several stars are observed. On the day of the final determination the local timepieces are set to correspond. Between the periods of observations the timepieces in the observatory are used for sending out time signals.

To those versed in Geodetic methods, time signals carry a significance that is not applicable to the layman. The signals mean that the centers of certain stars are exactly over the meridian. It is by his method that the longitude is determined.

If the signals are a fraction of a second off, the result will be that the longitude cannot be accurately determined. For instance, a variation of one-tenth of a second would mean eight feet.

If the signals of one observatory do not correspond to the second with those of other observatories they carry a deeper significance. It means that one of three things has happened: that either the clock in the observaory is wrong; that the instruments used in the observation are off, or that the location of the observatory has changed and that the world may be slipping.

Officials at the Coast and Geodetic Survey in Washington believe that the explanation of time variations which have been noted among the leading observatories of the world lies in faulty instruments or conditions. They think this applies particularly to Honolulu, the time signals of which have been known to vary as much as three to five seconds from those of European stations.

With a world-wide radio net, it will be possible for scientists to learn immediately of any changes of the earth's crusts.

German Fans Must Pay.

The exploitation of radio broadcasting in Germany as a source of revenue to the Government and the licensed broadcasting companies has been practiced for some time. The regular annual fee for listening in is 24 marks, or about $6. Recently the service has been extended to include what are termed free stock exchange reports tendered daily. Now it is planned to further extend the service so as to cover agricultural information, but, about $42 annually is to be added to the regular charges. How American fans would swear if NAA or KDKA began charging for this sort of broadcasts! Owners of receiving sets in Germany are called "amateurs"—certainly then, the broadcasters are "professionals."

ESPERANTO ADOPTED BY LEAGUE

Esperanto has been adopted a the auxiliary international lan guage in telegraphic intercourse b the League of Nations, accordin to a cablegram from Internationa Esperanto headquarters at Genev. This is interpreted as applying t radio and cable communication, a well as purely telegraphic, by thos familiar with the plans for its us in international communicatio Recently the American Radio Re lay League recommended this ur versal language as the most suit able for world-wide communic tions by radio.

Esperanto Becoming Radio Lan guage.

Esperanto, the auxiliary lan guage, is becoming the univers radio language according to re ports from the Esperanto Assoc ation of North America.

From Budapest comes a lette stating that the Hungarian Radi News has adopted Esperanto fo international communication, fol lowing the decision of the nation al radio conference there. The American Radio Relay League ha also endorsed the use of this lan guage for foreign correspondenc and many American stations ar broadcasting lectures and course n this universal tongue.

A recent letter from the radio epartment of the Manitoba Tele raph System announces that Sta ion CKY is about to institute talks d instruction in Esperanto. In Europe an International Radio As sociation has indorsed Esperanto as its official language.

The Greatest Adventure of Our Time

Coming Soon!

Coming Soon!

CROSSING the two great oceans, flying over desert, city and mountain range; covering crowded continents and deserted wastelands; from the torrid zone to ice-bound Greenland—a summer of danger, discovery, exploration and adventure. This great story of the world flyers has been secured by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. It is written by Lowell Thomas, intimate friend of the flyers, who is also an adventurer and a flyer, as well as an author.

The personal, day-by-day records of Lieuts. Smith, Nelson and Wade; The anxious moments waiting for Major Martin, who smashed into a mountain; Problems of flying in China and India; Receptions in Europe; Wade's disastrous fall in the icy Atlantic; The impatient delay in Iceland; The dangers of the Aleutians in the Northern Pacific; The long flight over ice and open sea to Greenland; And then Tickle Harbor, and the American continent, and home.

Lowell Thomas has written a fascinating story of the experiences of the flyers in the first circumnavigation by air. There are innumerable facts of interest which hitherto have never been mentioned. And there is the authentic record of the flight.

Sage Tea Turns Gray Hair Dark

ALMOST every one knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it, and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For Real Effectiveness, This Old Home-Made Remedy Has No Equal. Easily and Cheaply Prepared.

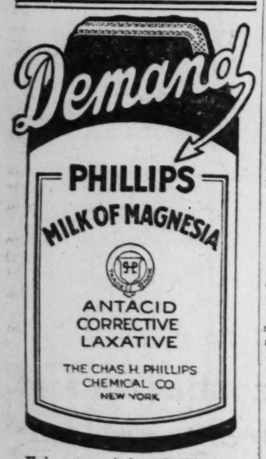
You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It is very easily prepared, and there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and disappear. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.



Unless you ask for "Phillips" you may not get the original Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years. Protect your doctor and yourself by avoiding imitations of the genuine "Phillips."

25-cent bottles, also 50-cent bottles, contain directions—any drug store.

HOW CRUDE OIL IS 'CRACKED' TO MAKE GASOLINE

Automobile Fuel Obtained by Complicated Process That Leaves Valuable Residue.

The making of gasoline is a complicated process. In one process, crude oil is pumped in a steady stream through a series of pipe retorts set in a bricked furnace, where the oil is heated to the desired temperature—from 450 degrees to 600 degrees Fahrenheit depending on the type of crude oil and the number of products to be made.

From the retort this heated oil is flowed into a large cylinder set on end, where the vapors separated by the heating pass off through a series of condensers fed by a constant supply of cooling water. The unevaporated oil falling to the bottom of the cylinder is run into tanks and is known as 'residumm' or 'fuel oil,' being used for fuel in railroad engines, steamships and large industrial plants.

Breaking Up the Crude Oil.

In the first condensers, where the vapors are hottest, the heaviest portions of the vapors condense back into liquid form and are run off as a heavy distillate called "Diesel oil" or "furnace oil." The next condensers will knock down the next heaviest distillates, called "stove oil" and kero distillate. Kero distillates may be redistilled and treated to produce kerosene.

The final condensers, in which the vapors are the coolest and therefore the lightest, are supplied with the largest amount of cooling water and in these the gasoline is recondensed. The excellence of the gasoline and in fact all the cuts depends upon the care with which temperatures are maintained in the various condensers and the completeness with which condensation is carried out, as of course the most volatile factions of the gasoline are also the lightest and therefore need the most thorough cooling for recondensation into the liquid form.

Acid and Alkaline Treatment.

The first process of refining is called "topping" by the trade, and most of these broad cuts need redistilling or treating to make them salable. Where gasoline has been cut to the desired specification, however, it needs but one treatment, and upon this depends much of its quality. In one type of treatment called the "acid and alkaline' method, used by many refiners, the introduction of acid into the oil raises its temperature considerably and has a tendency to vaporize and drive off some of the lighter gases, and the agitation which is necessary further increases this loss.

One treatment is known as the "doctor solution" method and there is no change in the temperature of the gasoline by its use, while the agitation necessary is done in tight vessels, kept cool, so that there is no noticeable loss of that important part of the gasoline which is so necessary for the easy starting of motors.

In testing for the consistency and grade of a gasoline 100 cc of gasoline is distilled in a small glass flask, vapor being carried off through a condenser surrounded by ice, and condensed into a graduated 100 cc cylinder. A thermometer is pushed down through the cork in the neck of the distilling flask to a point where it is opposite the outlet where the vapors leave the flask to enter the condenser.

Temperature Important.

The temperature at which each 10 per cent of the gasoline is distilled into the graduated flask are read on this thermometer. The temperature at which the first drop falls into the cylinder is called the "initial boiling point" or "end."

Not only do these qualities insure satisfactory engine performance, but the clean, complete combustion lessens the accumulation of carbon and prevents other conditions which cut down the efficiency of the motor.

Gasoline made by blending or by improper refining may have gaps in its range of boiling points and will not burn evenly, giving a broken power stroke. An even range means that the gasoline will ignite and burn evenly and give a steady power stroke.

The higher the "end" point, within practical limits, the greater the strength, drive and follow-through which will be imparted to the power stroke of the piston, as the heavier units which require the highest temperatures for vaporizing carry the greatest power factor.

The uniformity with which the temperature increases as each 10 per cent is distilled over determines the evenness of the range of boiling points, and is a good indication of the quality of the gas.

All Vibration Eliminated at all Speeds in the New Equipoised eight!

Never have you driven a car of such unvarying smoothness

Equipoise—perfect balance—perfect distribution of power—has been achieved for the first time in automobile manufacture. And naturally by Peerless.

It is the result of scientific construction which actually increases and improves power and is accomplished without any added device that complicates or might detract from power.

You can't begin to realize the full significance of this great engineering advance simply by reading about it.

Never, until you actually ride in the Peerless Equipoised Eight can you begin to know how far it has forged ahead of all other fine cars regardless of price.

You have never experienced such an amazing blend of brute power and gentle smoothness as that developed by this new Peerless, V-type, Equipoised, eight-cylinder engine.

Smooth as Silk

Up hill, or on the straight-away—over smooth, paved roads, or through deep, rough going—at high speeds, or just crawling along—you find always an entire absence of vibration.

The more critical you are of a car's mechanical qualities, the more you will marvel at this Equipoised Eight—the more readily you will admit that at last a truly vibrationless motor has been produced.

And the smoothness of this fine car applies not only to the action of the motor but to the riding qualities as well. Balloon tires are standard equipment, of course. So are Peerless-Lockheed hydraulic four-wheel brakes.

Luxurious interiors—rich upholstering—everything is there in the way of equipment and fittings that could possibly add to the comfort, safety and completeness of the car as a whole. Never before has a car of such superlative excellence been offered to the public.

Rare Beauty, Too

Those who think in terms of beauty are fascinated by the grace and symmetry of this new Peerless.

The distinctive front—the attractive new hood design—the flowing body lines—the nickeled radiator and lamps—the quality coach work—the fine finish throughout—all combine to win the delighted approval of the most critical men and women.

The Peerless distributor is eager to have you substantiate these facts by riding in the car and driving it yourself. He wants you to examine it from any standpoint you like—to compare it detail for detail with any car you know.

A phone call will bring a Peerless Equipoised Eight to your home or office for a demonstration

LEXINGTON, Tenn., Nov. 15.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LEXINGTON, Tenn., Nov. 12.

WHEN he was alive his friends called him Henry. They speak of him now, coldly, as Mr. Graper, or just Graper if his name occurs in more than one sentence. Lexington and Henderson County citizens try to show in this way their changed opinion of him.

It is not the discovery of Henry C. Graper's apparently dishonest life that grieves his neighbors. For years they watched him in a bank, trading loans for political service till he had county politics in his grasp. For years they saw him as a silent partner enter into questionable deals with the bank's money until he had made a fortune. They had known him for a politician and a sharper. But, alive, he had dazzled them by the sheer audacity of his maneuvers.

He had laughed aside their suspicious inquiries in his easy, confident way. "There's nothing wrong, my friend," he would say. "I know what I'm doing."

And off he would go to Memphis or Chicago to attend to some other big deal.

Eavesdroppers used to delight in his manner of soothing a ruffled victim. Farmers who believed he had not played fair would begin to doubt their conclusion before he was half finished with his talk. He bored with such a large anger; he was so amazing. His talk had to do with investments here and investments there, with conferences in far-off directors' rooms, with high-powered business in great cities. The simple folk of Henderson County were awed into acquiescent bewilderment. To use a slang expression, Henry C. Graper did as he pleased and made them like it.

No, the people here have not seen a sheep turn into a wolf at death. Theirs is not the grief of disillusionment on that score. When Graper dropped dead in a railroad coach a month while back his passing brought a far more terrible revelation. It was this:

The Startling Revelations

Folks had always thought him clever enough to stay within the law, and rich enough to pull out of any hole. They had trusted his very unscrupulousness, thinking that, forewarned, he could do them no financial harm because he was too shrewd for outright stealing. He was, they believed, dangerous if trusted, but safe if watched. This paradox may be explained in other words by quoting the average Lexington resident, who will tell you: "We knew we had to watch Graper, but we didn't think he'd be crude enough to steal."

He wasn't. He had, it developed within a few hours of his death, taken $350,000 from Henderson County, but he had done it in a way that would baffle a grand jury:

His neighbors discovered that:

1. He had loaned out the $350,000 cash obtained by the county through the sale of road bonds and deposited with his bank.

2. The Bank of Lexington held $780,000 worth of notes, a large percentage of the amount being worthless paper.

3. He had obtained the signatures of 112 Henderson County citizens to the surety bond for $350,000, which was to protect the county from loss of its road fund. These men had signed the bond, trusting in Graper's sagacity and in the fact that he was reputed to be worth $500,000 and would make good any loss.

4. The county's $350,000 which had been cash was now but a bundle of notes.

5. Graper was dead and the peculiar power he had held was gone. No other could hope to collect as much of the paper in the bank as he might have collected had he lived. Therefore it appeared that the bond signers would have to make up the $350,000 unless they could collect it from Graper's estate.

Everything in His Wife's Name

Then came the climax. It was discovered that Graper, indeed, had holdings which totaled about $500,000. But—he had been very careful to sign all his property over to his widow. There was not a single asset in the bank on which the bond signers might levy.

Even this was not all. Many of the notes in the bank's vault had been indorsed by Graper's friends and relatives, he being too wary to sign his own name to them.

The revelations struck nearly every home in Lexington and every farmhouse in Henderson County. Merchants around the town square had attached their signatures to the surety bond. Those who had not signed the bond had indorsed notes or had deposits in the bank. Graper's brother-in-law, John S. Fielder, who had acted as cashier of the bank, was as hard hit as any. He had indorsed note after note. Another brother-in-law, Roy Fielder, lost $26,000, it was reported.

Graper died while riding on an N. C. & St. L. train from Lexington to Memphis. His wife was with him at the time. He had been reading a newspaper and suddenly pitched forward. Physicians summoned when the train reached Jackson said death had been caused by a cerebral hemorrhage. The body was removed and sent back to Lexington for burial. This happened Sept. 11 last and two days later the funeral was held.

In the interim the board of directors of the bank called a meeting and the State Finance Department was asked to take charge. Examiners closed the bank.

Henry Graper's grip on Henderson County had been taken away. He who had been its foremost citizen in point of wealth and power was no more. The big fish in the little puddle had died, and his silver scales fell from him. If people had never exactly trusted Henry Graper they had respected and admired his ability. Death had checked him in full career. Looking at the wreckage of the myth that toppled when the magic of his personality was withdrawn, people of Lexington were shocked and disgusted.

They held his funeral in the Methodist Church on the corner across from the Courthouse, and barely a hundred persons attended. The town knew no sorrow; its citizens were more interested just then in self-preservation. They realized very clearly now what a menace his one-man control had been all along, and how it threatened to carry them down in the breaking.

Wild Rumors Follow His Death

Self-preservation is still the principal interest in Henderson County today. When the Post-Dispatch correspondent reached Lexington he could find few who were willing to talk about Graper's strange career. The shadow of a $350,000 indebtedness to be prorated among 112 families; the stringency brought through the closing of the bank with 700 depositors—these were the topics those interviewed were bound to discuss. These, and rumors.

There were men in the drug stores who vowed that Henry Graper did not die. They declared, solemnly, that he went off to South America and a wax dummy was buried in his place. There were others who asserted that he shot himself. Still others say that the evening of the day he died the bank directors hauled off all the $350,000 in cash from the bank in a truck. One man (his name was elusive) had picked up a $5 bill from the sidewalk in front of the bank next morning.

Such talk is illuminative. It indicates how startling were the facts; how many Henderson Countians are shrinking from the truth.

However, the bond signers have been busy seeking a loophole in their contract. A faction headed by F. N. Davis, Presiding Judge of the County Court, believes that it has found the way out.

As Judge Davis explained it, there are two technical flaws in the bond issue. The measure floating the bonds was passed in 1920, largely through Graper's influence. According to Judge Davis, "The bond issue was presented to the voters as being a 5½ per cent proposition. When Graper's bank bid in the bonds and resold them they went out at 6 per cent—one-half of 1 per cent more interest than the voters had agreed to pay.

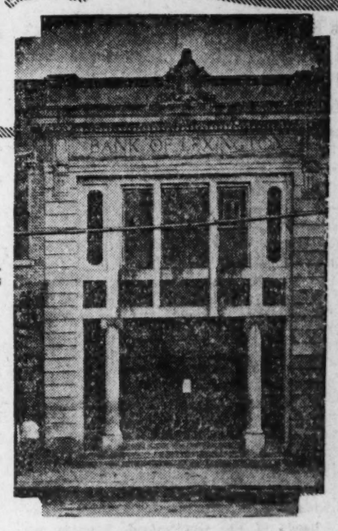
Repudiation of Bonds Suggested

"Further, it is a State law that no county may float bonds exceeding 10 per cent (with its previous indebtedness included) of the assessed property valuation of the county. As we understand it, the indebtedness of Henderson County prior to the 1920 road bond issue was $200,000. With $350,000 added it came to more than 20 per cent of the assessed valuation.

"Thus, for two reasons the people of Henderson County would be legally justified in repudiating the $350,000 worth of road bonds as unauthorized and illegal. Steps are being taken with this end in view."

Judge Davis added that if the county had legally issued bonds exceeding 10 per cent of its assessed property valuation it must have passed the measure by a two-thirds majority. He avers that the 1920 bond election was carried by only a simple majority, and that this is another point which will help the move for repudiation.

If the bond issue is invalidated, as Judge Davis and the surety bond signers hope it will be, then the purchasers of the bonds will have no claim on the county. The county, therefore, will have no claim against the bank and the bank will have no claim against the citizens who signed the surety bond. The only losers will be the investors who bought Henderson County (Tenn.) road bonds. The question probably will be settled through a suit by the present bondholders in Federal Court against the county. The



The Bank of Lexington where Graper carried on his operations. He had offices on the second floor, delegating to subordinates the routine work of the bank.

Bank of Lexington, which, under the depository agreement, was to pay the interest on the bonds, is in arrears for the last six months. About $20,500 in interest is due the bondholders as the regular Nov. 1 semi-annual payment.

All Eyes Turn to the Widow

Next to a discussion of ways and means of dodging the surety bond the most popular subject in Henderson County just now is Mrs. Lena H. Graper's attitude. Everyone seems to think that she, as the widow of the man who was responsible for the disappearance of its road fund, is morally bound to see that the surety bond signers suffer no loss. She has not, however, shown any indication that this is her view of it. Her time is occupied at present in collecting the $200,000 life insurance Graper carried and keeping the $200,000 worth of securities he assigned to her from becoming involved in the liquidation of the bank's affairs. In his will Graper seemed to have a premonition that he was about to crash, for he stipulated various measures by which he had saved his own property, and had turned it over to her.

To give life to the morass of figures through which the bank examiners are wading in an effort to save enough from the wreck to pay depositors at least, it is necessary to return to Henry Graper. They all come back to talk of Henry Graper here, after they have discussed the disaster precipitated by his death.

"I think Graper would have pulled us out of this if he had lived," one man told the correspondent.

"I don't figure that Graper expected his end. I think he had some scheme up his sleeve to clear away that bad paper," said another.

"They're talking a lot about how dirty he did them, but he was the most resourceful man I ever saw," one banker explained. "I don't think he had any idea of leaving the folks here in the lurch."

"If Henry Graper had lived he'd have fixed it so we wouldn't lose anything."

It still persists. Magic Henry Graper!

Began as Restaurant Dishwasher

He began in Lexington as a dishwasher in the town's one restaurant, about 30 years ago. A raw country lad who had grown up near Wildersville, some miles down the shortline track, his start was humble, but he moved fast. Folks chuckled about his first step. He married May Fielder, whose family was well off. She was not as pretty as many other girls about, but—the gossips said: "That young feller's got a head on him."

His first funds were gathered in modest trading. The watchers from the soap boxes and sugar barrel tops marked that he early took to reading books, and had his hair cut regularly. Presently he became friendly with Thetis Sims, who was running for Congress in the district. He helped Sims, and when the Tennessee solon won his seat Graper became secretary to the new Congressman. That carried him to a different world, and he acquired a polish that was to become part of his stock in trade back home.

After leaving Sims' employ Graper returned to Lexington and opened a bank, calling it the Citizens' Bank. He dabbled in politics from the first and evidently hit upon the idea of running the bank and the political game together. The plan worked to a nicety.

His policy was never to refuse a loan on

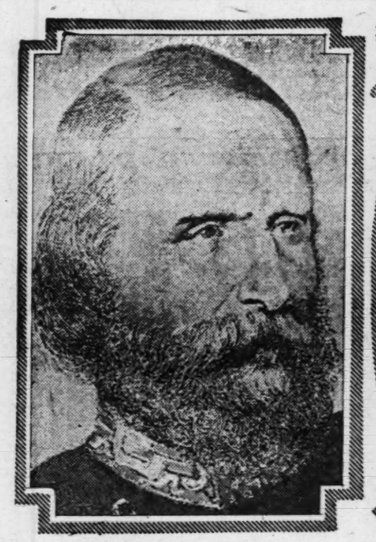
ITALY AGAIN IN FERMENT WITH A GARIBALDI LEADING FIGHT ON MUSSOLI

Strict Censorship Cannot Conceal Fact That Dictator's Power Is Menaced by Grandson of Patrio

GENERAL GIUSEPPE (PEPPINO) GARIBALDI.
Soldier of fortune and veteran of five wars, who has taken a bold stand against what he believes is terrorism on the part of the Italian Fascisti. He has challenged Dictator Mussolini to a duel as a protest against the action of "Black Shirts" in firing on a group of those opposed to Mussolini, who call themselves "Red Shirts."



GEN. GIUSEPPE GARIBALDI.
Peppino Garibaldi's illustrious grandfather, who is known to history as the Liberator of Italy. He led the Italian revolt against Austrian domination, overthrew King Francis II and established Victor Immanuel I on the throne.

GEN. RICCIOTTI GARIBALDI,
Father of Peppino Garibaldi, who as a General in the Italian Army, did much to modernize it and bring the Italian forces to European standards.

PREMIER BENITO MUSSOLINI,
Italy's master and the power behind the throne of Victor Immanuel which was tottering before Republican and Communist agitation until the Fascisti marched to Rome and took charge of the Government with strong and ruthless hands.

"Black Shirts," as Fascist Faction Is Known, Face Struggle With Traditional Followers of the "Red Shirts," Who, Under Leadership of the Elder Garibaldi, Wrested the Temporal Power From the Pope—His Grandson a "Stormy Petrel" of World Politics, Who Has Been a Picturesque and Notable Figure in Five Wars—Story of Remarkable Career of the Man Who Has Challenged the Premier to a Duel.

By CARLOS F. HURD.

WHEN Garibaldi openly fights Mussolini, Italy becomes again a place worth watching.

The grandson and namesake of Italy's liberator is at swords' points with Italy's present-day dictator. This is a figurative expression, but Garibaldi's desire that it might become literally true was shown when, a few days ago, he declined a challenge to a duel with one of Benito Mussolini's supporters and declared his desire to meet the Fascist chief himself.

Developments attending these events, and incidents which led to them, have been veiled by an efficient censorship, but enough has come out to show that the conflict between Fascist Black Shirts and the Garibaldian Red Shirts has torn the tranquillity of Italy asunder.

Strife is the native element of Gen. Giuseppe Garibaldi, known more familiarly as Peppino. In a career of military adventure perhaps unequaled in these times, he has survived five wars, and has further survived, unharmed, a feud with one of the most desperate characters of recent history, the late "Pancho" Villa of Mexico. It might be expected, therefore, that he would not shrink from a combat, either of words or of weapons, with the most forceful personality which his amazing country has given to the world in the post-war period.

And it is quite clear that Garibaldi has not shrunk—rather, that he has welcomed a chance for hostilities in these dull days of peace.

The occasion came when, on Nov. 4, Italy celebrated the sixth anniversary of the armistice with Austria—the Austria which the elder Garibaldi hated, and trained his son, and he in turn his sons, to fight.

An outbreak occurred on Armistice day in the Piazza del Popolo, Rome's most famous public square. Censored accounts say that 11 persons were injured, and offer no explanation. But Gen. Garibaldi declared that an unprovoked assault was made upon unarmed veterans, and that the responsibility lay with the Premier, head of the Government and of Fascism.

Garibaldi's manifesto, which the newspapers of Italy could not print, and to which they made but a mild reference, was cabled to this country by the Associated Press correspondent, who took it across the Swiss border. It declared that:

"Thousands of combatants, while performing their most sacred duties on the anniversary of Italy's victory, in Rome, were in cowardly fashion assaulted, revolver shots coming from an ambush prepared and carried out by members of the Fascisti militia.

"We, heirs to the Garibaldi tradition and representatives of the combatants for all liberties, denounce to the people the vile ambush, which dishonors the nation. The Red Shirts have always fought on all battlefields for the liberty of the people. It is repugnant to our thoughts that today bands of the Government, knowing we were completely unarmed, surpassed in baseness the past tyrannies.

"For what has taken place we consider directly responsible the head of the Government."

The Italia Libera, an organization of discontented members of the Fascisti, also issued a manifesto accusing the Premier of responsibility for the attack.

Insists on Fighting Mussolini

Garibaldi, when the newspapers of his own country failed to publish his manifesto as written, declared that he would address his protest direct to the King. "I trust," he said, "that the crown will not refuse to intervene in such a grave moment for the safety of the country."

The first official reply to Gen. Garibaldi came from Gen. Varini, commander of the Fascist militia, who sent the General a challenge to a duel. The two military men named seconds, but upon their meeting Garibaldi's seconds are said to have informed Varini's seconds that a duel with Varini was not desired by their principal.

Gen. Garibaldi, the seconds said, held Premier Mussolini directly responsible, and Varini, not being in a position to represent him, had no right to ask satisfaction. They added that Gen. Garibaldi would accept a challenge from Mussolini himself. However, Dr. Italo Balbo, commander-in-chief of the Fascist militia, sent a challenge, but a later announcement was that "owing to the impossibility of a duel," the case would be transferred to the National Court of Honor at Florence, an organization of army officers which rules in such disputes.

The present Giuseppe Garibaldi is 44 years old. He was but 2 years old when his famous grandfather died. "And yet," he has said, "I know him better than most young men know their living grandfathers. For wherever I went, in former years, I met men who knew him, who fought under his standard at Mentana or Palermo, and who never tired of telling me about him."

He was born in Australia, the son of Gen. Ricciotti Garibaldi, who gave his life-long efforts to the training of the Italian army, in the hope, lately fulfilled, that it would one day win back the unredeemed provinces, Trieste and the Trentino. This was the task which the leader of the Red Shirts had left to his descendants.

He was educated in Italy, in military tactics and mining engineering. He came, at an early age, to know South America, the native continent of his grandmother, the intrepid Anita Garibaldi.

When he was 17 war broke out between Greece and Turkey, and his father entered the Greek service. Against his father's will young Giuseppe also entered the Greek army and fought in three engagements.

"We did not have the distinction of defeating the Turks," he once said in recounting his early military career to the writer, "but we were so far successful as to compel them to retreat. As a private soldier of Greece, I was under fire for the first time in the fighting at the Fortress of Domokos. The campaign was terminated by an armistice.

"I went back to my engineering studies, and awaited the next chance to learn military tactics. It came with the Boer War.

"I have been greatly censured by many persons because I was with the English army in that war. Many persons thought the grandson of my grandfather should have been fighting on the weaker side.

Why He Fought Against Boers

"But the Italian people will remember that England and English people were my grandfather's stanchest supporters. Our family owes England a debt of gratitude that can never be paid.

"Still, I at first sympathized with the Boers, and at the outbreak of the trouble, being then in South America, I took part in meetings at Montevideo and Buenos Aires to raise funds to aid the Boers.

"My feeling of sympathy for the Boers changed when I went to Africa and came to know them. I then felt that sympathy for them was wasted.

"I went to Africa as a military student to learn what I could by observing the tactics of both sides. When I had decided for myself the merits of the controversy, I felt no hesitancy in attaching myself to the British arms.

"I was with the staff of Gen. Walter Kitchener, brother of Lord Kitchener. Comparing the tactics there with what I had seen in Greece, I was surprised to see the manner in which the British officers exposed themselves. It seemed to be a matter of sportsmanship with them. They jeopardized their lives in ways not called for, and contrary, in fact, to the rules of regular warfare. In my work with them, I was under fire almost as much as I would have been as a private soldier.

"While I was in South America, between the Greek and African campaigns, I had taken part in plans for a revolution in Uruguay. It seemed at one time that we were about to start the revolt, but it was decided to defer it. The revolution in Uruguay broke out in 1904, and they wanted me to help, but I could not, for I had at that time taken a commission as Colonel of Artillery in a revolution against the Castro Government in Venezuela.

"The Venezuelan campaign was a thrilling one, culminating in the engagement at El Guapo. There, for six days and six nights, 3500 of our men held the town against four times as many of Castro's troops. We lost 1000 men, they lost 2000. In the final engagement at Ciudad Bolivar they had 18,000 men and we had 1642. The fighting began at 6:30 a. m. and at 7 p. m. the following day, when 492 of us were left, we surrendered.

Chained to Wall Seven Months

"I was sent to the fortress of Puerto Cabello, and chained to a wall for seven months. Then I escaped and made my way to the mountains, and when Castro found he could not catch me, he issued a proclamation granting me amnesty. I knew what that meant and took care not to fall into his hands.

"It was my desire to see service in the war between Russia and Japan. But my feelings would not permit me to ally myself with either side. I admired the courage of the Japanese and sympathized with them rather than with the Russians. But I could never have brought myself to fight for Mongolians against Caucasians. It would have been contrary to race instinct.

"My brother had the same feeling. I learned some time afterward that he had had in his possession the complete plans of the Russian fortifications at Port Arthur, which he had obtained from an Italian engineer who had held a highly responsible place in their construction.

"When he showed me the plans, I remarked that they would have inestimable value to the Japanese, and I asked my brother why he had not sold them to the Japanese.

" 'Because,' he replied. " 'the Russians are white men.' "

When the Mexican revolution began, I went to that country, which was the only large Latin-American nation where I was a stranger, and offered my services to Francisco I. Madero. He accepted them and we became close friends."

The capture of Ciudad Juarez, the border town opposite El Paso, was the scene of some of the fiercest fighting in the Madero campaign. In that fight Garibaldi served with a Colonel's rank. Gen. Navarro was the commander of the Federal (Diaz) forces, and the attack was delayed, in view of a prospect that President Diaz might resign, making the battle unnecessary.

When news came, the evening of May 8, 1911, that Diaz would give no assurance of resigning, Madero gave the order for attack on Juarez. Garibaldi and Gen. Pascual Orozco marched a command of about 600 men up the bank of the Rio Grande toward the town, while Francisco Villa and his command made a land attack from the south.

Because of the uncertain loyalty of many of the Federal soldiers, Gen. Navarro had to keep his forces in a compact body, while the attacking troops were free to divide into small groups. This proved to great advantage, as Garibaldi explained afterward, in the street fighting which decided the possession of the town.

Describing the fighting, Garibaldi later said:

Capturing Juarez With Crowbars

"The advance through the center of the town was accomplished, not by exposing our men to open fire, but by burrowing our way with crowbars through the adobe walls and working gradually forward, house by house and block by block.

"Each detachment carried, besides its arms and ammunition, a supply of crowbars and home-made hand grenades. While some manned the roof and picked off Federal sharpshooters on adjoining buildings, others loopholed the adobe walls, while the rest smoked cigarettes, ate what could be found or amused the workers by providing music from guitars, phonographs, player-pianos or whatever instruments happened to be in the houses. Danger never seemed to be present to any of those intrepid men."

This fighting lasted three days, before Gen. Navarro raised the white flag. The hoisting of the white flag was delayed by rebel sharpshooters who, Garibaldi related, twice cut the rope with bullets.

"Gen. Navarro did not surrender his sword," Garibaldi said, "for he had no sword left to surrender, but he surrendered the town to me, which was more important."

Peace came soon afterward, and Pancho Villa, passionately attached to Madero, began to show the greatest jealousy of both Garibaldi and Orozco. When he heard that Madero was about to give Garibaldi the rank of Brigadier-General, Villa is said to have announced that he would kill the Italian.

At that time Garibaldi was in El Paso. Villa went there, but the news of his intention traveled ahead of him. Garibaldi was at the Hotel Sheldon, on the street leading directly from the international bridge. This seemed favorable to Villa's purpose, as he would have a straight path back into Mexico after his expected revenge.

When Villa and his six bodyguards entered the lobby of the hotel the place was crowded with men who had heard that he was coming. Presently Garibaldi entered, also with a bodyguard. It consisted of Col. (later Brigadier-General) E. Z. Steever, U. S. A.; several officers of the Fourth U. S. Cavalry and four secret service agents.

When El Paso Mayor Disarmed Villa

Garibaldi, encircled by his companions, stood near the clerk's desk, while Villa stood by the stairway. There was a breathless moment for the crowd. Then Mayor Kelly of El Paso, Irish and blue-eyed, walked into the gathering. "What is the trouble?" he asked one of the American officers. The officer replied that Villa had threatened to kill Garibaldi.

Kelly walked over to Villa. "What's this?" he demanded. "Hand over those guns," he continued. Villa, scowling, handed Kelly his pistols.

"Now get out, and get out pronto," the Mayor commanded.

Some accounts of the matter have it that he speeded Villa's departure with a kick, but the accepted version is that Villa was going too fast to receive a kick. Villa was no coward, but he realized, under the circumstances, what a difference an international border made.

Madero wanted Garibaldi to remain in Mexico after the apparent return of peace to that country. Garibaldi thought well of this for a time, and at the time of his visit to St. Louis, in September, 1911, he planned to return to Mexico and engage in mining.

A group of St. Louis bankers entertained Gen. Garibaldi at the Noonday Club, and told them that he was through fighting.

"That is," he added, "until the time comes to complete my grandfather's work in freeing Italy. My grandfather left, as a legacy to his descendants, the task of restoring to Italy the lost provinces. I feel now, with the training I have had, that I am ready for that work when the time shall come.

"And I feel that it will come. I do not expect that Italy will go to war solely to recover the Trentino and Trieste, and I feel that the sentiment of the time is for world peace. But just the same, Europe will probably see one more great war. When that war comes, Italy must do its part and claim its rightful territory. And I shall be there."

When the great war came, a little more than three years later, Garibaldi did not wait for Italy to enter. He enlisted in the French Foreign Legion, and had a part in the defense of the bombarded cathedral city of Rheims.

In the French service, Garibaldi was made Lieutenant-Colonel. In this campaign, two of his brothers, Bruno and Constantine Garibaldi, lost their lives.

Two other brothers were with him when more than a year afterward, the army of their own country entered the struggle, aligned at length against Austria, with the lost provinces as the prize to be won.

While his son were fighting first in France and then for Italy, Gen. Peppino Garibaldi was kept by his age from the ranks of active combatants.

In the storming of the Col di Lana, one of the most difficult peaks taken by the Italian forces, it was Peppino Garibaldi who hoisted the colors on the summit. For gallantry in this engagement, he was made Colonel, and other promotions followed.

With the war over, the lost provinces won back and Austria humbled, other figures of the Garibaldis came to the fore in Italy. First the spectacular D'Annunzio, with the Fiume exploit. Then the hard, practical, dominating personality of Mussolini.

EUZEBE VIDRINE, writing his memoirs of five murders in a cell, with death on the gallows only a few days away, set down as an afterthought:

"I also killed a service car driver named Lake or Duke one night in Ghost Swamp, near Orange, Tex. I think some poor fellow is doing time right now for the crime I committed."

Convict 47798, at hard labor on the Texas State Prison farm near Richmond seemed on the verge of open mutiny. His guards could not understand his persistent refusal to accept his fate meekly. There were other prisoners who often asserted they were innocent of the offenses for which they were serving sentences—beaten men for the most, who muttered plaintive talk about having been framed and railroaded. They soon learned that the less they said about it the better. But Convict 47798 was fiercely rebellious. When punished for insurrection he would snarl: "I didn't kill that guy. I'm not right for this and you got no business keeping me here." Then he would fall to cursing bitterly.

Sheriff Jim Helton of Orange County Tex., picked up a newspaper one day and read with considerable attention to detail of the preparations for the hanging of Euzebe Vidrine at Ville Platte, La. He smiled grimly at Vidrine's boastfulness, his play for grewsome effect and his apparent unconcern as to the end awaiting him.

Then the Sheriff came to the list of Vidrine's victims. He saw the name, "Lee Duke, chauffeur, slain near Orange, Tex."

Helton turned to a deputy.

"This fellow says he killed Duke!" he exclaimed. "We sent Frank Smith to the pen for 15 years for that killing."

The deputy was equally amazed.

"Well," he reflected, "you know Smith always stuck to his story that he had nothing to do with it. Remember how he cussed out the Judge and jury when he was convicted?"

Sheriff Visits Confessed Murderer

The Sheriff is a man of action. He summoned Prosecuting Attorney Hollis Kinard and laid the case before him. They discussed it like Texans, briefly and without argument as to their course. They apparently had done Frank Smith an injustice. They must make every effort to right the wrong.

There was no time to lose. Word of Vidrine's statement had reached Orange on Aug. 7. He was to be hanged the afternoon of Aug. 9. Helton and Kinard made a hurried trip to Ville Platte, arriving early in the morning of the day of execution.

Admitted to the condemned man's cell, they asked him if he would make a sworn confession to the Duke murder. They explained that if his story rang true they would lay the facts before Gov. Neff of Texas and ask him to pardon Smith. To this Vidrine, with only seven more hours of life before him, consented. It did not occur to the Sheriff then, as it has to him and to others since, that Vidrine and Smith might have been pals, though there is no actual evidence to support this theory.

Helton and Kinard, both familiar with every point of the case, put Vidrine through a lengthy examination. His answers were transcribed by a stenographer. His confession ran as follows:

"I came to the oil fields around Orange about Dec. 10, 1921—two days before the murder. I was hard up and decided to murder someone for money. I always had a preference for taxi drivers (he had confessed that three of his five victims were chauffeurs), so I figured I would lay for a service car driver. I picked Lee Duke, because I understood he always carried considerable money with him. He ran a line between the oil fields and Beaumont.

Told How He Killed Taxi Driver

"The evening of the murder I summoned Duke by telephone to pick me up on a corner for a trip to Beaumont. He had no other passenger and at no time while I rode with him did anyone else enter the car, which was a Chevrolet, I think.

Sheriff Visits Confessed Murderer

The Sheriff is a man of action. He summoned Prosecuting Attorney Hollis Kinard and laid the case before him. They discussed it like Texans, briefly and without argument as to their course. They apparently had done Frank Smith an injustice. They must make every effort to right the wrong.

There was no time to lose. Word of Vidrine's statement had reached Orange on Aug. 7. He was to be hanged the afternoon of Aug. 8. Helton and Kinard made a hurried trip to Ville Platte, arriving early in the morning of the day of execution.

Admitted to the condemned man's cell, they asked him if he would make a sworn confession to the Duke murder. They explained that if his story rang true they would lay the facts before Gov. It did not occur to the Sheriff then, as it has to him and to others since, that Vidrine and Smith might have been pals, though there is no actual evidence to support this theory.

Helton and Kinard, both familiar with every point of the case, put Vidrine through a lengthy examination. His answers were transcribed by a stenographer. His confession ran as follows:

"I came to the oil fields around Orange about Dec. 10, 1921—two days before the murder. I was hard up and decided to murder someone for money. I always had a preference for taxi drivers (he had confessed that three of his five victims were chauffeurs), so I figured I would lay for a service car driver. I picked Lee Duke, because I understood he always carried considerable money with him. He ran a line between the oil fields and Beaumont.

Told How He Killed Taxi Driver

"The evening of the murder I summoned Duke by telephone to pick me up on a corner for a trip to Beaumont. He had no other passenger and at no time while I rode with him did anyone else enter the car, which was a Chevrolet, I think.

"We started out about 8 o'clock and took the low road to Beaumont. The road was soft and bad. I suppose we must have driven about eight miles (half way) when I decided we had gone far enough. The road was deserted and it was very dark.

"Duke stopped for a minute to light his pipe and I shot him three times with my own gun. He was killed instantly. I dragged him from the car and searched him. I only got about $4 in silver. I took his watch and his revolver. Then I pulled the body off the road, abandoning it in some bushes. I went back to the car and started the engine.

"It was my idea to drive on to Beaumont. But the car stalled after I had gone about 40 feet and I decided not to try to drive it any further. I got out and walked through the woods to the Southern Pacific Railroad tracks, about three-quarters of a mile, I judge. Turning east, I went on foot along the tracks back to Orange.

"It was about 1 a. m. when I reached Orange. A policeman stopped me on the street, but he did not search me. At that time I had Duke's money and watch and revolver in my pocket."

The money, Vidrine said, he spent, and the watch he pawned at a place in Hot Springs, Ark.

His story satisfied the Sheriff, temporarily. The facts of the crime as he stated them followed pretty closely what had been testified to at Smith's trial.

Weakness of the Defense

The Sheriff and the Prosecuting Attorney returned to Orange with the confession. Vidrine marched to the gallows to pay for the murder of his fifth victim, Robert Wiggins, a neighbor at Ville Platte, whom he had wantonly slain over a fancied slight to a woman he admired.

EUZEBE VIDRINE.

The boastful murderer of five men, hanged for his last crime at Ville Platte, La., who, the day before his execution, confessed that he and not Smith had murdered Lee Duke.

In making a careful review of the case before presenting it to the Governor, Sheriff Helton realized that Smith's conviction had come about through the weakness of his defense rather than the strength of the State's evidence, which was purely circumstantial.

Duke's body had been discovered the morning after the crime through a miscalculation by his slayer or slayers. The body had been dragged off the Beaumont road, but whoever placed it failed to see the road which crossed at right angles near the scene of the murder. This road came down from the Southern Pacific tracks and was used in hauling railroad ties to the right of way. In throwing the body off the Beaumont road, the slayer or slayers had placed it too near the other road. Teamsters driving down this road next morning discovered it.

When news of the murder reached the oil fields, there was great indignation. Duke had been a hard-working and popular fellow, with a wife and three children to support. Men volunteered to aid in tracking his murderer. Three residents of the district came forward to say that they could identify the man who had summoned Duke for the trip to Beaumont the night of the murder.

The afternoon of Dec. 13 Smith was arrested at Orange. The three witnesses swore that he was the man who had engaged Duke. From the first accusation Smith's attitude was one of evasion and garbled stories. He was speedily indicted and brought to trial.

FRANK J. SMITH.

The poor and friendless Texas convict who was pardoned by the Governor after Vidrine confessed to the murder for which Smith was sentenced.

Three Witnesses Identified Him

The State, through Lee Davis, then Prosecuting Attorney, presented a circumstantial case. It produced as star witness, E. W. Barber, a restaurant owner in the oil fields. Duke had maintained headquarters at Barber's restaurant.

"Have you ever seen this man before?" the witness was asked.

"Yes."

"When?"

"The evening Duke was killed."

"Where was he?"

"He came to my place and called Duke. Said he wanted to make a trip to Beaumont."

"Did they leave together?"

"Yes, sir. I saw them drive away."

"About what time was that?"

"Must have been about 8 o'clock."

"No one else was in the car?"

"No. Just him and Duke."

Two other witnesses positively identified Smith as the man they had seen about the oil fields for two weeks prior to the murder. They, like Barber, swore that he had driven off with Duke in the car.

(From photographs of Smith and Vidrine it appears that there was a strong facial resemblance between the two and that Vidrine might easily have been mistaken for Smith

Hurts His Cause by Truculence

Aside from reviewing the scene of the crime and showing that Duke must have been shot at close range, by someone beside him on the front seat or one very near behind him in the tonneau, the State had no other evidence. There were no eyewitnesses to the murder. Ghost Swamp is lonely at night.

Conviction or freedom depended upon Smith's defense. If he could satisfactorily explain his movements the night of the crime he could outweigh the purely circumstantial testimony of State's witnesses. Smith's demeanor on the stand, however, at once antagonized Judge and counsel and hurt him with the jury.

He is of the type known in Texas as "an oil field roughneck." The roughnecks are the hoodlum element which follows drilling outfits, making merry in new towns before law is organized. The average roughneck is a hard-drinking, gambling, hell-raising fellow, who does the dirty work incidental to oil operations, gets good pay and spends it freely. He is a drifter, a sort of working tramp and the reputation of his class damns him almost before he has a chance to make trouble on his own account.

When Smith took the stand he was truculent. Former Circuit Judge Schoalar, who had been appointed to defend him, began with the introductory questions as to his name, his age and his place of residence.

"Where do you live?"

"Nowhere in particular."

"What was your last place of residence?"

"Didn't have any. I don't see that it's anybody's business where I lived."

"When did you leave the oil fields near Orange?"

"I left the afternoon of Dec. 12."

"The afternoon preceding the night of the murder?"

"That's it. I rode on a truck to Beaumont."

"What did you do then?"

"Well—I met some friends and we ate together in a restaurant."

"You were with them during the evening?"

"Yes, sir."

"Where did you go?"

"We just bummed around."

"Did you spend the night in Beaumont?"

"Yes."

"Where?"

"At a rooming house on Pearl street."

When the State began cross-examination the questions quickly placed the witness in a bad light.

"You say you rode on a truck to Beaumont. Do you know the driver's name?"

"No. I never asked him his name."

"Could you identify him if you saw him again?"

"Maybe I could."

Weakness in His Alibi

"You say you had supper in Beaumont with friends and spent the evening there. What were the names of your friends?"

GOV. PATRICK NEFF.

of Texas, who interested himself in Frank Smith's case and decided to give him the benefit of the doubt, and a pardon.

The witness could only name a man he knew as "Al."

"Now, about this rooming house. What was the landlady's name?"

"I didn't ask her name."

"Where is the house?"

"In the 700 block on Pearl street."

"What is the address?"

"I don't know. But it's about the middle of the block."

"Supposing I were to tell you that there is no rooming house in this block?"

"Well, it might have been the next street over."

The defense produced Smith's friend, "Al," and he corroborated the alibi. However, it developed that "Al" was an ex-convict with many different names, and that his citizenship had not been restored. He was withdrawn as a witness by the defense.

Although wide publicity had been given the case no rooming house keeper appeared to say that Smith had spent the night at her place, and no truck driver stepped forward to testify that Smith had ridden with him from the oil fields to Beaumont.

District Attorney Patrick Adams, who assisted with the prosecution, pointed out to the jury that Smith had failed to establish an alibi. His remarks were interrupted frequently by outbursts from Smith, who spoke in disparaging words of everybody concerned, his own counsel included. He would glare and explode with "That's a damn lie. I never," and "Like hell, I did."

An effort was made to show that Duke carried about $75 with him the night of the murder. His wife could not say as to his custom of carrying large sums, but friends testified they had seen him on other occasions display a roll of bills. The weakness of the State's case was entirely apparent, as there was no evidence that Smith had profited by the murder. He had a few cents with him when arrested, and all efforts to make him say where he had disposed of Duke's watch and revolver failed.

Lucky to Escape Hanging

Still, feeling in the courtroom against the defendant was so intense that observers say even now that he would have been sentenced to hang had the evidence been more than circumstantial. His conviction was never in doubt. The jury, after a short deliberation, recommended the 15-year sentence. The convicted man greeted the verdict bitterly.

"A poor man hasn't any chance in this country," he told the Judge. Then he cursed and repeated his statement about the fate of the poor man many times as he was hustled from the courtroom. Newspaper men who saw him in jail afterwards heard him insist: "I never killed that guy. I never done it."

When he was dressed in at the penitentiary here he refused to tell where he had lived before going to the Orange County oil fields. He declined to state whether he had a family or any relatives. He was listed as a "transient" and sent down to Harlem Prison Farm at Richmond to put in his stretch at hard labor.

The foregoing facts were presented to Gov. Neff by the Sheriff.

"Vidrine might have told the truth if it appears that he really did pawn Duke's watch in Hot Springs," the Governor said.

The watch was an important bit of evidence. Inasmuch as Smith had steadfastly professed to know nothing about it, and Vidrine had told instantly where it could be found, the difference in their attitudes was convincing. The Governor sent to Hot Springs, and, in the pawnshop where Vidrine had said he left the timepiece, it was found. Duke's widow positively identified the watch as belonging to her husband.

Gov. Neff then sent for Smith. His interview with the convict was described to the correspondent by H. C. Connally, secretary of the Board of Prison Commissioners here at Huntsville, who went through the entire case as Gov. Neff's adviser.

Hard-Boiled Even With Governor

"The Governor told Smith that the watch had turned up, and that there was serious doubt of his guilt," said Connally. "He advised him to make a clean breast of the affair, assuring him that his words would be taken in a friendly spirit. But Smith is hard-boiled. He told the Governor that he could add nothing to the story other than what he had related in court. Smith was still as reticent about his past as ever. The Governor really got nothing out of him on which the mystery might be solved.

"All along the Governor's hardest task was in convincing himself that Smith and Vidrine had not been pals and had not committed the murder together. He decided, however, that Smith must be given the benefit of the doubt. He had been convicted and sentenced as the actual murderer of Duke, and, even if he were an accomplice, he should not be held under the sentence passed at Orange."

Another thing which made the Governor hesitate over the pardon was the attitude of former Prosecuting Attorney Davis, who interposed vigorous objection to the pardon. Davis declared that Vidrine might have been tipped off through some "underground telegraph" between the Texas prison and the Louisiana prison "to take the rap for the Duke killing and free his pal, Smith."

The former prosecutor argued that Vidrine had nothing to lose by adding one more murder to his list. If Vidrine had any part in the crime, Davis said he believed, it was as the accomplice of Smith. There should be no pardon.

Smith's behavior while at the prison farm had not been such as to make authorities feel kindly toward him. He had been punished numerous times for insubordination. His stubborn insistence that he had not killed Duke, however, impressed Gov. Neff. Although Smith did not add a single bit of evidence in his favor, the Governor came to the decision that the law should give Smith a chance.

The pardoned one had not been released, pending receipt of the papers from Austin, when the correspondent was within interviewing distance of Harlem Farm. His fellow convicts had warned him, apparently, that it would be discretion not to talk about his case until he had the pardon papers in his pocket and was free. Efforts to arrange an interview failed, Smith responding that he did not care to talk or to see the correspondent.

He is grateful to Sheriff Helton and Gov. Neff. Some of the educated trusties at the prison farm wrote a letter of thanks to the Sheriff for him at his request. It was a flowery letter, but near the end Smith evidently got in one sentence of his own. "You're a damned square shooter," he wrote.

So Frank Smith is walking out; a poor man, without friends or influence, who was given the benefit of a very great doubt because a Sheriff and a Governor wanted to be sure they were not consciously doing any man in Texas an injustice.

When the great war came, a little less than three years later, Garibaldi did not wait for Italy to enter. He enlisted in the French Foreign Legion, and had a part in the defense of the bombarded cathedral city of Rheims.

In the French service, Garibaldi was Lieutenant-Colonel. In this campaign, two of his brothers, Bruno and Constantino Garibaldi, lost their lives.

Two other brothers were with him when, more than a year afterward, the army of their own country entered the struggle, aligned at length against Austria, with the lost provinces as the prize to be won.

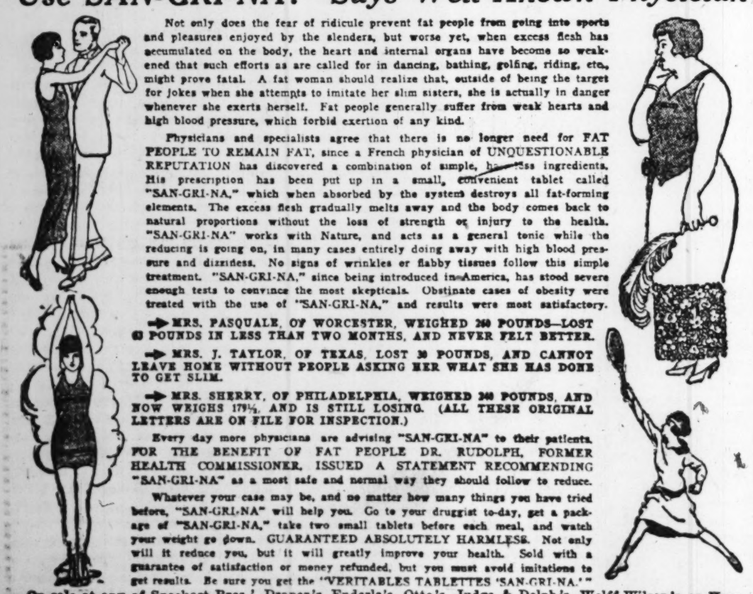
HOW TO REDUCE AND ENJOY LIFE

Don't Envy a Slim Figure! GET THIN!! Use SAN-GRI-NA: Says Well-Known Physician



Not only does the fear of ridicule prevent fat people from going into sports and pleasures enjoyed by the slenders, but worse yet, when excess flesh has accumulated on the body, the heart and internal organs have become so weakened that such efforts as are called for in dancing, bathing, golfing, riding, etc., might prove fatal. A fat woman should realize that, outside of being the target for jokes when she attempts to imitate her slim sisters, she is actually in danger whenever she exerts herself. Fat people generally suffer from weak hearts and high blood pressure, which forbid exertion of any kind.

Physicians and specialists agree that there is no longer need for FAT PEOPLE TO REMAIN FAT, since a French physician of UNQUESTIONABLE REPUTATION has discovered a combination of simple, harmless ingredients. His prescription has been put up in a small, convenient tablet called "SAN-GRI-NA," which when absorbed by the system destroys all fat-forming elements. The excess flesh gradually melts away and the body comes back to natural proportions without the loss of strength or injury to the health. "SAN-GRI-NA" works with Nature, and acts as a general tonic while the reducing is going on, in many cases entirely doing away with high blood pressure and dizziness. No signs of wrinkles or flabby tissues follow this simple treatment. "SAN-GRI-NA," since being introduced in America, has stood severe enough tests to convince the most skeptical. Obstinate cases of obesity were treated with the use of "SAN-GRI-NA," and results were most satisfactory.

➡ MRS. PASQUALE, OF WORCESTER, WEIGHED 240 POUNDS—LOST 63 POUNDS IN LESS THAN TWO MONTHS, AND NEVER FELT BETTER.

➡ MRS. J. TAYLOR, OF TEXAS, LOST 30 POUNDS, AND CANNOT LEAVE HOME WITHOUT PEOPLE ASKING HER WHAT SHE HAS DONE TO GET SLIM.

➡ MRS. SHERRY, OF PHILADELPHIA, WEIGHED 240 POUNDS, AND NOW WEIGHS 179½, AND IS STILL LOSING. (ALL THESE ORIGINAL LETTERS ARE ON FILE FOR INSPECTION.)

Every day more physicians are advising "SAN-GRI-NA" to their patients, FOR THE BENEFIT OF FAT PEOPLE DR. RUDOLPH, FORMER HEALTH COMMISSIONER, ISSUED A STATEMENT RECOMMENDING "SAN-GRI-NA" as a most safe and normal way they should follow to reduce.

Whatever your case may be, and no matter how many things you have tried before, "SAN-GRI-NA" will help you. Go to your druggist to-day, get a package of "SAN-GRI-NA," take two small tablets before each meal, and watch your weight go down. GUARANTEED ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS. Not only will it reduce you, but it will greatly improve your health. Sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or money refunded, but you must avoid imitations to get results. Be sure you get the "VERITABLES TABLETTES 'SAN-GRI-NA.'" cept under obviously impossible circumstances. He reasoned that a man in his debt was in his power. Farmers would shuffle into his office from little hillside places and ask for $50 or $100 to tide them over until cotton ginning.

DASHING WIDOW LETS HER HUSBAND'S FRIEND STAND LOSSES

"Sit right down," he would tell them affably, drawing his chair close. One of his favorite expressions was, "As man to man." Another was ,"Now tell me all about it."

He was small and wiry, alert and nervous. His gaze was very steady, though, and his voice inspired belief when he said, "I'm your friend."

Should a man desire to set up as a cotton factor or start a sawmill, Graper was most anxious to make a loan.

"We'll go partners in this," he would explain. Thus, he would loan the bank's money and make half the profits if the business prospered. If it failed he would be losing the bank's money, not his.

Gained Political Control of County.

Gradually, by one means or another, he gained political control of Henderson County. He made it a policy never to foreclose a mortgage or call in a note past due. This gave him a false reputation as "being good to the poor man." He needed that man's vote and the vote of his friends who knew how "good" he was being to the indebted one. Even when men would appear with the cash to take up a note he would put them off, saying that the note wasn't at hand just then, and why didn't they renew it and buy an automobile with the money?

Henderson is a Republican county, and Graper, in national politics always was a Democrat. But in the county he played both parties for his own gain. The seat of control in Henderson is the County Court, composed of 18 magistrates (Justices of the Peace in the various townships). For more than 15 years, until the last August election, Graper controlled a majority of the County Court.

The road bond proposition was his idea. In 1920 he backed it at the polls and the measure carried. Then he had himself appointed County Highway Commissioner. With the County Court in his control, it was easy for him to hold up the road work. Although the bonds had been sold for three years, Graper delayed the road work, giving the high cost of labor as an excuse. His enemies charged openly that he held up the work because he wanted to keep the $350,000 fund in his bank.

His political interests ranged far and wide. He became known over the State as Congressman Sims' protege. He was a regular delegate to the national Democratic convention, and his departures for these gatherings had due effect on the people of Lexington. He played in big time.

Issued Worthless Savings Certificates.

Nor did he restrict his business ventures to Henderson. He helped to organize the Partin-Palmer Auto Co. in Chicago in 1914. The firm went broke and he lost $100,000, it is said. Other Chicago ventures were the American Machinery Co. and the American Glass Co. He also was a heavy stockholder in the Cherokee Rock Asphalt Co. in Alabama, and a year before his death had incorporated the Farmers' Loan and Banking Co. at Memphis for $1,000,000. The savings certificates he issued to depositors with this concern appear to have always been worthless.

So he bustled in and out of Lexington, the air of large interests about him. When Cashier Fielder of the bank warned him six months ago that it was overloaded with bad paper, he merely laughed. "I'm worth half a million myself," he said. "Don't worry. I'll take care of it.

Nevertheless his power had begun to decline three years ago. The starting point was the death of his first wife. She succumbed in 1921 after a year of invalidism at a Nashville sanitarium. While she was away, town gossips marked Graper as being more than properly attentive to Mrs. Lena Martin, wife of a young dentist. In about a year after the first Mrs. Graper died, Mrs. Martin divorced her husband.

After Mrs. Martin's divorce, she and Graper were married and he built her a $20,000 home in Lexington. However, public opinion was so censorious that she left town and he bought her a handsome home in Memphis. She had a daughter, Bruce, 10 years old, by her first marriage. Graper's 12-year-old son, Henry Jr., resides with her in Memphis.

Popularity Goes Into Decline.

The affair with Mrs. Martin was the breaking point in Graper's popularity. He divided his time between Memphis and Lexington and did not keep such a tight grip on his debtors. The opposing faction, led by Judge Davis, beat his candidates for the County Court last August, and that was the beginning of the end.

T. I. Taylor, agent for the State Finance Department, in charge of the closed bank, believes that Graper saw his power waning and made careful plans to pull his own fortune from the tottering ruin. He always had carried heavy insurance policies, paying several of them at once to full maturity. In later years his assets seem to have been diverted into payments of the very large premiums, thus indicating that one of his methods of transfer was through life insurance and that he put capital as well as income into policies.

"His business deals have so many ramifications," Taylor said, "that we have just begun to get a line on the bank's condition. He appears

DAD has always wanted an open car. He likes freedom. He wants speed—and flexibility. He loves to open 'er up on a smooth country road and feel the wind whiz past his face.

But Mother . . . . she wants comfort and protection—she's thinking of that rainy day when the youngsters have to go to school.

And here at last is a new-type car to meet this old-time family problem.

It's a glorious — joyous — free, airy open car when you want it.

Then when it storms it may be changed to a comfortable, weather-tight enclosed car with complete protection from wind and rain.

Thirty seconds is all it takes—simply lower the roller side enclosures, without even leaving your seat. You've never seen anything like it before.

The Duplex body is framed and shaped in steel. Upper and lower sections are integral. Thus its construction is substantial and its beauty lasting.

It banishes once and for all the trouble of attaching the old-type curtains—makeshift at best.

No more hurried efforts hunting for the right curtain while the storm beats in.

No more exposure, through holes torn in them, while trying to obtain for the emergency, the protection given by a closed car.

To the man unwilling to sacrifice the thrill of open car motoring — to the woman who wants closed car protection right at her finger tips — this car offers a wonderful new adventure — it marks a new era in fine car possession.

In justice to yourself — see the new Duplex now. Only Studebaker makes it.

Health Questions Answered

By Dr. Lewis Baker

An Advertisement Telling How and When to Use Trustworthy Products and Reproducing Extracts of Patrons' Letters Relating to Cadomene, Balmwort, Sulpherb, Arbolone, Su-thol, Mentho-Laxene, Minyol, Hypo-Nuclane, Vilane, Etc.

Dr. Lewis Baker

P. J. H. asks: "I weigh 197 pounds and would like to reduce. Can you recommend a good tablet or pill?"

Answer: I know of nothing better for this purpose than Arbolone tablets, which seem to give almost universal satisfaction to those who take them as per directions with each package.

C. M. A. asks: "Have been a victim of constipation for a long time and now as a result am broken out with ugly pimples and often a dreadful itching of my body. What should I use?"

Answer: Try taking Sulpherb tablets regularly for a few weeks. I am confident they will aid in restoring a healthier condition.

• • •

K. T. T. asks: "My sleep is disturbed a half dozen times each night owing to bladder pressure."

Answer: Quick relief from such a condition usually follows when Balmwort tablets are taken as per directions. They act beneficially on sluggish kidneys and irritated bladder.

M. A. B. asks: "Please advise a remedy to dispel a rheumatic ailment that nearly drives me wild with pain."

Answer: For pain relief take 5 grain Su-thol tablets. Also use Cardiol tablets to aid elimination and assist nature in neutralizing the toxins in the tissues which give rise to rheumatic affections.

B. W. M. asks: "I think I need a building up medicine. Am very nervous, weak and poorly all the time. Hands are cold and moist and have aches and pain at times. Feeling miserable."

Answer: Procure Cadomene tablets and take regularly as a tonic to improve the quality of blood and thus aid in restoring stability to the nervous system.

• • •

W. B. Y. asks: "What is a person to do who is afflicted with dandruff, itching scalp and sore spots due to scratching the scalp?"

Answer: Procure plain yellow Minyol and use as per directions.

W. H. asks: "Have catarrh of nose and upper throat. Mucus drops in throat and almost chokes me. What will help this condition?"

Answer: The regular use of Vilane powder as a nasal douche and gargle. Also use Mentho-Laxene salve in nostrils daily.

• • •

G. W. R. asks: "I am not a consumptive, but have a stubborn cough which nothing does any good. Cough night and day."

Answer: Procure the essence Mentho-Laxene. Use regularly as per directions. It is truly wonderful in relieving any cough due to mild inflammation, colds, etc."

• • •

Miss H. G. asks: "At this season I suffer constantly with a neuralgia and headache so severe that I cannot work. What will aid me?"

Answer: Have your teeth examined and cared for. A good tonic may be needed. To get quick relief from pain take 5-grain Su-thol tablets as per directions.

• • •

A. T. O. asks: "Can you advise a reliable efficient laxative and liver tonic?"

Answer: I suggest Casca-Royal Pills as superior to anything for the gentle laxative action.

NOTE: For many years Dr. Lewis Baker, Medical Director, The Blackburn Products Co., 312 College Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, has been recommending truthful medicines to millions of people through the medium of newspapers, and doubtless has helped in relieving the ailments and minor infirmities of the public more than any single individual in the world's history; and in the most scientific method. The medicines mentioned by him are pure and free from habit forming drugs. They represent the combined wisdom and experience of physician and chemist. Progressive druggists can supply them. By reading his articles you can advise to others you should find a case similar to your own.

A copy of Dr. Baker's great guide book, "Health and Beauty," will be mailed to anyone sending ten cents (coin).

Thousands have written him expressions similar to the following:

LETTERS TO DR. BAKER

PITTSBURG, PA.: Edward C. Kroll, 103 So. 26th St., writes: "I had been troubled with stomach and bowel distress for about 14 months. Had a physician at least once a week prescribing medicine for my trouble. A friend suggested I get a box of Sulpherb tablets. After using three boxes I can say my troubles have disappeared. I have had no trouble for over three months. Many of my friends are now using them, etc."

• • •

PETERSBURG, VA.: W. B. Harrison, Secretary and Treasurer of The Virginia Printing and Manufacturing Co., Bank and Market Streets, writes: "I have been using Casca-Royal Pills for about 20 years. I take one pill every night and have the desired results. Am 82 years old, at my office every day. My good health I attribute largely to these pills and will not be without them and have no unpleasant effect from constant use, etc."

• • •

BARBERTON, OHIO: Mrs. Laureta Mitchell, 426 W. State Street, writes: "I am 49 years old and for the last two years I have been in poor health, but at this writing, after taking Cadomene tablets for two weeks, I am feeling fine. If anyone is suffering from nervousness and in a completely run-down condition, as I was, I can certainly recommend Cadomene tablets very highly."

• • •

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.: Mr. Asa Caldecott, 26 Peckham St., writes: "I feel it a privilege to write to you about Cadomene Mentho-Laxene. I left this country in 1913, joined the British army and served three years in the Royal Engineers in Mesopotamia and Egypt. Coming back from these hot climates to England, I commenced coughing day and night. I arrived in New Bedford in bad health and tried several doctors but got no relief. I could not sleep. I then read your advice in Boston Paper about Mentho-Laxene. I got a bottle, and it was the best thing I ever did. I took four doses full strength and rested better that night than I had for months. After taking the second bottle and using the Mentho-Laxene Salve, I felt like a new man. I used to have colds all winter. Last winter I did not have one. Just by taking a few doses a week, and there are dozens of my friends using it now and they all say the same—"it is the best on the market, etc."

ROCHESTER, N. Y.: Sarah L. Warrant, 355 Rosewood Terrace, writes: "I have had bladder trouble which at times caused me extreme pain. I was advised by a local druggist to purchase a box of Balmwort tablets, which I did, and after taking as per directions, I have been relieved of all the symptoms. I noticed relief the third day after starting. I am fifty years of age and a dressmaker, etc."

• • •

WOODLAWN, PA.: Mrs. A. T. Haney, 440 Sheffield Ave., writes: "I am 74. Have worked near 40 years in the Iron Works. For the past 14 years I have been unable to work steady because of kidney and bladder irregularities. It so reduced me in flesh and strength that I could only do the lightest kind of work. I doctored with many with little relief and was almost ready to give up. Was induced to try Balmwort tablets. At the time my night's rest was disturbed. Before I had used one box I was so much better that I slept well all night. There is nothing I have taken in all the 14 years that has done me as much good as Balmwort tablets, etc."

• • •

RENOVA, PA.: Mrs. H. A. Peters, 1122 Erie Ave., writes: "I took the Arbolone tablets and must say they have done me a lot of good. I weighed 150 pounds. After taking a few days I did not have that stuffy feeling so I kept on and now I weigh 160 pounds. Thanks to you for the good they have done. am telling my over-stout friends, because I know they have never done me any harm. Thanking you again, etc."

NEW GERMAN OIL FORMULA RUBS OUT RHEUMATIC PAINS

Remarkable discovery promises quick soothing relief for rheumatism, gout, neuralgia and neuritis sufferers.

German Chemistry that has given the world the boon of Aspirin for the relief of headache pain, and Novocaine painless dentistry, has now come forward with another scientific discovery that promises to make nerve, joint and muscular pains a thing of the past for thousands who have suffered terrible torture.

A new combination of certain oils has been discovered which produces a clear amber liquid that affords immediate relief from pain in many instances. It is so penetrating that it disappears within a few seconds, so that it may be entirely absorbed by the body tissue. Even in the most advanced and stubborn cases the use of this remarkable oil has shown some soothing improvement at once in many cases. Tired muscles regain life, creaking joints with the pain all gone become supple, and nerves are quickly soothed and the nerve twinges cease.

Rheumatism, gout, neuralgia and neuritis are due to internal infections which throw off poisons. These poisons are carried by the blood to the nerve tissues where they inflame and irritate the nerve sheaths. The New German Oil is designed to neutralize these pain-causing poisons, giving almost instant soothing relief.

So astonishing have been the reports from the use of this oil that the Andrew Jergens Co. has authorized local druggists to dispense it to rheumatic, gout, neuralgia and neuritis sufferers in this city with a positive written guarantee that, by themselves, to return the full purchase price of the first bottle if the pains are not wonderfully relieved. All suffering should take advantage of this liberal offer. Unless you get relief from the very first bottle, your druggist will return your money. It is called Buhler Oil, and may be had at most good druggists, including Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Stores (3 stores), Keiffer Drug Co. (2 stores), Enderle Drug Co. (6 stores), Johnson Bros. Drug Co.

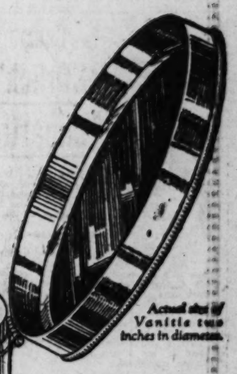
At Last!
Here's a Vanitie for Loose Powder That Cannot Spill

Norida Vanitie
"Refill It Yourself"



Actual size of Vanitie two inches in diameter.

Patented Aug. 5, 1924

1 Turning the Silvered Powder Plate —

Just a slight turn brings forth the powder. The degree of the turn regulates the quantity of powder that comes forth. Automatically locks itself. The powder cannot spill.

2 Taking Up the Loose Powder —

The puff takes up only the powder on the plate. It does not touch the unused powder inside the reservoir.

3 Ready to Refill Reservoir

It takes only a few seconds to refill the case with your favorite loose powder.

Now you can safely carry your favorite loose powder wherever you go

FILLED WITH LOOSE POWDER BUT CANNOT SPILL

Thank goodness no more cake powder!

The Norida Vanitie for Loose Powder is the invention of a famous French beauty expert. It is a dainty, handsomely finished case, which when emptied, you can refill with your favorite powder. The case is equipped with a mirror and small puff.

You, too, will say "thank goodness," for here, at last, is a really practical powder case—the only one you will want after you see it. It does away with the coarse, hard and unsatisfactory powder cake. It holds your favorite soft powder, which you take right from the original package. A patented feature keeps the powder securely sealed all the time. You can hold the case in any position, yet the powder cannot spill. Your powder comes forth only when you want to use it—a few grains to any quantity you desire, without wasting a bit.

You have long wanted something like this—a vanitie that would free you from the use of cake powder—because you know that there can be no satisfactory substitute for soft, loose, fluffy face powder.

The Norida Vanitie is wonderfully clever and so easy to work! It is always ready to use. Simply open the cover, turn the silvered powder plate ever so slightly, and your powder comes forth through tiny perforations in the exact amount you want! (The degree of the turn controls the amount of powder that comes out.) The soft, fluffy powder spreads evenly on the plate. You take it up with the puff and apply it.

Economical to the last degree! Now you need but one kind of powder—the loose, feathery, clinging powder that you use at home—the kind that you will use to refill the Norida Vanitie.

You must see and use the Norida Vanitie for loose powder in order to appreciate it fully. Drug stores, shops and toilet goods counters are being supplied as fast as our distributors can make deliveries.

If you cannot obtain a Norida Vanitie at you dealer's, send coupon below with $1.50. We will mail to you—prepaid—a Norida Vanitie, filled with Fleur Sauvage (wildflower) poudre—a very dainty, fragrant, French Powder, in your favorite shade.

If you are not satisfied with the Norida Vanitie in every way, you may return it and your money will be refunded.

Be sure to get a Norida Vanitie, without delay—at your dealer's—or send coupon.

A Few Reasons Why You Should Have a Norida Vanitie

ECONOMICAL—The first cost is practically the last. With proper care it will last for a long time, much longer than ordinary powder cases. One case is all you need—the same case for any loose powder you wish to use. No waste powder—every bit is used. No more powder cakes to drop and break.

SANITARY—You can use as much or as little powder as the occasion demands. The puff takes up only the powder which is expelled. The rest remains sealed within the powder reservoir—keeps its original, clean, fresh, dry, and fragrant form.

SIMPLE TO OPERATE—No complicated parts—nothing to get out of order. You can hold it upside down or shake it but the powder cannot spill. Note the pictures showing how simple and easy it is to work.

CONVENIENT—It is always ready to serve you. You may carry it in your purse, pocket or shopping bag—at the office or for evening use. It will always be an ever-ready companion—a beauty aid that you will always appreciate.

Norida Vanities Are Also Made in Sterling Silver, Rolled Gold and Gun Metal Finishes, Handsomely Embossed. Ask Your Dealer for Prices

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain. How to Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Voice of Union Labor And Radical Press

Post-Dispatch prints herewith extracts from editorial and other articles in organs of labor unions and the Socialist and Communist parties, showing the tendency of thought on public questions among those bodies of citizens.

WASTE IN INDUSTRY.
(From the Upholsterers' Journal, Labor.)

WE have been told that large incomes and swollen fortunes are the just rewards of management. Management, we are told, is responsible for increased productivity, hence it is entitled to the greatest share of the wealth produced by workers.

This argument is given in "good times" when workers ask for more wages. In "bad times" we are told the fault lies with us. We don't produce enough, we work short hours, the unions restrict the output and prevent the business man from competing with their rivals, is the cry.

Now comes the report of a committee of 15 engineers appointed by Secretary Hoover, which knocks all of the above into a cocked hat and proves that the so-called wiseacres of American business far from being the apostles of efficiency are yearly the cause of waste in industry to the amount of billions of dollars.

In the metal industry, management is found to be responsible for 81 per cent of the waste. The labor turnover in this industry averages 160 per cent, which means an annual waste of $100,000,000 caused by breaking in "new" labor.

Because of the lack of proper medical attention and community hygiene 250,000 workers die needlessly every year. The economic loss from preventable disease and death is $1,800,000,000 annually.

Added to the testimony of the Hoover Committee are facts made public by Commissioner Ethelbert Stewart of the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics. He states that in the manufacture of pig iron there are blast furnaces in which the time cost is one hour and 12 minutes of one man's time per ton of pig iron.

He estimates that if the saw mill plants in the United States all operated under the most efficient plan, instead of 292,000 workers as at present 45,000 men would suffice. There are shoe factories where the output is two pairs per man per day and there are others where it is 12.

All of this bears out that there is much waste due to inefficiency of management and the competitive system. It gives added strength to the position of organized labor that the work-day can and must be made shorter and that we are entitled to more leisure.

The facts prove that there is plenty in this land for all, and yet, it is also a fact that one out of every 10 persons who die in New York City is buried in Potter's Field.

The facts indicate that those who now control industry are not supermen, but rather that they are bunglers who are unfit to manage.

NAVY DAY IN GOPHER PRAIRIE
(From the Daily Worker, Communist.)

IT'S a hard job to get the Atlantic fleet to parade up and down Main street and make all the patriotic hearts rejoice while awesome workers have their hats knocked off by ebullient sons of profiteers. However, the Navy did the best it could to raise the fervor of back-country folk for more and bigger battleships.

In the great cities, where the working class has been well fed on such bunk, the absence of armored cruisers was particularly annoying. The best that could be done was some papers on "port administration" read before the absent-minded members of engineering societies who had been inveigled into coming to a meeting in hope of wetting their lips with liquids too costly to float a battleship.

The one insidious element was the knee-crooking flag raisings, flag waving and flag worshipings carried on in the schools to pollute the children of the workers with the virus of imperialism. This is a sort of vaccination worse than cow pus, but no "humanitarian" arose to protest. But with all of the programs of windy flag wavers, "Navy day" was a fizzle.

WASTE ELIMINATION.
(From the American Federationist, Labor.)

A SIGNIFICANT industrial movement is the campaign for greater simplification of manufactured products. The United States Department of Commerce reports that American industries are giving more serious attention now than ever before to the reduction of industrial waste arising from an unnecessary number of styles, models, sizes, etc. In accordance with a plan worked out under the direction of Secretary Hoover the following industries are working on "simplified lines:"

Lumber, checking waste estimated at $250,000,000 yearly; metal lath, reduced from 125 to 24 varieties; hotel chinaware, 700 items as reduced to 160; forged tools, elimination of 46 per cent in types, etc.; paper, reduced to 8 sizes, etc.; roofing slate, 21 thicknesses to 10; 60 sizes to 30, etc., and blackboard slate, simplified from 90 sizes to 3, etc. A beginning was made July 1 on this program. Equally important changes are scheduled to go into effect Jan. 1.

What industry can do in the field of simplification it can do in other fields. It can move toward greater efficiency, toward better working conditions for the men

RABBI SAMUEL SALE WILL BE HONORED BY ZIONISTS

Organizations to Join in Celebration on Seventieth Birthday of Well-Known Leader.

The combined Zionist organizations of St. Louis will meet today at 2:30 p. m. at United Hebrew Temple to honor Rabbi Samuel Sale on the occasion of his seventieth birthday. As honorary chairman of the Palestine Foundation Fund for the Southwestern Keren Hayesod Region, Dr. Sale is the recognized leader of the Zionist movement in St. Louis. He has served for years as a member of the National Executive Committee of the Zionist Organization and has traveled extensively in behalf of the movement.

The program will include addresses by the Rev. W. C. Bitting of Second Baptist Church, George S. Johns editor of the editorial page of the Post-Dispatch, and Prof. Gustave Klausner, chairman of the St. Louis Zionist district.

VOICE OF UNION LABOR AND THE RADICAL PRESS

and women who do the productive toil, toward greater service to the public which buys and uses its products. In fact, industry is already at work on thosep roblems. The molders' trade long ago took action along these lines in Ohio. Recent illustrations are given by the action of the paper box trade in moving to eliminate various abuses and by the action of the women's garment trade, spurred by the organized workers, in moving to stabilize the trade and in eliminating cheap and shoddy goods. The elimination of waste in industry and the development of both management and organization methods make all creative effort more effective and more economical, hence increases the materials that contribute to better living for all.

The Age of Individualism.
(From the St. Louis Labor, Socialist.)

THIS is the age of individualism, we are told by wise men and others every day, and one of the great thinkers of the world informs us that individuality is the root of everything. In other words, where a man acts independently and gladly assumes full personal responsibility for what he is doing, he is on the right tracks. For individuality, as we look upon it, means intellectual independence and a cheerful readiness to assume responsibility. • • •

How many workmen can follow the laws of their individuality? How much individuality is possible in the factory, in the workshop, in the spinning mill, in the sweatshop, or even on the farm, where economic pressure is no less acute than in industry? Where in our modern life, regulated by the factory whistle and the market reports, does individuality find an opportunity to develop and unfold itself?

THE LOW-DOWN ON COURTS.
(From the Daily Worker, Communist.)

NEXT to an open demand for the confiscation of natural resources now held by the capitalists, nothing arouses such intense antagonism from the most powerful sections of the capitalist press as a criticism of the courts or proposals to curtail their powers in any way.

It is common knowledge that the courts are bulwarks of the capitalist system, but the exact manner in which they function in America, the all-important role they play, is known to but few.

In Professor Beard's "American Government and Politics" we find the following statement made by ex-President Hadley of Yale University, an acknowledged authority on American jurisprudence:

"When it is said, as it commonly is, that the fundamental division of powers in the modern state is into legislative, executive and judicial, the student of American institutions may fairly note an exception. The fundamental division of powers under the Constitution of the United States is between voters on the one hand and property owners on the other. The forces of democracy on the one side, divided between the legislative and executive, are set over against the forces of property on the other, with the judiciary as arbiter between them.

"This theory of American politics has not often been stated. But it has been universally acted upon.

"The general status of the property owner under the law cannot be changed by the action of the Legislature, or the executive, or the people of a State voting at the polls, or all three put together."

This is fairly clear. The courts are the only authority that legally can change the existing relationships between property owners and the propertyless. They are the obstacle, powerful because accepted, between the masses of workers and the minority of landlords, financiers and industrial lords. Back of their decisions there stand, of course, the armed forces of capitalistic government, but the courts are the first line of American capitalism's defense.

It is their task—and they do it well—to give the proper sense of error to any rash person or group that challenges the right of the few idlers to rob the many toilers—to preserve the legal fiction of democracy in a nation where by no possible legal enactment can the natural resources and the machinery of production come into the hands of the masses.

Any agency whose sole task is to legalize robbery is too sacred to be tempered with. Therefore the wild howls of rage that arise from capitalism's spokesmen whenever courts are criticised.

BUILDING A TOOTH

Good teeth are built out of vital foods. Building a tooth is not the simple process it seems. Nature regards it so important that she takes a long time to perfect one.

Scott's Emulsion

supplies elements needful to aid normal growth and construct sound bones and strong teeth.

A food-tonic of rare value, Scott's Emulsion gives the best results when taken regularly after meals. Try it.

The Easiest Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely, and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly; and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

Snake Oil

STOPS PAIN

From coast to coast men and women are singing the praise of "Snake Oil," a most powerful, penetrating pain-relieving liniment. It will penetrate thickest sole leather in 3 minutes. Mrs. B. Werner, New Orleans, La., writes: "Thanks to your wonderful penetrating oil, it relieved me of Rheumatism and deep-seated chest cold after other remedies failed."

"I had rheumatism so bad I had to walk on crutches for nine years," says H. C. Hendrix, old soldier of Minneapolis, Minn. "After three months' treatment with 'Snake Oil' I laid off my crutches and now can walk like a boy."

J. B. Moore, Pittsburg, Pa., railroad man, says: "'Snake Oil' is the only liniment that ever gave me relief from rheumatism. I use it regular after being exposed to bad weather." For rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, stiff joints, pain in back and limbs, corns, bunions, chest colds, sore throat, "Snake Oil" is said to be without an equal. Refuse imitations, nothing like it. Get it from your druggist.

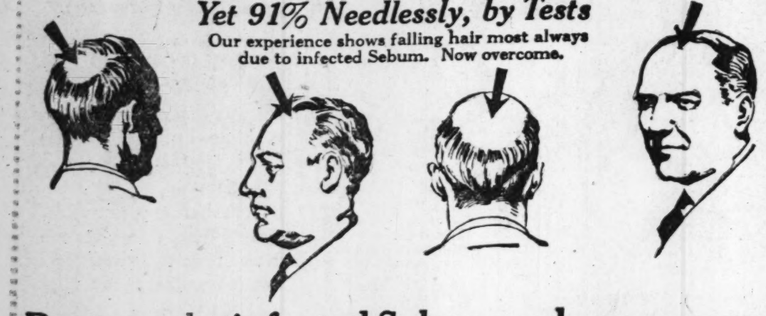
4 Men in 7 Bald at 40

Yet 91% Needlessly, by Tests

Our experience shows falling hair most always due to infected Sebum. Now overcome.



Remove the infected Sebum and you remove the cause of most baldness

Written Guarantee to Grow Hair, or Money Back

This is a direct offer to grow hair on your head. An offer backed by our written guarantee, given by your own Drug or Department Store. If we fail, it costs you nothing.

We have recently made amazing discoveries. We have proven that while 4 men in 7 are either bald, or partly bald, at 40, only about 9 men in a hundred need ever be bald.

Hair roots seldom die from natural causes. They can be revived. We have proved this by regrowing hair on 91 heads in 100.

Highest authorities approve this new way. Great dermatologists now employ similar methods—many charge as much as $300 for similar basic treatment.

Baldness is a symptom of a disease. Note this fact and mark it. It is most frequently a symptom of infection of the Sebum—the scalp oil.

Infected Sebum

Sebum is an oil. It forms at the follicles of the hair. Its purpose is to lubricate the hair.

But it often becomes infected. It cakes on the scalp; clogs the follicles and plugs them. Germs by the millions then start to feed upon the hair. Semi-baldness comes first; then with neglect comes total baldness.

Remove that infection and your hair will generally grow. We back this statement with a money-back guarantee. Hence it is folly for any man with falling hair not to make the test.

Now We Remove It

Our treatment is based on a new principle. It penetrates to the follicles of the hair. It relieves infection—removes the infected Sebum. It stops falling hair. It revives the dormant hair roots, generally makes new hair grow. Remember, it is guaranteed.

Warrant Given by Your Dealer

No red tape. The guarantee is positive. You are the judge. Your own Drug or Department Store gives it with each 3-bottle purchase. Go today, ask them for the Van Ess Treatment. The guarantee will accompany it. If the treatment fails—your money back.

Over 400,000 men have tested Van Ess under this same guarantee.

WOMAN WIDELY KNOWN IN CONTRACTING INDUSTRY DEAD

Mrs. George A. Riddle Was Office Manager of Wise Construction Company 15 Years.

Mrs. G. A. Riddle

The funeral of the late Mrs. George A. Riddle, who was widely known among St. Louis building material and contracting firms from her long association with that industry, prior to her marriage, two years ago, to the president of the Riddle Slate and Roofing Co., was held Tuesday with burial in Valhalla Cemetery. She came to St. Louis as Miss Alice Crone, from Greene County, Illinois, where she had been teaching school, and secured employment with the J. H. Wise Construction Co., for which firm she was for 15 years office manager.

Mrs. Riddle since her marriage had resided at 6174 Washington avenue. While visiting the Zoo in Forest Park in company with some Eastern friends Saturday she was seized with an attack of apoplexy from which she died a few hours later at St. John's Hospital.

GEORGE ELIOT'S HUSBAND DIES IN ENGLAND AT 84

Wrote Biography of Famous Authoress Wife and Articles on Sports.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Although George Eliot is known as one of the world's greatest writers, her husband, John Walter Cross, attained less fame. Most people even in England had forgotten his existence until the announcement of his death a few days ago at the age of 84. He was buried at Highgate Cemetery, near the resting place of his famous wife. There was only a simple ceremony and only five mourners attended.

Cross, who started life as a banker, spent many years in America, including those of the Civil War period. He first met the writer and her first husband, George Henry Lewes, in 1869 and was one of their closest friends. After Lewes' death, the friendship continued.

Although Cross was 20 years younger than the distinguished authoress, she finally consented to marry him in 1880, a few months before her death. After the loss of his wife, Cross devoted himself to writing, his works including a biography of his wife and articles on mountaineering and other outdoor sports.

to have had irons in many fires. It will take at least the two years we are allowed to approach complete liquidation and it may take five years before the last item is cleared up. I can make no estimate as to the shortage, but I would say that the percentage of bad paper would run very high."

It is understood that with the exception of the Farmers' Loan and Banking Co. certificates of deposit, for which no money has been found, there are no other apparent defalcations. The other possible case on which Graper might have been convicted was that he had put up collateral in 1922 to secure doubtful paper and then had assigned this collateral to his wife. This fact may become the basis of a suit to recover from Mrs. Graper some of the fortune left her.

Because of her feud with the townspeople, Mrs. Graper cannot be looked to for help in case the bank shortage and the surety bond situation lay heavy drain on the purses of the community. She has engaged lawyers to defend her rights.

The liabilities of the bank are listed as: Deposits, $634,026.26; capital stock, $80,000; bills payable, $145,000; surety bond, $350,000. The asssets are loans and discounts, $782,220.76; bonds and [illegible] 207; bank building, $[illegible] estate, $12,300.

YOUR PILES STOP!

When Treated From the Inside

Have Ointments, Salves, Dilators or Other Local Makeshifts Cured Your Piles So They Won't Come Back?
Such Treatments Never Heal Where They Can Not Reach.

Reaching the REAL Trouble From the INSIDE Is the Common Sense Way—the Surest Method. That Is the Page System of Treatment.

As a Last Resort After Trying Every Conceivable Treatment for the Cure of Piles, Thousands Have Been Healed by the Page Internal Treatment.
A Trial Treatment Sent FREE if You Mail Coupon.

Why suffer any longer? Get rid of the irritation—the agony—nights without sleep—days when the least effort of working grinds on you like a worn-out cog.

And Piles are to the body just as a broken, worn-out cog is to a machine. There is the grind and irritation. You feel as though every muscle, every fiber, every nerve, were tied in a knot—tense and strained. Before others you are embarrassed and bothered by the itching irritation when it is most important to appear calm. You feel grouchy. It is hard to smile and be yourself.

If your watch, your automobile, or any other piece of mechanism had a broken cog you wou'd have it fixed. It is just as easy and a thousand times more important to make up your mind to cure your Piles. Since you know the real trouble is on the inside and that the Page System for the cure of Piles starts from the inside instead of the outside—sign and mail the coupon for the FREE Trial Package Now.

No matter how severe your case may be. Even though in desperation you are thinking of an operation. No matter how many years you have suffered, be it five, ten, or thirty-five years—no matter what your age, be it ten or nine times ten, the Page Method will bring quick relief. You will be just as thankful as thousands who write that they feel themselves to be permanently cured.

The Page Method is different. It starts from the inside and heals. It is the one most reliable, surest, dependable remedy for the treatment of Piles. Send the coupon now. It will cost not a single penny until you are convinced of the results. On receipt of your name and address a trial package will be sent you absolutely FREE—as fast as the mails can carry it.

Just Chew a Pleasant Tablet.

Your Piles Go and Do Not Come Back.

A Broken Cog Will Wreck a Whole Machine.

One Little Touch of Piles Will Wreck the Human Machine, Spoil Your Disposition, Unfit You for Your Work and Eventually Ruin Your General Health.

Mend That Cog; Heal Those Piles.

Convince yourself of the healing qualities of the Page Method for the Internal Treatment of Piles by sending for the FREE TEST. You will feel like a new person—enjoy sleep, be calm and energetic in your work, and relaxed for an evening's pleasure. Your mind and body can be depended upon to give quick and sure response to the duties and demands of daily life. Once gone—the right way, Piles will not come every few weeks.

The most important part of the Page System for the cure of Piles is the little Page Pile Tablet and you will enjoy chewing one or two after meals. This reaches the inside, where the real trouble is. The Treatment also includes a wonderful ointment for temporary use while the tablets are taking effect, and a bowel regulator.

This System for the Cure of Piles is the result of twenty-five years' experience with every form of Piles, carrying the endorsement of thousands who tell the cure of Pile cases. It goes further than a treatment prepared to give relief for the moment. Its purpose is to cure Piles permanently by treating them from the inside instead of the outside.

Take the time now, forget all that you have tried or thought of trying—sign the coupon and prove the truth of these statements to yourself. Remember the treating of Piles from the inside instead of the outside has been thoroughly proven. It heals. Read the letters on this page. Note the years that others have suffered and then found health and happiness. Many who followed this treatment twenty years ago still report not the slightest trace of returning Piles. Many who have taken just the trial package have been healed. Note that a patient with a case of bleeding Piles for ten or twelve years is reported on this page as completely healed after taking the Page Internal Treatment.

Letters come to us daily like these you read on this page. We have enough of them in our offices to keep you reading for many days. Yet the proof is what the Page Internal Treatment can do for you.

Had Both Protruding and Bleeding Piles

E. R. Page, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir: Your month's treatment for Piles received. Used according to directions and am very glad to write you and let you know results. I was in very bad shape with protruding and bleeding Piles for ten or twelve years. Have used one month's treatment and Piles apparently all gone. If you care to use this testimonial you are welcome to do so. Respectfully yours,

S. P. REXFORD,
304 Glasby St., Saginaw, Mich.

One Small Treatment Was Enough to Cure

Mr. E. R. Page, Marshall, Mich.

Dear Sir: I sent for a small sized treatment of your Pile remedy and by the time I had used it all I was entirely well. Have had no symptoms of Piles since. This was in May, 1923, when I received the treatment. I cannot praise your remedy too highly. You may publish this if you wish.

Yours very truly,
H. S. HULL,
E2714 1st Ave., Spokane, Wash.

Praise from a Minister.

E. R. Page, Marshall, Mich.

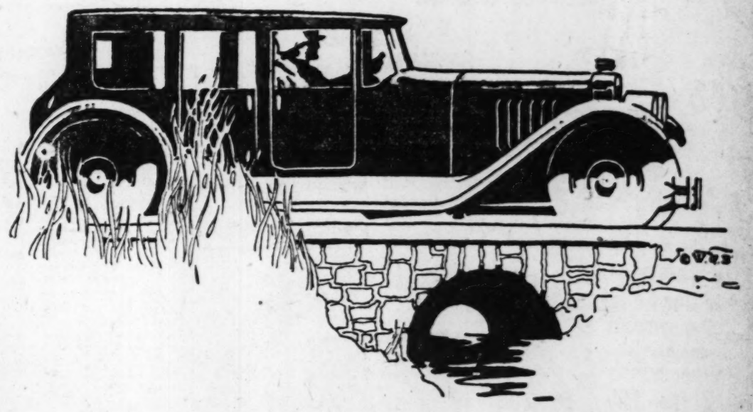
Dear Sir: Just a few lines to you in regard to your treatment for Piles. I have taken medicine as you directed. I was, when the medicine came, flat on my back for three weeks, when taking it as you directed brought relief to me such as I have not realized in 20 years. Any time you can use my testimonial I will be delighted to speak for it with the highest of praise. I feel there cannot be too much said in regard to this wonderful treatment.

Your brother,
REV. C. S. DRISKELL.
Houghton, S. D.

Worth a Million to Him

E. R. Page Co., Marshall, Mich.

Gentlemen: It gives me great pleasure to inform you that I have used your Pile treatment as per directions and can state that it has positively cured me. I was bothered with bleeding Piles for 20 years and was operated on once for them. I want to say that E. R. Page's Pile Treatment was worth a million to me. If the use of this letter will prove of benefit to others who may be suffering from Piles, you have my permission to use it as you see fit. Respectfully yours,
Ottumwa, Iowa. JAMES MARSH.



Combine City and Country With an Automobile

An English novelist once said: "I want my body to live in the country; my mind in the city."

What he really meant was that both have rare advantages not easily dispensed with.

The claims of country life are strong; wide spaces, clean air, peace and quiet, refreshing sleep, a garden and a playground for the children.

And yet many people—like the English novelist—want to keep the city mind and the cultural opportunities of theaters, lectures and concerts. There is the atmosphere of intellectual action, the thrill of movement itself. To part with all this is not easy.

What to do? Have a car and combine the two. It's a complete solution.

Wherever you live, it enables you and your family to make the best of both worlds; nature and civilization.

A car is also an economizer of time, of effort and of money, regardless of its cost.

And speaking of cost, that can be just about what you want to make it. New cars naturally cost more than those that have seen service, but the latter gives much of the pleasure and comfort at a cost that makes car ownership a possibility for practically everybody.

There are some rare used values on the market now, and the choicest of them will go to those who read and follow up the offerings in the classified "Automobiles" columns of the

IVY POISON ECZEMA

If you are among that vast throng of sufferers in which there is redness of the skin, itching, infiltration, tendency to moisture crusting or scaling, cracking of the skin, you have eczema—

Whitmarsh Elixir will bring you relief in 48 hours and in 3 to 6 weeks will eradicate the trouble from your system.

If you annually have attacks of redness of the skin with burning or itching, with swellings followed by a vast number of small, closely crowded vesicles resembling reddened "goose flesh" you have ivy, oak or sumach poisoning.

In 48 hours Whitmarsh Elixir will bring such relief and so reduce the distress as to make it unquestioned that this remarkable remedy is a specific for vegetable poison.

If you are troubled with acne, psoriasis, rash, boils and skin humours characterized by inflammatory redness and cannot trace these exudations to any definite cause it is more than likely they are due to a form of eczema or a recurrent vegetable poison—

In either case the use of Whitmarsh Elixir will bring such wonderful relief in a few hours and such startling improvement in appearance in 48 hours as to leave no doubt as to the specific nature of this remarkable remedy.

If you have tried every salve, ointment, lotion, prescription or treatment ever heard of and yet those distressing crusts, scales, itching and burning either persist or return shortly, it proves as it has proven for half a century that you merely suppress the trouble.

Whitmarsh Elixir does not suppress. It goes to the source. It stops the processes that form the disease. It causes the disease to quit, dry up, fade away, and thus act as a specific, a real remedy, that actually brings about complete and lasting recovery — and

You Can Prove It Without Cost

Anyone who has even a touch of skin rash, pimples, acne, itching, scaly spots or the more fiery, burning variety of eczema, should send at once for a free trial of Whitmarsh Elixir. And if the skin breaks out into the more violent form of ivy poison or from any of the numerous vines, shrubs or plants known to poison the skin, don't fail to send for the free trial.

Whitmarsh Elixir is the discovery of a real woodsman, a man who lived in the timbered country, an old-school doctor who knew plant life, who understood the nature of poison plants and their action on the skin. And with his Elixir, prepared from antagonistic properties and antidotal vegetable alkaloids, he stopped the various rashes so completely and gave relief so quickly in the most violent out-breaks of the poison that he became a wizard to the lumber-jacks as he has become a blessing to thousands of sufferers in the more settled regions.

So send for the free trial of this wonderful remedy, the most remarkable antidote known for any skin trouble due to blood humours or vegetable poisons.

It is not a salve, ointment, lotion or dressing. You cannot get rid of blood humours or skin eruptions that way. Whitmarsh Elixir reaches the cause of the trouble, stops it, prevents its further inroads, and the blood thus cleared begins the repair of the skin. In 48 hours you see the result.

Don't fail to send for this free trial. Do it now.

Whitmarsh Laboratories, Adrian, Michigan.

My Dear Friends:

At last I have found it! Whitmarsh's Elixir cured me of Eczema, after suffering for over 12 years and trying everything I could hear of.

A little over 2 years ago, my druggist recommended the Elixir to me and 7 bottles completely cured me and I have not been bothered since. It would take many sheets of paper to tell you all the different things, remedies and prescriptions I used for my Eczema. I had often heard of Whitmarsh Elixir, but thought it was only for ivy poison, never dreaming that maybe that was what I had. Thus I went from year to year at times in the greatest misery, unable to sleep night after night and nothing to give me more than temporary relief.

Finally, when the druggist said he knew lots of people like me that had been cured of Eczema with the Elixir I concluded to use it, and that was the best thing I ever did.

Very truly yours,

FOREST PARK HOTEL TRANSFERRED AT P SAID TO BE $

Sale Made by Stock Transfer an Believed to Be a Group of E Capitalists.

By Berry Moore.

The salient feature of the week in realty was an operation through which the Forest Park Hotel, occupying approximately a block at the northwest corner of Euclid avenue and West Pine boulevard, changed control at a reputed valuation of $[illegible],000.

While no announcement to this effect has been made, the purchasers, it is understood, are Eastern capitalists. The deal was engineered by M. H. Rodemyer & Co., with offices in the Title Guaranty Building, to which the management of the property has been transferred.

Sale was made by the transfer of stock in the Forest Park Hotel Investment Co., in which the title is vested, rather than by deed or the property, which would have disclosed the identity of the purchasers.

The purchase, following fast in the wake of the national election, is regarded as significant of the sentiment of the investing public.

Modern Six-Story Building.

The Forest Park Hotel was built about three years ago by Alex. M. Cornwell and F. J. Cornwell of the F. J. Cornwell & Son Real Estate Co., and Charles P. Bland, formerly of Williams & Bland, with the Forest Park Hotel Investment Co. as the holding corporation. The building, a six-story structure, occupies a block bounded by West Pine boulevard, Euclid avenue, Buckingham court and North court, and is a model of advanced hotel construction. It is a modern fireproof structure comprising 320 rooms, with approximately 27 suites to the floor, arranged in two, three and four room units. These suites are planned so that rooms may be added or deducted, thus giving an elasticity of units seldom, if ever, found in buildings of this character.

The main entrance, which is on West Pine boulevard, gives access to a spacious lobby, to the right of which is the lounge, through which one passes to the main dining-room. To the left of the lobby is a large banquet room. Opening off the main lobby at the south side is a splendid loggia or orangerie, through which is reached the large ballroom in the southwest wing of the building. This loggia overlooks a large part of the court, 125 feet square, one of the most attractive features of the building. The south end of the court is bounded by a balustrade wall of brick and terra cotta. The building was designed by Preston J. Bradshaw, architect.

NEW THEATER TO BE BUILT DOWNTOWN

Plans and specifications are being prepared by architects for the erection of a theater seating 2000 persons on two floors to house "Mutual Burlesque" attractions. The building will be in the downtown business section and will be ready for occupancy by May 1, next. There will be offices and stores in the building.

The theater will be occupied by the lessees and operators of the Garrick Theater, of which Joseph Oppenheimer is the head, and who also controls the Garrick Theater in Des Moines, Ia., and the Lyric Theater at Forty-Second street and Broadway in New York City.

According to Oppenheimer, the Garrick Theater is entirely too small to accommodate the patronage. Many hundreds of persons who can attend only on Saturdays and Sundays are unable to obtain seats. In order to make the "Downtown Night Life" of St. Louis an established custom, the new theater will be near the Garrick.

The policy that prevails at the Garick will be adhered to by the new house which also contemplates popular prices.

SCHOOL BOARD BUYS SITE AT SEVENTH AND VICTOR STS.

The Board of Education has purchased a half a block of ground on Seventh and Victor streets from the Waldstein Lumber Co. to enlarge the playgrounds of the Humboldt School. The purchase was made through the Yeckel-Feydt-Earickson Realty Co., which represented both parties. The Waldstein company will move to the Times Building.

FOREST PARK HOTEL IS TRANSFERRED AT FIGURE SAID TO BE $1,800,000

Sale Made by Stock Transfer and Purchasers Believed to Be a Group of Eastern Capitalists.

By Berry Moore.

The salient feature of the week in realty was an operation through which the Forest Park Hotel, occupying approximately a block at the northwest corner of Euclid avenue, and West Pine boulevard, changed control at a reputed valuation of $1,800,000.

While no announcement to this effect has been made, the purchasers, it is understood, are Eastern capitalists. The deal was engineered by M. H. Rodemyer & Co., with offices in the Title Guaranty Building, to which the management of the property has been transferred.

Sale was made by the transfer of stock in the Forest Park Hotel Investment Co., in which the title is vested, rather than by deed or the property, which would have disclosed the identity of the purchasers.

The purchase, following fast in the wake of the national election, is regarded as significant of the sentiment of the investing public.

Modern Six-Story Building.

The Forest Park Hotel was built about three years ago by Alex. M. Cornwell and F. J. Cornwell of the F. J. Cornwell & Son Real Estate Co., and Charles P. Bland, formerly of Williams & Bland, with the Forest Park Hotel Investment Co. as the holding corporation. To the left of the lobby is a large banquet room. Opening off the main lobby at the south side is a splendid loggia or orangerie, through which is reached the large ballroom in the southwest wing of the building. This loggia overlooks a large part of the court, 125 feet square, one of the most attractive features of the building. The south end of the court is bounded by a balustrade wall of brick and terra cotta. The building was designed by Preston J. Bradshaw, architect.

The 10-story Melbourne Hotel at the northwest corner of Lindell and West Pine boulevards also was built by Alex M. and F. J. Cornwell and Charles P. Bland, whose enterprise is exemplified in many other large apartment and hotel structures in the West End.

More Buoyant Since Election.

Real estate as a whole has displayed more buoyancy since the election, especially in the investment fields, which is said to be due to the fact that execution of many deals had been held in abeyance as a precautionary measure. A strong market is developing in the business centers, in which a resumption of building operations on a large scale soon will be in full swing, from all surface indications. Sites in the central business district are now being taken under option for important building projects of various kinds, involving notably office structures, hotels and theaters.

NEW THEATER TO BE BUILT DOWNTOWN

Plans and specifications are being prepared by architects for the erection of a theater seating 2000 persons on two floors to house "Mutual Burlesque" attractions. The building will be in the downtown business section and will be ready for occupancy by May 1, next. There will be offices and stores in the building.

The purchase was made through the Yeckel-Feydt-Earickson Realty Co., which represented both parties. The Waldstein company will move to the Times Building.

ADDITION TO CHANDEYSSON PLANT NEAR COMPLETION

The first unit of the new $175,000 addition to the Chandeysson Electric Co. plant at 4092 Bingham avenue is nearing completion. This addition was designed and is being handled in its entirety by the Widmer Engineering Co. The addition when finally completed will be 360 feet long.

The new building will serve primarily as a warehouse for both raw materials and finished products, it also being the intention to ultimately remove the testing department to the new addition to facilitate the testing and handling of the heavier apparatus.

On the west side a spur of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. enters the center of the building, which is equipped with a 30-ton crane.

The building is 50 feet wide and 50 feet high. It is constructed entirely of reinforced concrete. Reinforced concrete girders four feet high span 50 feet clear across the building and rest on concrete columns arising unsupported throughout their height of 50 feet in the air.

PREISLER - GROSCHAN REALTY CO. IS ORGANIZED

Announcement is made of the organization of the Preisler-Groschan Realty Co., which will do a general real estate and loan business. The offices will be at 209-210 Title Guaranty Building.

Members of the new firm are Edward H. Preisler, president, who has been engaged in the real estate business for several years; F. Carroll Groschan, secretary and treasurer, recently with the Franciscus Realty Co., and William R. Groschan, vice president.

TODAY 25TH ANNIVERSARY OF MERCANTILE TRUST CO.

Today is the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Mercantile Trust Co., which opened for business Nov. 16, 1899, in what is now the Columbia Building, on the southeast corner of Eighth and Locust streets. The trust company succeeded the Anderson-Wade Realty Co., outgrowth of the Hammett-Anderson-Wade Real Estate Co. of the early nineties.

Like its forerunners, the Mercantile Trust Co. has always been an active factor in the St. Louis real estate field, specializing in the management, rental and sale of property in addition to making first mortgage loans on real estate security in St. Louis and elsewhere. Many notable St. Louis buildings have been financed on this plan, the most recent including St. Mary's Hospital and Loew's State Theater.

Seven of the original 18 employes are still in the service of the company, including Festus J. Wade, who was then and is today the president. The other 25-year men are George W. Wilson, William Maffitt, C. H. McMihen, J. B. Meberly, Edward Lee and Dave Smith. Last Ttursday night a dinner dance was given in honor of these men at the Chase Hotel, and a scroll signed by the 400 employes of the company was presented to them.

10-ROOM RESIDENCE IN MARYLAND TERRACE SOLD

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Park Saunders, 7007 Maryland drive, in Maryland Terrace, in University City, has been purchased by George Kriegshauser through McNair-Bake-well. The house has 10 rooms and two baths and there is a garage for two cars.

E. T. NOLAND PURCHASES WASHINGTON TERRACE HOME

E. T. Noland has purchased, through Albert T. Terry & Co., the stone house known as the Fordyce home, at 21 Washington terrace, but formerly owned by Col. David S. Stanley of Washington, D. C. Noland is vice president of the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. The house has 16 rooms finished in hardwood, and three bathrooms. The premises includes a garage for several cars. The lot frontage is 100 feet. After repairs and alterations, Mr. and Mrs. Noland will occupy the house.

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE TO HOLD LUNCHEON TUESDAY

The St. Louis Real Estate Exchange will hold a luncheon for its members and salesmen in Parlor "D" of the City Club on Tuesday at 12:15 p. m. There will be a musical and a speaker will discuss "Visualization of the Real Estate Business."

FOR ADDITIONAL REAL ESTATE NEWS SEE PAGE 7S, PART 2.

"REALTOR" IS BASIS OF INJUNCTION SUIT

Real Estate Exchange Will Test Right of Nonmember to Use Term.

Suit for an injunction was filed yesterday by the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange and the National Association of Real Estate Boards to protect the right of members to the exclusive use of the term "realtor" in advertising their real estate business. It is a test suit, directed against Herbert F. Levy, a realty dealer at 320 North Grand boulevard, who, it is alleged, is using the term on his office sign, business cards and other advertising matter, although he is not a member of the local real estate organization.

According to the petition, the word was coined by a Minneapolis realty dealer, who donated it to the Minneapolis Exchange, which, in turn, donated it to the national body for use of all its exchanges. There are 500 such local exchanges, including the one here, whose members have the right to use the word, it is set forth. The petition states that the privilege is a valuable right, carrying with it a recommendation and indorsement of those privileged to use it.

Circuit Judge Pearcy cited Levy to show cause, if any, on Nov. 20, why an injunction should not be issued.

JOHN F. SHEPLEY HOUSE SOLD TO WILLIAM B. DEAN

Instruments were filed with the Recorder of Deeds office yesterday transferring the residence of John F. Shepley, 53 Portland place, to William B. Dean Jr. and wife. The Deans live at 4422 Westminster place.

Mrs. Dean admitted the purchase of the property, but refused to give the details of the transaction. The consideration named in the deed was $100. Albert T. Terry represented the Shepleys in the transaction.

Shepley has purchased 4943 Washington avenue of Harold McMillan Bixby, through the Cornet & Zeibig Trust, in connection with Albert T. Terry & Co. The house, having 14 rooms, four baths and garage, will be occupied by Shepley after alterations.

Bixby's new home on the Ladue road in St. Louis County, just west of the new St. Louis Country Club, will be completed soon.

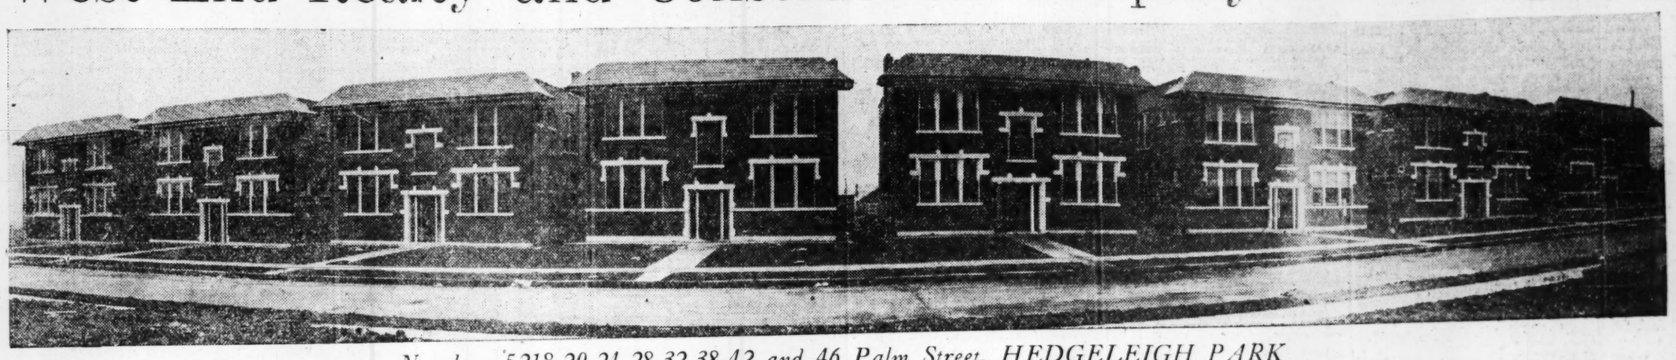
West End Realty and Construction Company Scores Again!



Numbers 5218-20-24-28-32-38-42 and 46 Palm Street, HEDGELEIGH PARK
BUSH-BURNS Realty Company's Newest Subdivision in Northwest St. Louis

THE West End Realty & Construction Company has just completed this handsome group of eight double apartment buildings in HEDGELEIGH PARK, and have scored a new record in the fact that these eight buildings were all sold during the process of building, the last one six weeks before the completion of the job.

The buyer who watches a building go up, and sees how it is built, and the materials that go into its construction, KNOWS what he is buying. No one has to "tell him!" It was the quality of the materials used in these buildings, and the care with which they were constructed, that sold them to their present owners.

The WEST END REALTY COMPANY has also sold two (2) additional buildings from the plans of still another group of fifteen (15) buildings which they are erecting in the 5100 block on Palm Street. This new group—on which construction is rapidly progressing — will comprise ten (10) four-family apartment flat buildings and five (5) single flats. The single flats in this last group will be of an exceptional character and will contain the most modern innovations—including genuine Murphy Beds. There are thirteen of this last group still for sale, and it is our expectation that they also will be sold before completion.

The character of the materials used in these buildings is guaranteed by the high standing of the following sub-contractors in the building world. These firms, whose cards appear below, each completed their share of the job in record time, and in a manner to satisfy the most critical inspection.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity, when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

E. A. B.—Take the paper to a dealer in second-hand books in order to determine whether or not it has any value.

ANXIOUS.—A city directory of Detroit, Mich., can be seen at the Polk-Gould Directory Co., 204 North Seventh street, St. Louis.

PEGGY. — Write to the "Billboard," Cincinnati, O., for the information regarding the orchestra in question.

O'FALLON.—There are no religious qualifications necessary for the presidency of the United States.

W. M. S.—The silver dollar dated 1843, Liberty seated, is worth $1.10; the silver dollar dated 1858 is worth from $12 to $23.

H. B.—Call the bus company in question regarding the ruling that oil and the automobile company regarding the use of the oil in the car in question.

A. G.—Lake Superior is the largest body of fresh water in the world. Its length, east to west, is about 400 miles, with a mean breadth of about 80 miles, so that its area may be taken at 32,000 square miles. The maximum depth recorded is 1008 feet and the height of its surface is about 602 feet above the Atlantic. It receives upward of 200 rivers. The lake embosoms many large and well wooded islands, the chief of which is the Isle Royale.

N. N.—The Washington monument does not stand upon rock, but upon a small hill that is hardly more than a mound, the formation of which was anciently a part of the shifting sands of the Potomac River. The top of the hill is only 26 feet above the river level at low tide. The monument was completed Dec. 6, 1884, and was dedicated Feb. 21, 1885. The shaft itself is an iron tower within a stone tower. It is 555 feet 5½ inches high, has a base 55 feet square, tapers one-fourth of an inch to the foot and is faced with marble-backed rubble up to 150 feet. Above that the backing is of dressed New England granite for 200 feet, beyond which the structure is all marble. The top of the monument has the form of a pyramid 55 feet high, the cap piece being of iron, with a cap piece of pure aluminum 9 inches high. To protect the shaft against lightning this cap piece is connected with a copper wire which runs down to a well in the middle of the foundation. The obelisk weighs more than 81,000 tons. The foundation has a depth of 38 feet and the pressure upon its per square foot is nine tons. Every tremor of the monument is observed and recorded with the help of a lead plummet suspended from the top of the shaft by a copper wire. Substantial though its construction is, the structure sways perceptibly during a high wind. A big storm will bend it as much as half an inch out of the perpendicular. In summer it is slightly taller than in winter because of the expansion of the stone by heat, and in the latter season the width of the south side of the base is half an inch greater than that of the other sides. The engineers to whom has been given the task of protecting the monument against the dangers of a shifting base have said the structure will be forever unless destroyed by an earthquake.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

MADGE.—She can go into bankruptcy. Consult a lawyer regarding filing bankruptcy proceedings.

R. C. B.—He can refuse to sell to a person, unless he has previously offered to sell to such person.

MRS. E. S.—You can sue him in a Justice of the Peace Court for the remaining $20. That is the only way to get it, if he refuses to pay.

LAFAYETTE.—The Government has Indian reservations; it also has land which is open for settlement. For information regarding the latter write to the Commissioner of the Public Land Office, Washington, D. C.

THANK YOU. — Under the circumstances the girl probably could not have a marriage annulled now. The fact that they do not love each other would not in itself be sufficient ground for a divorce. Desertion for one year is indefinable indignities would be a sufficient ground.

ANXIOUS MOTHER.—If he paid her railroad fare in order that he might have the right to have improper relations with her, that would be a violation of the Mann Act. If he had no immoral motive and no immoral conduct occurred, there would be no violation of the law.

G. A. M.—Unless your wife has been absent for seven successive years without being known to you to be living, you will be guilty of bigamy if you marry again without first obtaining a divorce. Bigamy can be punished by imprisonment for not more than five years or by a fine of not less than $500, or by both fine and imprisonment. It would be much wiser to obtain a divorce before marrying again, as if you married without a divorce and your first wife turned up later your second marriage would not be legal.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

A. G. M.—Apply at Room 35, Municipal Courts Building, for the blood test. The clinic is open at night until 10 o'clock.

HELEN B.—The condition of the stomach is caused by gas. We suggest a five-grain capsule of salol, three or four times a day.

MRS. T. L.—We do not recognize the condition from your description. Please advise that you consult a physician.

MOTHER.—You should have the arches of your feet examined. The wearing of arch supports is likely necessary. Dab zinc oxide and calamine lotion on the feet and let dry on every 3 or 4 hours.

C. J.—Do not try to cure the disease with things you buy at the drug store. The condition is too serious to fool with. Go to a good physician and be guided by his advice or you may sincerely regret it later.

PALID.—Your trouble is likely rheumatic or from an overloaded large intestine. It is not impossible that it may be tuberculosis. You should have your urine examined, microscopically and chemically.

SEA DOG.—The answer to your first question is "Yes." (2) The condition could be possible but not likely when the test shows negative. (3) The injection of salversan rarely has a bad effect afterwards.

Specialty Salesmen

We are a million dollar company, the largest and finest concern of its kind in the world, and have recently opened a branch office in St. Louis. We require for Missouri and several of the adjoining states. Our product is a mechanical specialty and is designated by the initials of the inventions of the decade. It is made in two sizes and is sold on an easy monthly payment proposition. The profit to the merchant is unusually large. Our national advertising campaign is followed-up, make it necessary to increase our sales organization.

We have a real live sales proposition to offer to aggressive, hard working salesmen who desire a permanent connection. Up to $6000 per year can be earned.

The men we select must be able to finance themselves until they can become self-supporting strictly on a commission basis and do not make requests for any kind.

If you are the right man we want to call and let us explain our proposition to you in detail and we will endeavor to convince you that we have the biggest money-maker ever placed in the field. Interviews can be had at the office between the hours of 9 a. m. and 12 m. and between 2 and 4 p. m. Tuesday, Nov. 18, at 9 a. m. and 12 m.

Ask for Mr. Larkin.

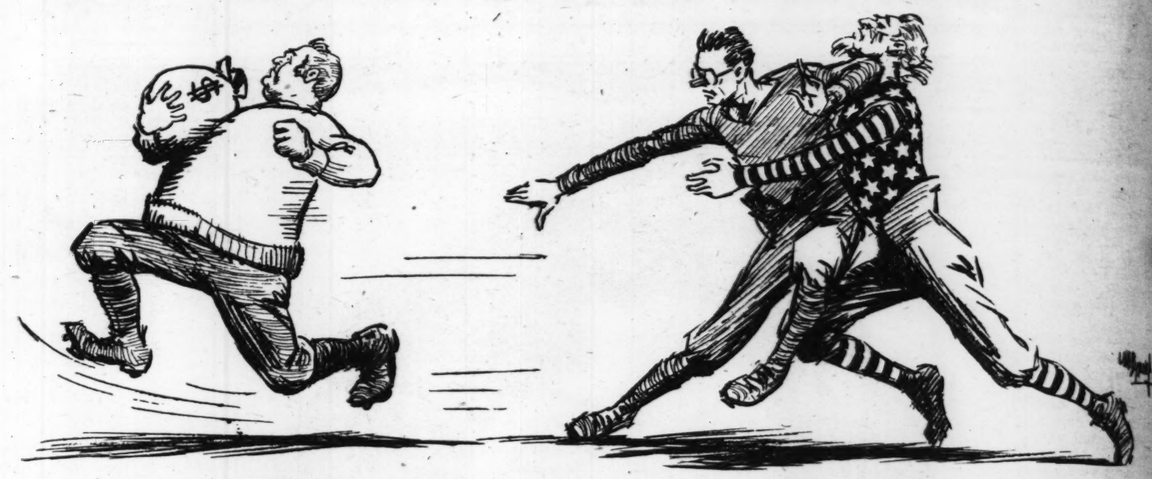
BEAUTIES OF THE (Copyright) DAY

No. 5 of a series of paintings by Henry Hutt, the noted American artist. The original of this portrait is MLLE. LEYDA GEORGIE, of France, now in this country.

And Now That Income Tax Returns Are Made Known-!



With the help of a competent lawyer, the man of large income is able to cut his income tax to the minimum, and do it lawfully.

"I WONDER how much he makes?"

Oh, universal and intriguing speculation! Men in offices have put their heads together over it. The income of their neighbor is nobody's business but his own, yet the temptation to pry is human and irresistible. He in his turn wonders what some other fellow earns.

This curiosity is the particular right of the great exempt; that army of nameless heroes in the battle for bread who never have to pay an income tax. How poor and lowly is the radical editor who upholds the cause of the common man and sneers at American commercialism? How really plebian is the candidate for political office who sheds tears over the plight of the oppressed masses?

How many wealthy citizens are dodging their share of taxes through the medium of tax-exempt securities? The common people—the great exempt—feel that they have a right to know.

Since the newspapers, acting under a provision of the new revenue law which permits public inspection of income tax figures, have been printing the amounts of income tax paid by various public figures, a number of interesting revelations have been made. For the first time, mere rumor and estimate about the great fortunes of the land have been reduced to actual figures.

For the first time, stories of tremendous profits and sorry failures have been shown on tax books. Something at least near the truth is known about the gains made by those more fortunate individuals, the dollared aristocracy of America, and their successful efforts to hide through technicalities in the law the bulk of their incomes.

There is a more trivial side to the disclosures. Many wives for the first time are learning what their husbands' incomes actually are. Employes are getting tabs on the profits of their employers. Salaried men are obtaining a line on the scale of other salaried men. And the press agent figures as to the earnings of movie stars, stage celebrities, writers and critics are being checked up.

Income tax officials have made it plain to newspaper men that the incomes indicated from the taxes paid are in each case the absolute minimum. Few who make returns exaggerate their incomes and pay taxes on the exaggeration. Rather, the entire tendency is to minimize to the last notch of the law.

With larger incomes, only those assets which cannot be twisted by able lawyers into the exemption list are shown. A great many millions are hidden in "tax-exempt securities," and "business losses," and "maintenance," and all the rest of the category.

Many are the absurdities in the tax lists, like the bookkeeper who pays $20, while his employer pays $2.

Even though amounts are absolute minimums, taking advantage of every loophole in the law, they give first official information about the pocketbooks of well-known people—Surprises include the fact that salaries of movie stars are almost as large as press agents said—The huge incomes of many men in public life, lawmakers and others — And the sanctioned methods by which the wealthy evade tax, which is paid in full—as a rule—only by people of moderate means :: :: ::

As an indication of how the income may be estimated from the amount of tax paid the following scale is suggested:

If the income tax paid amounts to $5000 the income is not less than $50,000 a year. If it is $10,000 it represents a minimum income of $70,000; if the tax is $20,000 the income is at least $96,000; if the tax is $46,000 the income must be $150,000, and if the tax is $70,000 the income must be at least $200,000 a year. Above the $100,000 mark of taxes the tax represents about 50 per cent of the income. Thus if the tax is $1,000,000 the income is at least $2,000,000, and generally is far more.

With this scale in mind, examine some of the taxes paid by men in public life. John W. Davis, the Democratic nominee for President, paid $84,425 income tax. Therefore, his income must be at least $200,000 a year. That is why so many Republican orators during the campaign gnashed their teeth to hear Davis criticising Andrew Mellon and other rich Republicans.

On the other hand, Gov. Al Smith of New York, it would seem, has a right to place himself with the common man. His income tax was only $31. President Coolidge's return shows little personal fortune aside from the income from his office. His salary is $75,000 a year. His income tax payment amounted to $6643.

Charles G. Dawes, attacked as a plutocrat and banker by Democratic orators, paid $18,269, showing an income of about $100,000 a year, or one-half the income of John W. Davis.

However, there are many Republican names in the list of big payments. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon paid $1,173,987. Edward B. McLean, Harding's friend, paid $422,349. Attorney-General Stone, who has ruled publication of the tax payments illegal, had an income of more than $50,000 a year in 1923, his payment being $6722. Secretary of State Hughes paid $3698 and Chief Justice Taft $2718.

Apparently there are few men in public life who can honestly claim that their hearts beat as one with the great exempt; that they are simple folk who know the sorrows of the poor.

Among the United States Senators—the United States Senate is often alluded to as "the millionaires' club"—the return of Borah of Idaho is nearer the democratic ideal than most. He paid $534.

Samuel Gompers, labor leader, had a larger income than Senator Borah, paying $888. In all the list of public figures the most modest statement was that made by executors of the estate of Woodrow Wilson, who settled for $24 income tax.

The incomes of political leaders loom large when it is considered that the average income per capita in the United States is $600 a year.

Comparative figures, however, mean very little. There are so many ways of dodging the income tax law. Officials in charge of it say that only men of moderate incomes ever pay the strictly honest amounts.

The most general means of dodging the tax used by wealthy persons is to suffer "financial reverses" which exist only on paper. This is managed by selling blocks of temporarily depreciated stock at a reduction from par value, setting down the loss as a deduction, then buying the stock back again.

A great deal of dodging is done by the real estate method. Under this scheme, tax evaders purchase real estate which they expect to appreciate greatly in value. There are no dividends to be set down under income and, when the time comes to sell the property and realize the appreciated value, the Government can only assess a 12 1-2 per cent tax on it.

Another method is to form a private corporation, which, under the law, can only be taxed 12 1-2 per cent. Henry Ford and his son, Edsel, evade the income tax law in this manner. The estimated income of their company was $120,000,000, and if this had been taxed on a straight percentage basis it would have paid the Government $48,000,000. As individuals and corporation they paid only $14,443,673, or nearly $34,000,000 less than they would have without the protection of the private corporation clause, a proviso worked into the law by the moneyed interests.

The surest escape to capitalists from the income-tax law is the tax-exempt security. By taking state and municipal bonds and Government bonds at a lower rate of interest the capitalist makes up in freedom from the income tax what he loses in the lower interest rate, with —money to spare.

Thus the law, which was designed to curb the enormous gains of wealth and remove the burden of government from the poor man is being evaded by the one class it was designed to tax most heavily. As a result, the man of moderate means pays heavier proportionately than the multi-millionaire.

Publication of the income payments have shown examples of this tax-dodging.

Financial experts assert that the $257,450 paid by Ogden Mills, capitalist, does not represent his real income. They claim that when Elbert H. Gary got off with $473,364 he did so through the legal means of tax-exempt securities and other sanctioned evasions. Frank J. Gould, capitalist, paid $283,891, but that does not represent what he would have been obliged to pay if settlement was done by a straight

The Terror

By DAVID M. NEWELL.

A GENTLE rain was falling in the hollow on the edge of the big woods. Under the moss-draped live oaks it was already dusk, and a belated gray squirrel scuttled across a clearing with one last acorn in his mouth. Back in the swamp a barred owl hooted gutturally. The squirrel stopped in his tracks at the eerie cry of his arch enemy and sat upright, scolding angrily.

Suddenly his chattering ceased and the acorn dropped unnoticed from his forepaws. His bright little eyes had seen something that caused him to go cold with fear. Forgotten were the owl and the acorn. His heart pounded against his furry ribs.

If you or I could have been there in the stilly woods, and followed the terrified little animal's gaze, we might have seen something that would have caused our blood to chill and our skin to crawl—or we might only have seen a pile of rotten wood or some dead leaves.

Up in the big house on the hill George Morgan finished his story and tiptoed into Billy's room. Seven-year-old Billy was very much asleep and curled in the hollow of his arm was Jimmy. Jimmy was very much asleep, too. After the manner of pups, he was dreaming. In this particular dream he was chasing—and about to catch—a very large fierce bear. For this reason Jimmy stirred in his sleep and growled softly.

George Morgan smiled and gently patted the little Airedale's frizzly head. For while Jimmy was Billy's, and both Billy and Jimmy knew this to be so, the boy's father and mother loved the game little pup more than either would have cared to admit. Why, it was only yesterday that he had stood right up to an old stray cat 'most as big as he was.

Down in the woods, all was still. High in the hollow tree the squirrel still shook with fear and hate. The big owl wheeled noiselessly among the trunks of the giant live oaks. It was too late for squirrels, now that night had fallen, but perhaps he might pick up an unfortunate wood rat or swamp rabbit. Ah! There was a faint stir in the leaves.

The owl swooped silently. When a foot or two from the ground he set his wings frantically, swerved and disappeared in the shadows. A raccoon, lumbering through the thicket, raised his head, sniffed and backed hastily away, every hair on end.

With the coming of the first rays of daylight there was again a faint stir in the leaves under the oaks. A broad, ugly head appeared from the indistinguishable mass. Cold, beady eyes glittered and a long tongue licked in and out like a dancing flame. Then, slowly and without seeming effort, the Terror uncoiled his full length—eight feet of horrible, sinuous beauty. The black diamond markings glistened in the early morning dew.

Carefully the big snake picked his way, slipping easily around the briars and scrub palmettos, protecting his 15 rattles. At the edge of the clearing he stopped, coiled and lay motionless, ugly head laid flat and the cold, unblinking eyes staring, staring, seeing everything and sending terror to the hearts of the wild creatures whose eyes they met. Up the edge of the clearing a rabbit was coming.

All the world looked fair to the rabbit this bright, dewy morning. He had had a fine breakfast of carrots and cabbage from the Morgans' garden and—his heart missed a beat and his gentle eyes grew wide with fright. He started a wild leap—but was too late!

After his meal the big rattler slid lazily across the clearing. The sun was rising over the pines and the snake looked for a good place to bask and sleep in the warm rays. A stupid cow blocked his path and lowered her head inquisitively. Quick as a flash he whipped into a coil and at the warning whir-r-r-r the cow awoke to her danger and fled, panic-stricken.

The Terror of the Shadows : The Story of a Devoted Puppy

By DAVID M. NEWELL.

All the woodland creatures knew how dangerous was that huge rattlesnake, and even the big hound on a rabbit hunt wisely kept out of its way—Then came Billy, 7-year-old boy at play, and the Terror struck—But with Billy was his young Airedale terrier, Jimmy, whose loyalty and courage made short work of an instinctive fear — The exploit of another canine hero :: ::

Uncle Meb's hound, out on his usual morning rabbit hunt, paused to sniff at the hated snake smell. The Terror's eyes blazed with rage. How he would like to make an end of that noisy cur that came every morning to run his rabbits. Rabbits were growing scarcer anyway. But the hound had no intention whatever of being made an end of. He had a great deal of respect for the whole snake family, having once been made a very sick dog by an old cotton-mouth moccasin. At the vicious buzz he, like the raccoon, backed quickly away and, making a wide detour, went about his business.

If there is any one thing a rattlesnake hates it is a dog, and the Terror was no exception. For a full five minutes he kept up his song of death and every creature of the wilds that heard it trembled and hid. At last, quieted down, the great snake found a small clearing and went to sleep in the warm sand.

• • •

At the big house Uncle Meb was talking.

"No, sah! I sho' wouldn't let dat chile walk about fur from de house. I seen dat snake's track yistiddy even'in' whar he cross de road—looked like somebody had drug a big pine log across."

"But, Uncle Meb," laughed Mr. Morgan, "there are some rattlesnakes everywhere, you know"——

"Yassuh," interrupted Uncle Meb, "an' dis yere rattlesnake am some rattlesnake all by hisself. He ain't a-skeered of nothin' or nobody."

And the old darky went off mumbling and shaking his head.

After breakfast, Billy and Jimmy walked out on the porch. The day was a glorious one. Jimmy's eyes fairly begged. What fun he and Billy could have out in the woods—the big, wide, free woods, with squirrels to chase, holes to dig and sticks to play with! Billy understood.

In the woods Billy ran and laughed and played with Jimmy to his heart's content. At last he stopped and said, soberly:

"Now, Jimmy, it's time to go home to dinner."

But when they came to start Billy wasn't just sure which way to go. Jimmy knew, all right, but when he saw Billy take the wrong road he merely thought, "Hurrah! More squirrels to chase," and away he tore.

Near the pasture gate Jimmy stopped. A strong, loathsome smell came to his nostrils. Billy approached. There was a sharp, whirring sound from the bushes directly ahead that made Jimmy sick with fear. It was a horrible sound that seemed to fill the air and come from everywhere at once. Instinct told Jimmy that here was danger—great danger. Puppylike, he wanted to run—to tuck his tail down and flee from the strange sound and the sickening snake smell.

But down inside of him there stirred the spirit of a race of dogs that have proved their courage and loyalty in the actual facing of lions, and so Jimmy, when he wanted to run, stood—and growled fiercely.

"What's the matter, Jimmy boy?" asked Billy, and took a step forward. Out from the bushes shot a flat, ugly head. Quick as was the snake's strike, Jimmy's leap was quicker. His puppy jaws found their hold and he shut his eyes happily and closed down.

• • •

With the coming of late afternoon George Morgan returned from his trip to the village.

"Where's Billy?" he called to his wife.

"Why, I thought he went with you," she answered. "I haven't seen him since before dinner—where can he be?"

A search of the grounds and no Billy.

"Of course, that crazy old pup is with him," said George, trying to hide his alarm. Mrs. Morgan was crying softly as she said:

"Oh, George!—Uncle Meb!—that snake!"

Her husband went white.

"Oh, Meb!" he shouted. "Meb!"

The old fellow came hobbling to the house.

"What's de matter?" he puffed.

"Billy's gone—and Jimmy—and my wife thinks that maybe that snake"——

He choked and left the sentence unfinished. Together the three hurried out to the road that led down into the big woods. Uncle Meb examined the ground closely, then explained:

"I ought to could see some tracks after de rain last night."

It wasn't long before the old darky found the tracks.

"Hyar dey is—bofe of 'em. De little scoundrels has gone to'd de pasture."

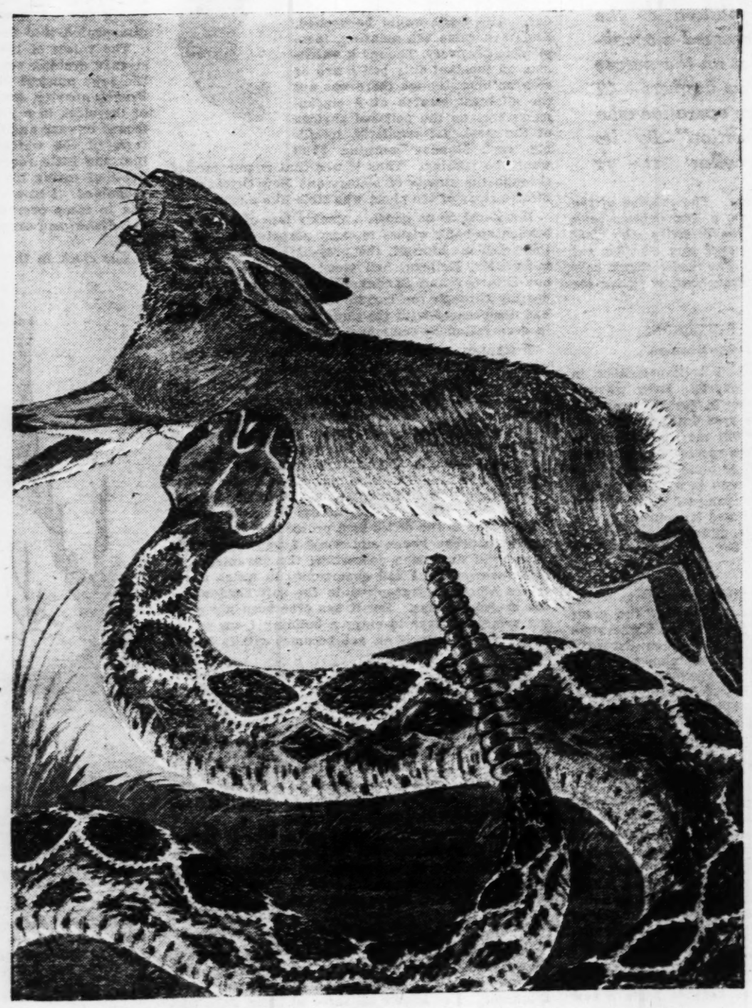
A mile they went—calling with hoarse, strained voices. Then around a bend of the road they met Billy. His clothes were torn and his small face stained with tears.

"Oh, daddy!" he cried. "We got lost, Jimmy and me. And sumpthin's wrong with Jimmy, daddy; he won't come. He had a awful fight down there by a gate, with a great big long thing, and—oh, I'm so tired, daddy."

When Uncle Meb and Mrs. Morgan had taken little Billy on to the house, George wiped his eyes and set his jaws. He knew what he would find down by the pasture gate and, strong man that he was, he could scarcely face it. Billy was right. Jimmy wouldn't come and he had had an awful fight. His jaws were locked in a death hold on the neck of the largest diamond-back rattlesnake that George Morgan had ever seen. The man's eyes were wet as he bent to pick up Jimmy's still little body, and he murmured:

"God bless your brave little heart!"

Twilight fell peacefully in the big woods. The gray squirrel found and buried his acorns unmolested. The barred owl, flitting over a certain thicket, saw and went his way. The raccoon, on his nightly round, sniffed again and was glad. Jimmy slept.



The Detective Tells How He "Laid the Ghost" That Ro

Every week, for many weeks, a sack of gold containing $200 was stolen from the time-locked vault of the Imperial Trust Company — Close watching failed to turn up the slightest clew to solution of the mystery—It really seemed a spookish business, and got on the nerves of the unsuperstitious bankers—At last they called in an operative who nabbed the "apparition" by its quite palpable coat collar :: ::

The same instant the clock beneath my hand clicked, stopped; the alarm began to buzz softly.

This is a true detective story. The solution of the mystery that baffled officials of a New Orleans bank was told by Capt. Peterson, the detective who "laid the ghost," to a trained newspaper man who has put the facts into narrative form. The reader should bear in mind that the detective, throughout, is telling the story in the first person.

By CAPT. L. C. PETERSON,
As told to Ben Lucien Burman.

I AM not superstitious. I believe neither in witches, demons nor ghosts. Even when a child on my ranch home in Texas, I constantly laughed at the wild-eyed darkies who came running in terror to tell me in fitful gasps of some fearful headless specter who had arisen shrieking from a desolate graveyard, or had halted them on a black road in a forest to hurl his grinning skull at their paralyzed bodies. Yet there came a time in the gay and langourous city of New Orleans when, if such a gibbering specter had shrieked, "O, skeptic, do you believe in ghosts now?" I should have nodded fearfully and answered, "I believe."

It seemed there were only two explanations which would unravel the fantastic mystery of the great Imperial Trust Co.: One, that the thief who stole $200 from the massive steel safe each Saturday night, under the very eyes of the watchmen and detectives, was a man who had mastered the long-sought secret of making himself invisible; second, that he was not man at all, but a ghost. But I go too fast. Let me begin at the beginning.

At noon each Saturday the ponderous ledgers of the venerable and powerful Imperial Trust Co. were balanced, and the bronze gates leading into the marble interior clanged shut. At 7 o'clock in the evening the gates swung open once more to admit the sea and river captains who brought heavy bags of gold and silver, and whom the hazards of current and wind prevented from making a morning visit to the bank. Three hours later, at 10 o'clock, the gates swung closed again; the three trusted tellers who had been in charge for the three night hours counted up the shining piles of white and yellow metal; the steel door of the vault was shut; the time-lock was set for 8 o'clock Monday morning; the tellers made their way to their homes.

Monday morning would arrive. The tellers and clerks would saunter into the bank to begin a new day. The vault would be opened. And then came the amazing, inexplicable discovery. Though a watchman on constant duty had heard or seen nothing, though there was not the slightest scratch of a cracksman's tool on the polished surface of the steel, yet regularly, infallibly, each Monday morning $200 would be missing. Thus it was that rumor carried through the streets of picturesque New Orleans the bizafre story of the ghost who stole like a man.

But ghost or no ghost, a weekly loss of $200 is a burden no bank wishes to carry perpetually. When the president himself, the gray-haired, thinly mustached Mr. Kellogg, had stood on guard throughout Saturday and Sunday nights outside the bank peering through the barred windows, and the $200 had disappeared with the same montonous certainty, in desperation he summoned detectives.

I frankly confess that I was tempted to smile when Mr. Kellogg related his marvelous tale of this vault being robbed while his eyes were fixed upon it, knowing as I did the ease with which an unskilled sentinel may fall asleep and never realize that his weary eyelids have even closed. And I think I was still mentally smiling at the prospect of an easy triumph over this supernatural marauder when I strolled into the office of a real estate dealer whose front window faced directly upon the white entrance of the Imperial Trust Co. across the busy street. I had come to the office as a prospective buyer of a costly suburban home, and while I was engaged in an earnest discussion concerning the advantages of brick over stucco I had opportunity to watch unobserved whatever transpired in the soft shadows of the banking rooms. For it has ever been my guiding principle never to enter a building I am reconnoitering until such an act becomes vitally necessary.

My careful glances beyond the realtor's window, however, yielded nothing, and on Friday I strode up the carven stone stairway leading to Mr. Kellogg's stately mansion.

"I'd like to know a few things about the men you have in the bank Saturday night," I announced, as I took one of the financier's gigantic black cigars. "These three tellers, for instance, who count the money and lock the vault. Is it possible that they are in league with the 'invisible man'?"

He shook his head quickly, and nervously bit off the end of his cigar. "It isn't possible. All three of them are men chosen particularly because of their honesty. I'd put the entire bank in their hands for a year. Yes, sir, for a year. That's how much I trust them."

"Who are they?" I queried.

"One's a chap named Walton. Severn Walton. Belongs to one of the oldest families in New Orleans. Another is Howard Wilson, and the third is Pierre Duquesne. I've known all three of them since they were youngsters. Corking men, all of them. You'll have to look somewhere else."

"How about the watchman?" I persisted.

"Old Janterre?" Again the banker shook head nervously. His nervousness was gro marked. "Absolutely not. He lost part of his three years ago, when he was struck by a b while defending the bank against five yeggmen. wouldn't be thieving now. No. You're on wrong track. This isn't an ordinary crime. man who robs this vault is—is—well, don't k what he is." He raised his hands in helpless ge

"Well, maybe we'll find out before long," I torted, cheerfully. "My campaign opens at 10 morrow night."

Opposite the gleaming marble walls of the perial was a tiny park, and in it, perhaps a hundred feet from the bank, stood a small ci bandstand where each night a score of lusty cians assembled to blare forth noisy opera for ful and perspiring audiences. After dark Satu night I ripped a loose board from the circular and crawled into the cramped and stifling space tween the high floor of the band shell and the gro ground. In my hand was a package of sandwich and a bottle of coffee. These scanty rations w to feed and keep me wakeful for two nights and day while I spied upon the invisible man.

At eight o'clock a reverberant trampling be on the boards above me. Cornets sputtered flutes squeaked shrilly as the band arrived commenced a discordant tuning. From a cut in the wall, I looked out across the street the barred bank window. Distinctly I could see long-bearded ship captains stalking in with weighty sacks clutched tightly in their fingers; cl ly I could see the massive door of the open va with the brilliant reflections of the electric overhead shimmering upon it. And as the orche above me struck up the violent overture to "W iam Tell" I drank a cup of black, sugarless cof and wondered what the night might disclose.

At length the music ceased. The muffled fling overhead recommenced as the bandsmen doned their melodious labors. At the same ment the bronze gates of the bank clanged sh Keenly I watched as the three trusted tellers, swarthy Pierre Duquesne, the dapper Howard W son and the aristocratic Severn Walton counted the night's receipts, closed the massive door set the time-lock. Then, extinguishing all the li except the one shining brightly over the safe, disappeared into the darkness.

The voices of the strollers in the park, now strange droning voices of pantalooned Chinese, the low, musical voices of merry dwellers of French quarter, grew fainter, hushed, as the ba of the clock in a lofty church tower near by slo moved onward and touched midnight. The shad form of the watchman limped through the h into the little room where I knew he was in habit of eating his nocturnal lunch. My vigila redoubled. I lit a cigarette. A slow drowsiness gan to creep over me. I poured out a cup of fee, drank, and drank again. My nerves grew ac taut.

The clock in the tower tolled 1. Two men, passed without incident. In the evening band reassembled; at 10 o'clock the musicians their instruments. I ate a refreshing sand-, exhausted my coffee bottle and continued my less watch. At 1 o'clock the same two sinister res, one tall and gaunt, the other massively fat, peared and glared cautiously into the bank; except for the crippled watchman, there was no of life within. When morning brightened the and the tellers came to swing open the shimmer- door of the safe, I sighed with relief, and exstedly stretched upon the damp ground, certain this one Monday morning at least would find precious piles of silver and gold untouched.

"How about the watchman?" I persisted.
"Old Janterre?" Again the banker shook h

"Well, maybe we'll find out before long," I re

Opposite the gleaming marble walls of the N rial was a tiny park, and in it, perhaps a hu ndred feet from the bank, stood a small circul ndstand where each night a score of lusty musi ans assembled to blare forth noisy opera for grate l and perspiring audiences. After dark Saturday ght I ripped a loose board from the circular wa d crawled into the cramped and stifling space be een the high floor of the band shell and the clamm round. In my hand was a package of sandwiches d a bottle of coffee. These scanty rations were y while I spied upon the invisible man.

At eight o'clock a reverberant trampling bega the boards above me. Cornets sputtered an utes squeaked shrilly as the band arrived and mmenced a discordant tuning. From a hol t in the wall, I looked out across the street into ng-bearded ship captains stalking in with small eighty sacks clutched tightly in their fingers; clear
I could see the massive door of the open vault ith the brilliant reflections of the electric lam erhead shimmering upon it. And as the orchestr ove me struck up the violent overture to "Will m Tell" I drank a cup of black, sugarless coffee
d wondered what the night might disclose.

At length the music ceased. The muffled shuf ng overhead recommenced as the bandsmen aban ned their melodious labors. At the same mo ent the bronze gates of the bank clanged shut.
enly I watched as the three trusted tellers, the arthy Pierre Duquesne, the dapper Howard Wil
-and the aristocratic Severn Walton counted up e night's receipts, closed the massive door and the time-lock. Then, extinguishing all the lights ept the one shining brightly over the safe, they appeared into the darkness.

The voices of the strollers in the park, now th ange droning voices of pantalooned Chinese, now low, musical voices of merry dwellers of the ench quarter, grew fainter, hushed, as the hands the clock in a lofty church tower near by slowly ved onward and touched midnight. The shadowy m of the watchman limped through the bank o the little room where I knew he was in the bit of eating his nocturnal lunch. My vigilance oubled. I lit a cigarette. A slow drowsiness be to creep over me. I poured out a cup of cof lean, evil-visaged, the other with body stumpy fat, but with eyes narrow and crafty, shambled to my hiding place, conversing in hushed, sullenness. They moved to the bank window, peered anxiously inside, argued for a moment, though the subject of argument I could not hear, then shuffled down the deserted thoroughfare. I poured out another cup of coffee, keeping my eyes riveted to the safe door. There was no movement, no change. My brown broke. A shaggy dog trotted toward me, nose sharp, black nose erect as he hungrily sniffed the provisions. A second dog joined him, and, more curious than the first, began barking vociferously and digging at his paws. I am a lover of dogs, but I admit that at that moment, afraid that their noise would betray me, I silently cursed the entire pack. Luckily, after a moment of vain scratching and growling, both decided that I was a hopeless quarry, and loped disappointedly away.

Sunday passed without incident. In the evening the band reassembled; at 10 o'clock the musicians tuned their instruments. I ate a refreshing sandwich, exhausted my coffee bottle and continued my endless watch. At 1 o'clock the same two sinister figures, one tall and gaunt, the other massively fat, appeared and glared cautiously into the bank; except for the crippled watchman, there was no sign of life within. When morning brightened the street and the tellers came to swing open the shimmering door of the safe, I sighed with relief, and excitedly stretched upon the damp ground, certain that this one Monday morning at least would find the precious piles of silver and gold untouched.

It was dark when I awakened from my weary sleep. Slipping out unnoticed from my gloomy cave, I hastened to my hotel. Bathing and changing my shabby clothes for a newly pressed suit of flannels, I hurried to the magnificent residence of the Im-Vault's president.

"Well, Mr. Kellogg, what happened to your invisible man?" I laughed amiably. "I'm disappointed. Isn't the atmosphere favorable for the talking of ghosts?"

The same nervousness which I had noted before caused his frail body to tremble. He looked at me gravely, almost tragedy. "I guess you haven't heard," he said. "The $200 has disappeared as usual."

I gasped my astonishment—and a moment later was ready to resign on the spot. "Take me to the bank at once," I mumbled, doggedly, when my first surprise and wrath at myself had subsided. "I want to see that vault. Tonight. Tell the watchman that I am a friend of yours in sudden need of a cashier's check, or any story which you like, as long as it isn't the truth. If I don't solve this uncanny case I never wish to solve another."

We drove to the bank and pounded on the gates. As the watchman sullenly thrust them open I scrutinized his aged, withered face and gnarled, shrunken body. While Mr. Kellogg pretended to search for some elusive documents, I furtively examined the vault and the granite wall behind it. I found nothing. All I continued to find nothing the next morning when, as a grimy gas man, I penetrated into the cool cellar, searching for a tunnel which the phantom thieves might have dug from the adjoining building to the steel-lined floor of the vault.

Was the limping watchman the guilty one? Or was the criminal some high officer of the bank, driven to steal by the force of some disastrous speculation? Or was he one of the two sinister figures who had shambled past me when I lay beneath the murky bandstand? Or all of these were human beings. And no human being had ever before walked invisible through steel. Therefore, if I pursued my theory logically the miraculous thief was a creature not human, not of flesh and blood. My quarry must be a ghost.

An urgent wire for a few days called me to upstate Mississippi. When I returned to vivacious New Orleans it was with a determination to make this ghost, if ghost he was, dearly regret that he had left the world of spirits to mingle in the affairs of unhappy earth. Quickly I set to work. Stripping a dilapidated automobile of its electric wiring and purchasing an alarm clock, I fashioned a contrivance so delicately adjusted that when the ends of the two microscopic wires were brought in contact with each other, an electric current would instantly speed through, thrust a piece of steel between the wheels of the clock, stopping it instantly, and cause the alarm to begin buzzing dully.

Holding my man trap in readiness, I commenced a penetrating investigation of the three tellers—the black-haired, flashing-eyed Pierre Duquesne; the suave, soft-spoken Howard Wilson; the polished, aristocratic Severn Walton. Their faces bore no marks of the guilt-haunted malefactor; their haunts were not the underworld dens which fringed the musty wharves of the river, but the softly carpeted salons and dining rooms of the rich and the socially great.

One afternoon at a ball game, broiling under the tropical sun, and apparently absorbed in the antics of the gesticulating pitcher, I leaned forward and requested a match from the immaculately attired individual who sat staidly in the tier of seats before me. The individual was Severn Walton, the teller. He passed me a box of matches. I lit my cigarette, thanked him cordially, and opened a scattering conversation. We discussed the game, the torridity of the weather and that ever-fruitful topic, the crowded state of the street cars.

"I had to come out in a trolley today, and it was crowded terribly," I remarked. "Did you take a car, or are you one of those lucky enough to own an automobile?"

"Oh, no," he replied quickly, "I took the street car, too. I don't keep a car. Can't afford one."

I lit another cigarette and gave no sign of the astonishment which gripped me. For I knew he not only owned an automobile, but he had driven out in it that very afternoon! Why should he lie so brazenly and unnecessarily to a perfect stranger? Did it mean he was democratic to the extreme point that he did not wish to assume an air of wealth in speaking to a chance acquaintance? Or did it mean that he was an habitual liar and therefore a man to be watched?

I chose the supposition that he was an habitual liar, and for three days Severn Walton was the center of my activities. By devious explorations I finally learned that this trusted employe, who received a salary of $40 each seven days, owned his own home in New Orleans and a fertile orange grove in Florida; also, at that very time he was negotiating to purchase a cotton mill costing well into the thousands. These discoveries made it appear that my man trap would die unused, unhonored and unsung.

But when I communicated my suspicions to the baggard Mr. Kellogg, he shrugged his shoulders and gave vent to a joyless, apologetic laugh. "I should have told you," he muttered. "It's my fault. My fault. I know he owns this orange grove and is buying his cotton mill. He can do it easily. His mother was very wealthy; when she died she willed him all her money. He works here for $40 a week because he wishes to, not because he must. He hopes to be made an officer of the bank one of these days. It can't be Walton. I tell you I'm certain the thief isn't connected with the bank. Certain."

"Very well," I answered, thoughtfully. "Anyway, I'd like to have another look at that vault. A leisurely look this time. Of course, the bank will be closed Saturday afternoon. Will it be possible for me to get in then?"

"Yes," he replied, slowly. "I'll arrange it."

Saturday arrived. In the sweltering afternoon when the bank's wide corridors were empty of either clerks or patrons, and when Mr. Kellogg was engaged in a discussion with the shriveled watchman in the rear room, I whipped a magnifying glass from my pocket. Staring through it, I examined, inch by inch the brilliant surface of the combination, and the thin steel pins extending from the time lock which bolted the door against all power on earth short of dynamite, until the hands of the clock swung round the allotted number of times and the spring relaxed.

Then I strode up and down the gray-tiled floor mentally calculating the distances from barred window to barred window, and bronze door to bronze door. Stealthily I unwound two wires so fine as almost to defy my eye, even though I held them in my hand, and placed them at the base of the vault in such fashion that the slightest movement of the massive door would bring the two ends together. Stretching the metal strands along the shadows of the wall, I led the two free ends up and outside the window through which I had spied from my post in the bandstand, a window which, in the stifling summers, was never closed. I had barely completed my task when Mr. Kellogg entered.

"Have you found anything?" he asked, huskily.

I shook my head enigmatically, and strode into the street. I had learned the secret of the invisible man. And in a few hours I hoped to make that secret visible to all the world.

Shortly after 10 o'clock, when the tawny steamer captains and the soft-voiced tellers had departed from the bank, I sauntered up casually to the bars of the open window, and, seizing the top ends of the wires dangling unseen from the inside, made them fast to two other thin wires coiled in my hand. Lazily I walked across the street, carefully allowing the metal strands to drop into the gaping joints of the concrete sidewalk and the cobblestones of the roadway, where they would not be disturbed by the foot of some pedestrian or the hoof of a stumbling horse. Then for the second time I climbed into my wooden cavern beneath the black and silent bandstand. Connecting the wires to my strange man trap, I lit a cigarette and, fixing my eye to a hole in the crumbling boards, I settled myself to wait. The clock in the blackly silhouetted church tower

A shadowy figure was crawling flat on its belly, like a snake, away from the glimmering vault.

SAYS WEBER TO FIELDS:

"WHAT a fine big book you got under your arm, Cho Veber. Vas you bein' a literary feller in der old aging?"

"I vas not, Lew Fields. I vas studyin' to be a self-maker."

"Vot? At your aging you vould change der vays of der vorld?"

"No, Lew, I vould change only Cho Veber. Der vife says I been der same kind o' feller too long already, an' vhy don't I make some changings. 'Look at Henry Ford,' she says. 'He vas no better than you vas when he started to be a self-made man,' she says. 'Vhy don't you be a self-maker?' she says. An' right avay kvick, Lew, I gets me a book on self-makers."

"Vas all der self-makers like Henry Ford and got a billion dollars, Cho?"

"Sure, Lew. That's how come they're self-makers. Der book says so. Mebbe they ain't all got a billion, but no mans is self-makers, Lew, vhen he ain't got von million or mebbe somedings like that.

"I vas reading in der book how they did it, Lew. Der self-makers is always poor boys to start mit. Der ain't no self-makers in der families o' der rich peoples. Der poor boys sees it ain't no good bein' like that, so they starts makin' der vorld over mit der idea they vas der big toad in der puddles."

"You vas too late, Cho. You ain't no poor boys. You vas mens, Cho, mit der future behind in der rear."

"What vas der idea you vould know, Lew Fields? Vas you ever a self-maker dot you vould to know vhat von o' them vas like? You vas such a liar, Lew, I vouldn't believe you if you vas to say you vas a Deutscher. Vhat you don't know about self-makers vould ruin der business. What I vas tellin' you vas der story von der story books von der self-makers. Der book says der vorld is full o' self-makers vot is so proud of der chob they vouldn't have missed it for a t'ousand dollars."

"Vell, Cho, vhen you know all about it already, tell me vhat is did to did it."

"I vill, Lew. Choost like der book says. Von day der young man vhat vas a poor boy comes home in der evenin' and der vife says, 'Villiam, I gotta have more money to run der house.' And Villiam says: 'I ain't got no more money to run der house.' And der vife says: 'Vell, you gotta get it.' Villiam sees der only vay to get der peace in der house is to do vhat der vife says. An' he gets busy goin' after der moneys. Mebbe he gets two chobs vhere he had only von chob before, says der book, an' mebbe he tinks up some vay o' makin' der moneys mithout more than von chob. But he has to did it, so he hustles an' brings in der money der vife vants.

"Dot ain't all mit der business, Lew. Vhen der vife gets der money she needs to run der house, she says: 'Villiam, I need a new fur coat.' 'I ain't got der moneys,' says Villiam. 'Get it, and be kvick about it,' says der vife. And Villiam, vonce more to keep der peace in der families, hunts up some more moneys. 'This time,' says Villiam, 'I'll fool der vife,' he says. An' he gets a lot o' moneys she don't know about. So vhen she says, 'Villiam, I gotta to have a motor automobiles,' he says: 'All right, sweetheart, vhen shall I send it up; and vould you prefer von mit red trimmings or mit blue vheels.' And der vife is so surprised mit der vay he talks mit her, dot she kisses him on der mouth an' says vhat a great man he is. From dot time on, Lew, Villiam keeps on der chump to keep von step ahead of der vife, an' pretty soon he's makin' so much moneys der vife can't spend it all, an' before Villiam vakes up to der vay t'ings is goin' avay mit him, der bank calls him up an' tells him he's been elected von of der director fellers. An' everybody finds out vhat a fine, big, self-made feller he is."

"It ain't vorked dot vay mit me already, Cho."

"Of a course not, Lew. You vas got der wrong raw materials. Mebbe der vife she done her part, but you vas no good, Lew. You vas der kind, mebbe, vhat got der soreness vhen der vife tells you she vants der new fur coats an' der diamonds for der rings, and' dot broke up der combination."

"Vas all der self-makers like dot, Lew? Or vas some o' them fellers vot vasn't afraid of der vomens?"

"Vonce in der vhile, Lew, der vas a self-maker vhat vas different, der story book says. Von o' der examples is a feller named Doc Cook. This Cook feller vas all kinds of self-maker, but he didn't always get avay mit der business. An' he ain't no self-maker no more, der book says. Vonce Doc Cook self-made himself a big feller vhat climbs der mountains. Vonce he finds der North Pole, an' he gets anodder prize von his self-makings. Vonce he gets a lot of oil stock printed an' he lets all der odder peoples in on der good t'ing of self-makings, an' der Sheriff comes along, Lew, an' he takes Doc Cooks to der penitentiaries, an' der Chudge says he never vas a self-maker, only he choost t'ought he vas."

"My, my, Cho, it vas a terrible t'ing to be a self-maker sometimes, already. I vouldn't to take der chance, Lew. I vouldn't to do it for der vide, vide vorld."

"You couldn't to do it, Lew. You vas no self-maker. You vas der kind of feller vot vould get mixed up mit der Sheriff, mebbe, like dot feller in Boston. He vas a fine barber, Lew, but as a self-maker he vas a shine. He lets too many peoples in on der chob, and vhen der makings gets to runnin' der wrong vay, some o' them tells der Sheriff vhat a fine barber he vould a been if he hadn't tried to shave der profits out von der Government, and, pooph! Out he goes mit a couple o' fellers mit blue coats on showin' him der vay. And der peoples finds he ain't a self-maker at all already and never vas."

"Does all der self-makers go to der chails, Cho?"

"No, Lew, der self-makers never goes to der chails. Vhen a feller vhat ain't tries to be a self-maker, he goes to chail, mebbe, but if he don't go to chail an' gets avay mit der goods, dot makes him a self-maker."

"Mebbe you vould be a good self-maker, Cho, but I vouldn't make no bets on der vay you vould turn out to be. You vas all right, Cho, only always your foots vas slipping on der sidevalk pavements. I couldn't take der chance, Cho. I vouldn't. Not for der vide, vide vorld."

"Not even if der vife vas to make insistence, Lew? Vouldn't you, if der vife vas der boss an' wanted a self-maker?"

"Dot's a hard von, Lew. Vhat der vife says is different. But, Cho, how can a feller tell vhen he is a self-maker? Vhat vould he do to find out? I vouldn't go to chail, Cho. I never did like goin' to chail."

"Der book says if der feller vhat vants to be a self-maker start mit not'ing in der pocket but a couple o' shoestrings mit knots in 'em, an' runs der shoestrings up to a million dollars, Cho, an' don't get pinched vhile he's doin' it, he's a self-made mans. But if he vakes up some fine mornings in der little room mid der iron bars vhere der lace curtains should ought to be, he vill know he ain't a self-maker. A self-maker, says der little book, is vhat a man says he is vhen he gets avay mit it."

ANECDOTES WITH A SMILE

A CERTAIN Bishop had to lay a foundation stone and attend a confirmation on the same day. The first ceremony passed off without a hitch, and the Bishop proceeded to the confirmation. The first person to come up to him was an elderly man who was somewhat bald. The Bishop laid his hands on the man's head and said, in a loud voice: "I declare this stone to be well and truly laid!"

This is one of the many amusing stories told by Lord Meath in his interesting book, "Memoirs of the Twentieth Century" (John Murray). Here is another:

Outside the Admiral's house at one of our big naval ports is a strip of grass on which no one is allowed to walk, except the Admiral's cow, which is permitted to graze there. A sentry is posted to keep intruders from trampling on this very private grass. One day the admiral's wife appeared and put one foot on the grass. The sentry immediately turned her back.

"But I'm the Admiral's wife," she explained.

"I dare say," replied the sentry, "but you're not the Admiral's cow, and you can't pass here."

Lord Meath once had a very witty secretary, Sir Mansfield Cumming. Cumming one day came across a train filled with emigrants for Canada. They were in charge of a man who was boasting that each of them had his own particular job waiting for him when he reached the Dominion. Somebody pointed to a very old man among them, and asked what on earth there would be for him to do.

"I'll tell you," said Cumming. "His duty is important. He has to open the cemetery."

A New Kind of Bear is Discovered

After 20 years' wrangling, zoologists now agree that the mysterious small white bearskins coming from a lonely island off the British Columbia coast belong to a species of the Ursus family not hitherto classified—It was the recent capture of a cub that climbed a tree, and a scientist's inspection of his eyes, that clinched the discovery — The little white bear with the brown eyes

The little white bear with the brown eyes, photographed in his cage in the Victoria Museum.

The two cubs climbed a tree. No doubt they figured that the Indians couldn't catch them when they were up a tree.

MEET Ursus Kermodei, and shake hands if you like. The hand of Mr. Kermodei is hairy, and the fingers are tipped with sharp claws; but perhaps if you hold tantalizingly in your left hand a stick of peppermint candy as you offer your right, the mysterious stranger being thus introduced may accept your advances (including the candy) in a Christian spirit. But for the present you will not be able to offer anything save long-distance good wishes to Ursus Kermodei, unless you travel to Victoria, B. C., and visit the Museum of Natural History in that city.

In case you became so keenly interested in Mr. Kermodei as to undertake that journey, call first for Francis Kermode when you reach Victoria. Mr. Kermode is director of the museum. If you assure him that, along with Director W. T. Hornaday of the New York Zoological Garden, you accept Ursus Kermodei as official representative of a species of bear altogether new to zoologists, then Mr. Kermode will be delighted to take you to the cage where the new arrival is quartered and say:

"Meet Ursus Kermodei, and shake hands if you like."

Ursus Kermodei is named after Director Kermode, the name having been conferred by the eminent Dr. Hornaday because the British Columbia zoologist carried on the investigations which established the existence of the new species.

Ursus Kermodei is what Bret Harte's hero said of the baby that became the "luck" of Roaring Camp—"an amusin' little cuss." In the first place, he is truly little; he'll never be much bigger. The new bear, full grown, looks like a cub, so far as size goes. Nobody will dispute that all bears are amusing, in certain respects; and little bears are more so than big bears. As to this one's being "a cuss," that's just a way of saying it. The many ladies and children who have called upon him declare, unanimously, that he's "a dear."

One reason why he is such a dear is that he is white—a rich creamy white. Another reason is that he has brown eyes, unmistakably brown, beautiful eyes. Bear in mind his whiteness and the brownness of his eyes, they being primarily important in proving him something other than an ordinary bear. Bear in mind also his diminutive adult size, which also is significant in that direction. White, brown-eyed, diminutive—he is the only bear of his kind that ever came out of the wilderness alive and hungry. Hides of some of his kin have come out, but never until just a few weeks ago a live bear like this official emissary of the new-found Ursus Kermodei family.

It has required 20 years' efforts for Ursus Kermodei to establish himself, or rather to be established in spite of himself, as something new to scientists under the sun. The present specimen, who is attracting to the Victoria museum many scientific students of wild life in addition to the thousands who go to see him through curiosity, had nothing whatever to do, save unintentionally, in earning his honors.

The fact of the matter is that he went and climbed a tree instead of helping folks to get him out of the wilderness and into the books where Latin frequently fights a round or so with English. Generation after generation of bears back of this one lived and died without ever suspecting that they were anything out of the ordinary. That was chiefly because they inhabited an island—a couple of islands, to be exact—so remote from the main-sailed ways that the world outside passed them by without knowing they were there.

But this last statement should be qualified. A certain section of the world, more or less scientific, knew they were there. This section knew that some small white bears were native to those remote islands, but it didn't know that those were bears of a species never before known to civilized man. There was a strong suspicion that they were something different, but no confirmation.

A number of hides of small, cream-colored bears, only about 30 altogether, it is said, have come out of the island country off the British Columbia coast in recent years. Indian natives of other islands, or of the coastal region, have marketed the skins. It was assumed at the fur centers, such as St. Louis and New York, that these hides belonged to polar bear cubs. Some time ago one of the white pelts came under the observation of Dr. Hornaday. His professional curiosity was aroused. He got in communication with Director Kermode of Victoria, who had been telling people for years that in his opinion these little white bearskins represented a hitherto unknown species.

Certain signs and symptoms too scientific to be of general interest convinced Dr. Hornaday that Mr. Kermode was correct in his opinion. Consequently the New York expert complimented the British Columbian expert by diving into the Dead Sea of Latin and fishing up a family name for the little white bear with the beautiful brown eyes.

Before going further into details of the wrangle that has been under way in natural history circles for two decades, let us tell briefly of the adventure which resulted in the capture of Ursus Kermodei and the clinching of the Kermodean claim—the close of the wrangle. About the middle of the September just past, two Indians in a canoe landed on the rock-bound beach of Princess Royal Island, off the shore of British Columbia, a little to the south of Prince Rupert Island. Nobody lives on Princess Royal—nobody but a few little white bears and some other animals that don't count in this connection. The Indians dragged their craft to a safe point ashore and ventured inland. They found the island as wild as any place imaginable. There were trees and shrubbery and grass and rocks, and a large lonesomeness.

Those Indians were hunting any sort of animal that might yield food or fur. Suddenly they came upon the rural residence of a small white mother bear and two sizeable cubs. As a rule, a mother bear will stand by to protect her cubs, even to the death. This one, probably because she never had seen a human being before and therefore was unaware of the intentions of these intruders, ran away. Maybe she thought her babies would follow her. Anyhow, she left them to take care of themselves.

The two cubs climbed a tree. No doubt they figured that Indians couldn't catch them when they were up a tree. In this they were half-way right, for one of the cubs got away, and, let us hope, rejoined its mother. The other fell into the hands of the hunters, who tied him up and tossed him into their canoe.

The captors took their prize to the pulp settlement of Powell River, where men were felling trees to be made over into print paper—the kind used in printing the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine, for instance. In this settlement was a white man who had considerable knowledge of natural history. He had heard about the little white bears of Princess Royal Island, and of Gribble Island, near by. All the white pelts that had been marketed had come from one or the other of these islands. This amateur naturalist was more or less acquainted with the quarrel between zoologists over the identity of the island bears. He believed that he could make a handsome sum of money if he could get possession of this specimen and dispose of it to some museum in Eastern Canada or the United States.

After a lot of dickering he bought the bear for $80. He took it to Vancouver, B. C., and began negotiating with museums and zoological gardens in the East. But when the Game Department of British Columbia heard of the cub's presence and ownership, something else happened. It is against the law in that country to have a bear cub in private possession. The man was aware of the law. A warrant was sworn out for his arrest. He saw an officer approaching to serve the warrant. Like the cub's

THE SEARCH FOR A POWER THAT

Latest effort to release atomic energy, in laboratory at University of Sheffield, England, has filled some people with anxiety lest successful outcome may mean a terrible catastrophe — Vast explosion might wipe out the town, they fear, or detonate still more wide-spread bursts of destructive force —But most scientists say that whatever danger there may be will menace only the laboratory—T. F. Wall, of the Sheffield faculty, has devised apparatus which is subjecting small piece of steel tubing to the action of intensely strong magnetic field, in hope of affecting atomic structure of the steel and freeing the enormous energy which is held within the atom :-:

IN HIS laboratory at Sheffield, England, a well-known man of learning works away hopefully at science's latest investigation. It is the search for a way to disrupt the atom and thus to release vast stores of energy: not only science's latest quest but probably the most important and unquestionably the most sensational.

And the general public, in England at least, views the undertaking with mixed emotions.

Cable news, not long ago, told of the alarm which was felt in some quarters over the possibility that this problem would be solved—to the tune of frightful explosions which would spread ruin and death in their wake.

Especially in Sheffield, it appeared, was there anxiety lest the atomic energy when unleashed should prove to be uncontrollable, demolishing the laboratory, the professor and the town itself.

People farther away from the laboratory, as reported in a few instances, feared that atomic energy turned loose in Sheffield might not be sated with wiping out that town. With demoniac fury it might spread to surrounding localities, or precipitate new explosions of the same sort. And detonation might follow upon detonation, as ripples spread out when a stone is dropped into the center of a pool.

The most timorous had fearful visions of a planetary cataclysm, after which the earth would be no more, and only a vast cloud of dust would trail out along earth's former orbit around the sun. Man would have pried into nature's secrets too rashly, and would pay the penalty with annihilation of his world and of himself.

One of the most wonderful sights in the world: tracks of helium atoms flying through expansion chamber. At right, one second's discharge from speck of radium, which may total as many as 100 helium atoms. At left, deflections in path of atom, at 1 and 2, from encountering other atoms too directly. The spur at 2 shows where an atom in the way was pushed to one side.

Let it be said at once that practically all scientific men dismiss these fears as ridiculous. Atomic energy may well turn out to be a dangerous force, at first, before man has learned to govern it. But that atomic energy would bring about even a city-wide disaster is so unlikely as to be hardly worth discussion.

It may wreck the laboratory in which first it is freed from the imprisoning atomic structure. And it may injure or kill its discoverers.

"There won't be much left of the first investigator who releases atomic energy," a professor at the University of Chicago has stated.

In which case, scientific progress will have claimed just one more victim among those who have given their lives to the extension of human knowledge. Some day, perhaps, the names on that roll of honor will be as familiar to the average person as are the names of brave soldiers, naval commanders, explorers and other popular heroes.

T. F. Wall, with a string of degrees after his name, is the man at work in the laboratory at the University of Sheffield, where he holds the position of chief lecturer in electrical research.

Many other scientists, of course, are coping with the same problem. Only a few weeks ago, the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine described how physicists at the U. S. Bureau of Standards, in Washington, have taken up the study of the atom. In the beginning, their endeavor will be to learn something more about the structure of the atom. Other scientists, including some of the most famous in the world, are carrying on inquiries, too.

But Dr. Wall is making a definite attempt to release atomic energy, come what may, and he has devised an ingenious plan for grappling with the task.

It has been said that a difference of half an inch in the length of Cleopatra's nose would have changed the history of the world. But what will happen to a four-inch length of common steel tubing, in the course of Dr. Wall's experiments, may have a more profound effect on human destiny than the influence of a million Cleopatras.

Indeed, there is hardly a career in history but shrinks to insignificance in comparison with what atomic energy, released and obedient to man, will mean to the lives of this and succeeding generations.

The four-inch piece of steel tubing was chosen, in preference to some other object, for reasons to be explained later. In itself the tube is no different from other steel tubing which has a quarter-inch external diameter and has been cut to the length of four inches.

Briefly explained, Dr. Wall's method is to pass electric currents of enormous strength through a coil of wire surrounding the steel tube. These currents produce magnetic fields of an intensity which hitherto has been unapproached by any other investigator.

Dr. Wall's hope is that the magnetic fields will disturb the orbits of the atomic electrons, thus break down the structure of atoms in this bit of steel, and eventually release some or all of the energy in the atoms affected.

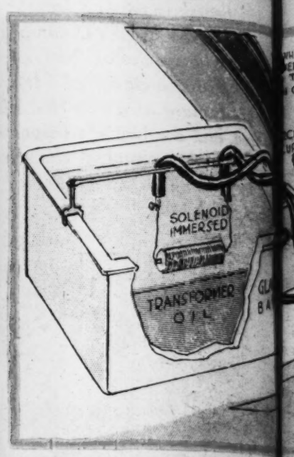
Before going into the somewhat prosy details of atomic structure as known today, and of Dr. Wall's apparatus, it may be well to glance for a moment at the romance and wonder of the things that may become possible if Dr. Wall's experiments result happily.

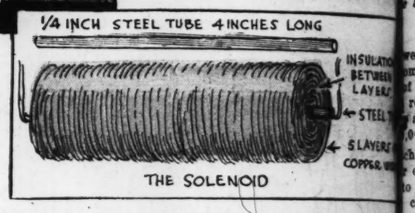
Dr. F. W. Aston, a fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, and winner of a Nobel prize in 1922, said in a lecture delivered in London last June that if the energy of the hydrogen in a pint of water could be released, it would be sufficient to drive the Mauretania across the Atlantic Ocean and back.

Dr. Edward N. Andrade, another distinguished British scientist and professor of physics at the Artillery College, Woolwich, has declared that the energy generated by 60 grains of helium in the course of its formation from hydrogen would afford about 1,000,000 horsepower for an hour.

Other scientists, while admitting the chance of dire disaster to follow the disruption of the atom, have said that if the energy thus produced could be controlled, it would do all the work of the world, and that the gamble is worth the risk.

All of them agree that if atomic energy could be released without peril, the results would be of incalculable benefit to mankind.





To understand the idea behind Dr. Wall's experiments, it is necessary to know something about the atom in which all this potential energy is confined.

One of the most recent and authentic descriptions of the atom in general (not the specific atoms called "elements") comes from the pen of Sir William Bragg, Fullerian professor of chemistry at the Royal Institution, director of the Davy-Faraday research Laboratory and winner of a Nobel prize in 1915. It is printed in a recent issue of the Illustrated London News.

Bragg calls attention to the fact that even years ago, the Latin poet Lucretius had an idea of the truth, holding that earth and water and air and all things were composed of innumerable small bodies, each too small to be seen and all in motion.

However, Lucretius had no conception of the modern form of atomic theory. (It might be mentioned here that the original meaning of the word, atom, is "that which cannot be cut.") Lucretius did not realize that there is only a very limited number of different kinds of atoms, in the world, and that all of the atoms of one sort are alike.

"There are some 90 sorts of atoms," says Bragg, "of which the whole world is made and all that is in it, and the universe, as far as we know it. All kinds of atoms are used freely, others very sparingly. The marvel is that the atoms are not only the elements of construction, but also everything required for the building. They are not only the bricks; they are also the cement and the tools. In the plan, for no other material is found beside them. We are, of course, considering material things only.

In the last quarter of a century, two new agencies have helped men to see more closely into the constitution of the atom itself. These are the study of radioactivity and of X-rays. Bragg writes:

"We may say that there were three broad principles, each well established, which were the result of scientific advance before the last period began. The first of these was the grouping of atoms in different kinds, as already explained. The second recognized the existence of forces drawing the atoms together, as exemplified in any liquid or solid.

"The third asserted that all atoms were in constant motion, even when they were the constituents of a body which seemed perfectly quiet, such as a table or a piece of paper.

"This idea is fundamental to all modern science, pure and applied: it is involved both in the most abstruse theoretical researches and in every industrial process. Although the recognition of heat as the consequence and equivalent of motion was long obscured by other theories, yet there have always been men who held sound views on the point.

Then Sir William Bragg takes up the contributions to atomic knowledge which we owe to radioactivity, as follows:

"In order to account for the fact that a solid body resists compression very strongly, we have been accustomed to suppose that each atom occupies a certain volume; and that there is a considerable difference between the volumes of the different atoms. For instance, potassium is lighter than water, but diamond is more than three times as heavy as the latter. We know, too, that the potassium atom is more than three times as heavy as the carbon atom which is the sole constituent of the diamond. The former must, therefore, be much more bulky than the latter.

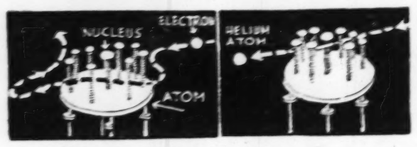
As will be noted, the tracks are mostly straight. Why? Bragg says that neither excessive speed, nor any imagined ability to dodge around the other atoms in the way, producing a course which is straight on the whole, will explain the course of the helium atom. There is only one possible explanation. The helium atom has gone through all the other atoms, and has been able to do so because of its great speed.

Sir William Bragg illustrates the point with a model which is pictured here. Several magnets stand on end in a circle, each mounted on a spring. A similar magnet stands in the center of the circle, which thus approximately represents an atom, its nucleus surrounded by satellite electrons. Says the author:

"A magnet suspended at the end of a long cord is made to approach the circle gently. If the polarities of the magnets are rightly arranged, the swing-



How an electron, moving at moderate speed, is unable to penetrate the outer ring of an atom's electrons, is shown in model at left, the electrons and nucleus being enacted by magnets. All electrons are negatively charged, and hence repel one another. The model at right shows the deflection of a hydrogen atom which was traveling so fast that it penetrated the ring of electrons and went too close to the nucleus.

ing magnet will recoil and try vainly, at various points, to enter in. If, however, it is drawn back far enough so that it comes at the circle with a rush, it will go through. It will set the standing magnets quivering on their springs, just as, in fact, the parts of an atom are known to be set in motion in the analogous case."

But the writer calls our attention to the fact that the tracks are not always straight; sometimes there are points where a sharp, though not always a large, change has been made in direction. What is the cause? In explaining this we must elaborate our idea of the atom's structure by supposing that the mass of the atom is centered in a nucleus positively electrified. Around the nucleus are arranged the atom's electrons, like satellites, all negatively electrified and all alike. The arrangement resembles a miniature solar system.

Now turn to the illustration covering this point. The left half of the illustration shows what happens if an electron, not moving too fast, encounters an atom. The right half of the illustration shows a helium atom (a nucleus only, because in its excessive speed it actually loses its two satellite electrons) passing through an atom which it has met and going so close to the nucleus that it is sharply deflected.

These deflections are shown in the picture of helium tracks, at points No. 1 and 2. At point 2 can even be seen a minute track like a spur, where an atom which was encountered too directly has been pushed off to one side. In a collision between two atoms in hydrogen, instead of in air, the effect is intensified almost into a Y-shaped track, since after the impact the two atoms have nearly equal speeds.

The minute size of the atoms should be remembered. Dr. Wall says that if a drop of water should be magnified to the size of the earth, the atoms in that drop of water would appear about the size of cricket balls. The nucleus of the atom, although relatively heavy, occupies a tiny space in the center, and the relative size of the electrons in an atom has been compared by Sir Oliver Lodge to that of flies in a cathedral.

Another point to be borne in mind is the truly enormous speed at which the electrons of an atom move in their orbits about the nucleus. In the hydrogen atom, for example, the normal speed is about 1500 miles a second, the radius of the orbit being about 1-500,000,000th part of an inch.

In all but the simplest atom (hydrogen), the electrons revolve round the nucleus in successive rings, the whole system being somewhat similar to the solar system, the nucleus corresponding to the sun, and the electrons corresponding to the several planets.

The nucleus of the atom is made up of positive and negative charges of electricity, but with more positive than negative, says Dr. Wall. The amount of the excess of the positive charge decides the nature of the atom. For example, the metal mercury has an excess of 80 positive units, and the metal gold an excess of 79 positive units. If the amount of this excess changes, the element changes into another element—in other words, transmutation of matter takes place.

It is in this way that Prof. A. Miethe of Charlottenburg has recently changed mercury into gold. By passing an electric current through mercury vapor for prolonged periods under suitable conditions, he found that a minute quantity of gold was obtained. Dr. Wall writes:

"What is considered to have happened is that the nuclei of a number of atoms of mercury were each penetrated by one negative charge, thus reducing the total excess of positive charge from 80 to 79. Since 79 is the characteristic excess positive charge of gold, the mercury has become transmuted into gold."

Dr. Wall points out that if the nucleus of an atom can itself be caused to disintegrate by throwing off some of its excess positive charge, phenomena similar to those of radioactivity would occur, with, it is

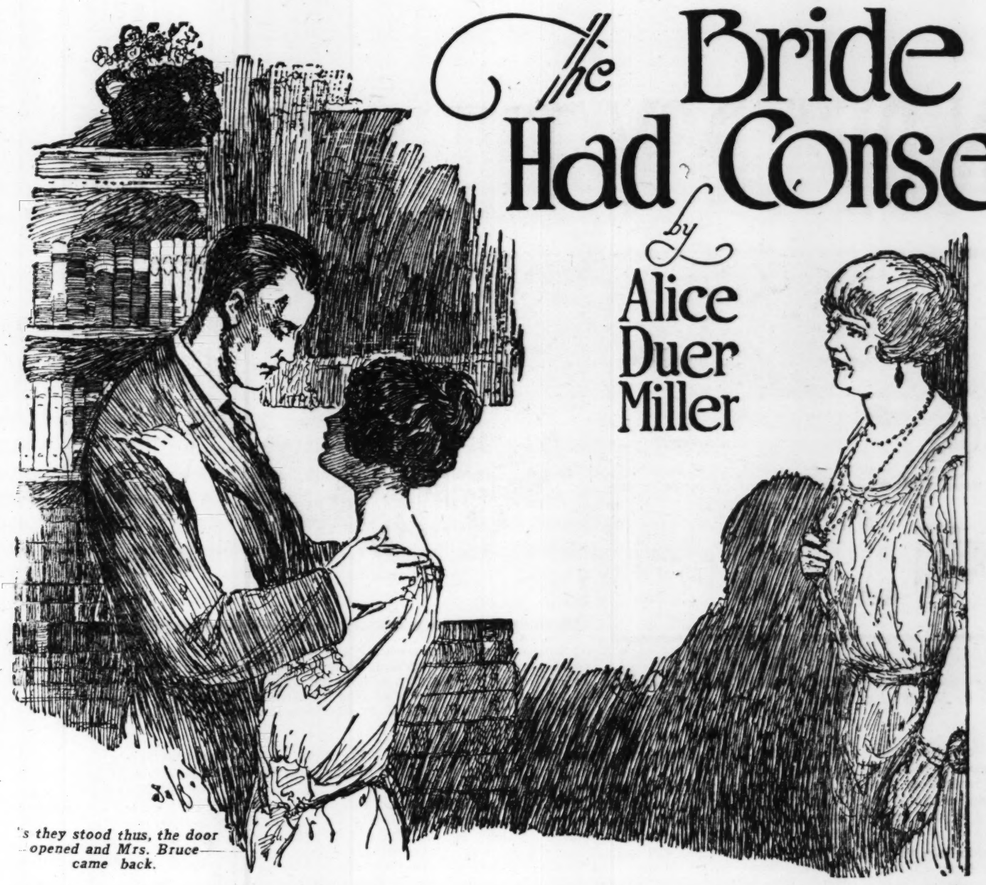
The Bride Had Consented

by Alice Duer Miller



's they stood thus, the door opened and Mrs. Bruce—— came back.

IT WAS a low wooden house painted white; three long windows with pale-green shutters opened on a terrace. As he stood looking, a procession of waiters came out rolling large, round table tops, like a frieze of Greek warriors bearing shields. The sight annoyed Rawley—most unreasonably, for if you rent your house you rent your tenant the privilege of marrying her daughter from it if she happens to want to. But Rawley found himself exclaiming inwardly: "A wedding! What an outrage!"

He had bought the house 10 years ago for his mother, but she had died before they had even moved in. After her death he had gone on his expedition to the Caucasus, and then the war had intervened. He had come home in 1918 and had spent a year in planting and painting. But by the time the house was ready for occupancy he had begun to grow restless and had gone off to Central America. Then, when for the third time he was ready to settle down, a wonderful opportunity for taking over another man's shooting trip to East Africa had tempted him. This time he decided to rent the house—shooting in East Africa being an expensive luxury.

He had thought himself exaggeratedly courteous in telegraphing his tenant that he was coming down to get out some of his stuff stored in the attic and therefore he had been irritated by her answer, which was: "Please come some other day. My daughter is being married tomorrow."

He couldn't come any other day—because two days later he was sailing. The best he could do for her was to come in the morning and get away by noon. As the wedding was at 4 o'clock, he couldn't see why he should cause the slightest inconvenience.

It was June, and the garden was looking beautiful. The grass paths were like strips of emerald velvet and solid waves of perfume came to him in the high, hot sun. Suddenly he found himself wishing he wasn't going to Africa—he would rather be living quietly in his own house—if only these horrible Bruces——

Could it be that he was getting old? He couldn't remember how old he was—31 or 32 his last birthday? He walked along with a brow slightly contracted trying to calculate from the year of his birth, when he came upon a young man seated on a stone bench within the semicircle of a cedar hedge.

His elbows were on his knees, his head and his hands were alike hanging down, and he was swaying very slightly from side to side. Rawley did not need to be told that this young man was in trouble.

"What's the matter?" he said.

The young man looked up, showing a white face, which he vainly tried to arrange into an expression suitable for meeting a total stranger.

"Nothing," he answered, but not as if he really wanted to be believed.

"What's the matter?' said Rawley again, in exactly the same stern tone. There it was, he thought; if you rented your house, you might find people in agony in all your favorite corners.

The boy stood up, fumbled in his pocket and produced his cigarette case, and, having taken it out, seemed to forget what he wanted with it. His pale-blue eyes fixed themselves slowly on the newcomer. "Aren't you Mr. Rawley?" he said. "I think you were once kind enough to give me a letter to that fellow who was digging in Yucatan."

Rawley was always being asked for such letters in the interests of men who, having failed in civilized conditions, jump to the conclusion that they will do better in the wilds. "Oh, yes," he said, groping for the facts. "Aren't you Bill Severidge's nephew? Let me see—you did not go after all—you got engaged—or something." Then a light broke. "Is this your wedding that I'm interfering with?"

It seemed a harmless question but was not well received. The young man sank down and covered his face with his hands. "She's just changed her mind," he said.

"Great heavens!" cried Rawley. "At this hour!" And glancing up at the house he saw that the tables were now being set and waiters with bunches of gilt chairs in their hands were coming out on the terrace.

All his antagonism now concentrated on the Bruces—what people! Not only having a wedding in his perfectly good house, but trapping the nephew of a splendid fellow like Billy Severidge, doing him out of a trip to Yucatan and then throwing him over at the last moment. He became instantly partisan of the young man, whom, just a moment before, he had thought of as a rather weak, feeble creature—but even as a partisan he wished to be fair. "Has anything happened to change her?" he asked.

The boy shook his head. "We've been engaged three months—perfectly happy—at least I've been. No one can understand it—not even her mother."

Rawley sat down beside the boy with an air of brisk decision.

"Now listen to me," he said, in the tone of a man accustomed to being listened to. "Whenever you lose anything in this world, no matter how valuable, there is always a compensating freedom. The trick is to use that freedom to the utmost. I haven't seen your fiancee, but I am going to offer you something that is a good exchange for any girl. I'm starting for East Africa the day after tomorrow, and I'll take you with me, if you want to go. I'll guarantee you at least one lion."

The young man stared at him. "You mean give her up?" he said.

"I thought she had given you up. You don't want to nag a woman into marrying you, do you?"

Young Severidge nodded. "I want Sybil on any terms," he said.

The suspicion that this was not the stuff out of which big game hunters are made flashed through Rawley's mind, but was instantly repressed. "You make a great mistake," he said. "If you marry a woman against her will, everything that goes wrong is your fault. It's bad enough on a 50-50 basis. But if there is any chance that she may change her mind again, nothing would make her do it as quickly as the knowledge that your had something better to do."

"Better?" said the boy.

"Better, in my opinion," answered Rawley.

"You think women are like that?"

"I think everyone is like that. Even you. You are not keen to go with me"——

"Oh, yes, I am," said Severidge. "It has always been my dream to shoot a lion." But his tone wasn't really eager.

——"but if you heard I was offering the place to someone else, you'd know at once that you wanted it," said Rawley. "Take my advice and go to Miss Bruce and put it to her once and for all—that you want to marry her if she'll go through with it, but if she won't you want to know, for you have a chance to go to South Africa with me."

"I see," answered the boy. "Well, I believe I'll do that—only I'd like to think it over a little."

Rawley stood up. "You haven't much time," he said. "I shan't be here more than half an hour."

"Oh, I know, I know," the boy answered. "Only I'm expecting my uncle at any minute. You wouldn't mind my talking it over with him, would you?"

"Talk it over with anyone you like," Rawley returned. "Only it strikes me there has been too much talk already. A little action would be a relief."

He turned to go, and something in his decisive movement gave the boy a new idea. "Why don't you speak to her," he said. "I've been waiting for my uncle, but you would do even better. Any girl would listen to a man like you—a man who's done the things you've done."

Rawley was no more susceptible to flattery than any nice person ought to be, but this hardly seemed credible. "She probably never heard my name," he answered.

"Oh, yes, she has. I've talked about you to her—she knows all about what you did in the Caucasus. Tell her what you just said about taking me or leaving me. You could make the African trip sound much more wonderful than I could."

Rawley hesitated. After all, it was to his interest to get a definite answer out of the girl—yes or no—before he left. Besides, he liked to see things done, and done right. "Very well," he said, "I'll speak to her. I'll get a decision one way or the other—I can promise you that. Don't blame me, though, if it's negative."

The boy made a hopeless gesture, as if he were beyond blaming anyone, and Rawley went on toward the house.

He did not go in at the front door, but seeing the long windows of his own library open he stepped inside.

The room had been divested of every piece of furniture. Only the books—his books—ranging from floor to ceiling, greeted him with their familiar backs. He forgot everything else. There was a map—he moved to the shelves and became absorbed.

Presently the door of the room opened and a middle-aged lady entered—Mrs. Bruce, he supposed. He had been told she had once been a beauty; but now she was obviously not at her best, either physically or spiritually. She looked at him desperately for a second as if he were just one more hideous complication in her life, and then her face brightened.

"Oh, I'm so glad you've come," she exclaimed, in a tone of genuine pleasure, which surprised Rawley, who remembered her warning telegram.

"You're very kind," he answered formally.

"Oh, it's not kindness, it's pure selfishness," she returned. "We need you terribly—nobody but you. I believe, can make these two young people see reason. Of course, it's all Sybil's fault. She should have known her own mind earlier. Only if Freddie wouldn't cry so much."

"Does he cry?" said Rawley, thinking that really if he went about crying in the heart of Africa——

"Only because he loves her so much," said Mrs. Bruce. "Oh, I'm entirely on his side. I think she ought to go through with it now, no matter how she feels. I can't face the scandal of turning everyone away. Besides, between ourselves, Mr. Severidge, it doesn't make much difference after a year or so whom you marry. Romantic love makes so much trouble. My daughter keeps saying that it's terrible to marry a man you don't love. So it is, but life's terrible. It's probably a little more horrible not to be married at all—I can't make her see that."

"I think you're wrong," said Rawley.

"Ah," said this alarming woman, "wait until you're older. Wait until you're old and sick and lonely and no one wants to come and take care of you."

He wished she had not said just that. For more than a year now he had been, not lonely, but uncomfortably aware that such a thing as loneliness existed. A little shiver ran through him, and he said,

...y: "What do you want me to do?"

"I want you to make him behave like a man."

Rawley shook his head. "If he had in him, he wouldn't wait for me to make him."

"At least," said Mrs. Bruce, "you can make him go to her and say she must have him or leave him. That might bring her to her senses. Have you no influence with your own nephew?"

"Worse than that," said Rawley, "I haven't a nephew. I'm not Bill Sevridge. I'm just the landlord."

"Mercy!" said Mrs. Bruce, "how idiotic!" With which she turned sharply and left the room, as if somehow the whole thing had been his fault.

Perhaps she would come back, he thought, and tell him when he might attack the attic. In the meantime he went back to the perusal of the map, made many years ago by a famous explorer—yes, that was the place, he thought, where they left the main highway.

Again the door opened. He looked up. A girl, white as a camelia, with a small and now trembling red mouth, had come into the room. She shut the door behind her and stood leaning against it, looking at him. Then she advanced to him and, as if it were the most natural thing in the world, she put her arms about his neck, and, laying her head against his heart, murmured: "Oh, Uncle Bill, you're going to help me; you're going to be on my side, aren't you?"

Rawley was a brave man, but not one who courted disaster.

So now, in one of the strangest adventures that had ever come to him, he did not clasp the lovely creature with any violence; still less did he let her go.

He held her firmly with one arm, while with the other hand he patted her hair. It was nice hair to pat—soft to the touch and yet, when it was pressed, possessed of a strong resilience. They stood thus for a full minute—more. In the next room a note was struck on the piano and someone began to tune a violin. The orchestra had arrived rather early.

The sound seemed to rouse the girl somewhat, for she said without raising her head, breathing her words into the buttonhole of his waistcoat: "What do you decide?"

"What did I decide?"

"You and Freddie—I watched you out of the window—talking and talking. I meant to get at you first. I nearly went mad," she answered.

"You're sure you haven't?" he asked, addressing no one but himself.

She drew back far enough to look at him. "You must hear my side, too," she said. Rawley's thought was that he wouldn't if telling it would necessitate the slightest change of position. However, it didn't, for she went on: "I never told Freddie I would marry him—never. I said I would think it over, and he rushed away and told his friends, though I asked him not to, and then it got into the papers, and everybody was so pleased, particularly my mother, who adores Freddie, and whenever I tried to get out of it he always said it was too bumiliating to him if I threw him over when it had been announced. Sometimes I would think that I shouldn't mind marrying him so terribly. But as it came nearer I saw it was the most terrible idea in the world. For a week now I have been telling everyone I couldn't do it, and it is as if they were all deaf—no one listens to me; they all go on making arrangements for the wedding as if I had not spoken. I won't do it, Uncle Bill," she said, and shuddered and hid her face again and added with a wail: "Oh, what shall I do, what shall I do?"

"What you're doing now seems all right to me," he replied.

"But it isn't getting me anywhere."

"Don't be too sure of that," he said, quietly. He did not feel quiet, except in the sense that he wished to remain exactly as he was.

"Listen, my dear child," he said. "You are opposing words to actions, which is about as effective as opposing a pane of glass to a bullet. Stop talking and act. Go upstairs and get whatever things you need for a day or two and go down and get into my automobile, which is waiting for me at the foot of the garden steps. I will drive you to town—or wherever you want to go—and from there you will telephone your mother. Tomorrow, when all the fuss is over, you will come home and make it up with her."

"It's terrible for my mother," said the girl.

"You can't get out of holes like this and be lovely to everyone."

"I'm afraid it will ruin Freddie's whole life."

"Perhaps, but he's agreed to go shooting with me in Africa tomorrow—that is, if you really remain obdurate."

At this she looked straight up at him, opening her hazel eyes in obvious alarm. "Good heavens," he said to himself, "when it comes to a showdown she doesn't want him to go." It was only a second—a second fraught with horror, and then she said: "Don't tell me you're going away."

Rather to his own surprise, he heard himself saying, gently: "Well I was"—

"No, no," said the girl. "Don't. I seem to feel braver when you're near."

"In that case," he said, thoughtfully, and he took her small chin in his hand, "in that case"—— And he stooped and kissed her.

He had intended it—or rather, he had no plan about it, but he had expected when he found he was certainly going to kiss her, that it would be a pleasant, semi-avuncular kiss—a kiss after which you smiled and parted. It turned out, as these things sometimes do, an entirely different sort—a kiss which became your master and endured, a kiss after which you did not smile and after which you certainly did not part.

The person in the next room had stopped tuning the violin, or perhaps they had merely ceased to hear him, although Rawley became acutely aware of the beating of his heart. He felt the girl's whole figure grow limp in his arms, as if her knees were less rigid than before. They moved a little apart, his hand still on her shoulder, and looked at each other.

As they stood thus the door opened and Mrs. Bruce came back. She came in quickly, and it was evident that she had forgotten that her landlord existed, for she seemed startled at seeing him again, even before she saw her daughter. Then she said: "May I ask, Sybil, what are you doing in the arms of a total stranger?"

Sybil smiled an unembarrassed smile, as one so often smiles at the mistakes of the older generation, and withdrawing completely from Rawley's arms, but without undue haste, said: "This is Uncle Bill, at last, mother dear."

"Nothing of the kind," replied her mother. "It's just Mr. What's-his-name—the landlord."

Sybil looked at him quickly for a denial of this preposterous statement.

"Your mother is right," he said. "I am just Mr. What's-his-name. Nevertheless, I gave you some excellent advice a moment ago, which I hope you will follow."

She nodded and walked to the door. There she turned and said:

"Mother, I will not marry Freddie."

Her mother was evidently so accustomed to this statement she forgot to say "nonsense" until the door had actually shut behind her daughter, when she said it with great force. Then she turned to Rawley.

"You really can't stay here," she said, as if he had wanted to. "We're using this for the men's coats."

He suggested as politely as was necessary that he had come, not to dance at the wedding, but to get a gun out of the closet in the garret.

"Then why don't you go and get it?" said his tenant. "I assume that you know your way about the house." She was really hardly civil, he thought, as he went upstairs. The rails were wreathed in smilax. On the second floor he saw the wedding presents set out in a room apart, and through the open door of another room he caught sight of a white dress—all tulle and lace—lying on the bed, and two small pointed silver slippers standing side by side on the floor near it. He stopped short with a sort of inner spasm as he saw those slippers, and stood staring at them so long that the detective appeared in the doorway of the other room and looked at him with suave suspicion. Rawley pulled himself together and, opening the door of the garret stairs, went up them.

He unlocked the door of his own cupboard and took the "450" from the shelf. For the first time in his life the sight of a gun case failed to give him a thrill of anticipation. Could it be, he said to himself, that any man could lose his interest in lions?

There was an old fishing rod and a case for flies and those old wading boots. What times he had had in them! He took them out and dropped them on the floor, where they fell over with a rubbery sound in opposite directions, revealing the lining of their wide tops. There was a long waterproof coat, too. He might as well take that with him, if he went. He started and raised his head as if listening to words which seemed to have come to him out of the air. If he went! But of course he was going. If he went! What a strange thing!

Again the door at the foot of the stairs opened and a man's step was heard on the stairs—a serious gray head, intelligent eyes and severe mouth, rose in the well of the stairs, the head unmistakably of a Bishop—or so Rawley told himself afterward, as if he had known it even before the clerical collar, the cross and the well-cut, full-skirted coat dawned on his vision.

"Well, sir," said the Bishop, severely, and added, as his severity produced no effect: "Well, Mr. Rawley, you've made a good deal of trouble in this already troubled household."

Rawley continued unpacking the cupboard: "Made it? I should say I had allayed it. Why should anyone marry someone they don't want to marry?"

"There is such a thing as swearing unto your neighbor and disappointing him not, though it be to your own hindrance," answered the Bishop, but Rawley could see that, though his mouth was still severe, his eyes were roving with interest over the instruments of the chase which the open door of the cupboard revealed. "Your advice, sir, was unwise and unsolicited. You encouraged a momentary hysteria. I have come from Mrs. Bruce to ask you to leave the house at once. I will see you to your automobile."

"The English can make a gun, can't they?" said Rawley.

"Why," said the Bishop, "I don't know that I ever saw one of those, although at one time"—— He put out his hands thoughtfully and took the gun. "In my younger days," he said, "I was something of a shot. In fact, while I was in the theological seminary I decided to become a missionary to India, but later I discovered that my interest was more in shooting in the Himalayas than in saving heathen souls, and I have never touched a gun to his shoulder. "I don't suppose I could hit a barn door now."

"Probably you could," answered Rawley, not manifesting too much interest. "A good eye is always a good eye."

"It's true," said the Bishop, "that my eye was a fair one at all sports, and I noticed just the other day, at one of these church fairs where they have such contest—— But this was not what I came to speak of, Mr. Rawley."

"This is a rather unusual snapshot of a charging lion," said Rawley.

The Bishop took it, feeling for his glasses. "Bless my soul," he exclaimed, "what a remarkable picture! What a magnificent animal! And did you snap that yourself?"

"I was more snapped than snapping," said Rawley. "It is at me that he is looking with that loving eye of his. I had just caught my foot in a bush and fallen flat on my face."

"Bless my soul!" said the Bishop. He

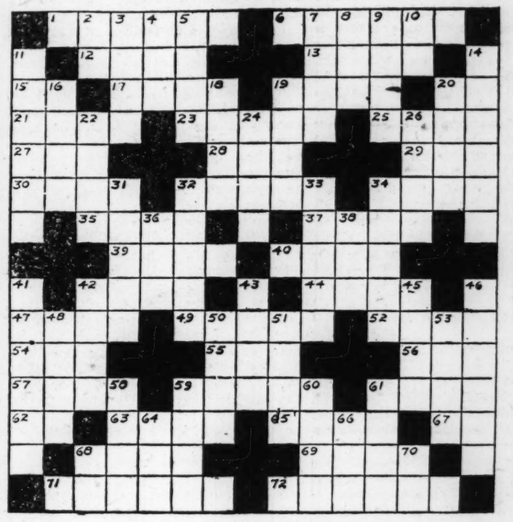
A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE TO TAX YOUR SKILL



By KAY K. KAY.

HOW TO SOLVE THE CROSS-WORD PUZZLE.

EVERY number in the form represents the beginning of a word, reading either horizontally or vertically. If there is a black square to the left of the number, the word is horizontal; if above it, the word is vertical. The same number may, of course, begin both a horizontal and a vertical. The definitions for the correct words to fill the form are found below, with numbers corresponding to those on the form. Run through the definitions till you find one that you recognize, and put it in its proper place on the form, one letter for each white square. This will furnish several cross-clews to the words linking with it at right angles. Continue in this manner till the form is completely filled. If you have solved the puzzle correctly it should read both horizontally and vertically with words corresponding to the definitions.

HOT CROSS BUNS

This cookie will put you in a Brown study. The 32 horizontal is to 20 vertical and not to 61 horizontal.

A New Kind of Bear Is Discovered

mother, he fled. So far as present information goes, he was not caught.

The police seized the lonely cub. Being recognized at sight as young Mr. Ursus Kermodei, he was shipped forthwith to the one man in the world who was entitled to have official custody. Dr. Hornaday already had named him for Mr. Kermode, and to Mr. Kermode he was sent. The Government made the museum director custodian of the valuable specimen.

The first thing Mr. Kermode did when the cub arrived was to lift the animal's head high into the sunlight. Kermode's heart leaped for joy. The eyes were brown! The 20-year wrangle was ended. The species was proved. Kermode was vindicated before the scientific world.

You see, most of the zoologists had contended that these bears were merely albinos. If this first live specimen had had pink eyes the theory of a new species would have fallen to the ground. Albinos, which are nothing but occasional freak departures from type, have pink eyes. The brown eyes saved the situation.

Dr. Kermode at once wired Dr. Hornaday about the matter. Hornaday didn't wait for slow mails; he wired a request to hold the cub for him, and sent a letter by airplane mail making a proposition to buy it for the New York Zoo. The Game Department ruled against that, and the cub remained in Victoria.

Since Ursus Kermodei was established in his new home, many amusing suggestions have been made to his custodian. One lady insisted that honey be fed to the bear, to make him feel more at home. Honey, it appears, is not found on either of the islands inhabited by the little white bears. Another woman was afraid the cub might catch rheumatism. She suggested that the cage be roofed in. Mr. Kermode explained that Princess Royal Island, with 210 inches of rain annually, is one of the wettest places on earth.

The cub is growing, but not rapidly. He never will be a big bear, but in the limited circle of the scientists who have a taste for such matters he is already a big sensation. Further excursions to the native island of Ursus Kermodei are to be arranged, with a view to studying these animals at their home and finding out, if possible, their origin and why they are so few in number and confined to two small islands.

The Detective Tells How He "Laid the Ghost" That Robbed New Orleans Bank

tolled midnight. A tropical hush spread over the sleeping city. Twelve-thirty. The shriveled watchman limped to the window, glanced out, whistled a few bars of an old French folk song which reverberated shrilly through the still, oppressive night, and limped into the room at the rear. One o'clock——

Two sinister figures, one tall and lean, the other dwarfishly fat, shambled past me, peered into the bank, and vanished, muttering, around the corner. One-thirty—nothing. One-forty-five—nothing. Two o'clock——

As I stared tensely before me I thought that the electric light reflected on the door of the vault twinkled slightly, though the door itself gave no sign of motion. The same instant the clock beneath my hand clicked, stopped; the alarm began to buzz softly.

With a bound I was outside my tomb-like shelter and at the shining gates of the bank. Crouched behind a stone pillar, I gazed eagerly within. A shadowy figure was crawling flat on its belly like a snake away from the glimmering vault. It crept toward me. I crouched breathless, motionless as a statue, my revolver drawn. Noiselessly the serpentine creature raised to hand and knees.

"Good evening, Mr. Walton," I murmured, politely.

He jerked back as though he had been suddenly confronted by some fearful monster of the jungle. White with terror, he tried to speak. When at length he did regain his composure, he growled a few unintelligible words under his breath, and, with a curt shrug of his dapper shoulders, rose and began to hurry off.

But I seized his arm. "Just a minute," I snapped. "Wouldn't you like to take a walk? Two o'clock in the morning is a very pleasant time for walking. Very pleasant."

He struggled fiercely and once more stared at me with the cowering eyes of a trapped beast. "Who the devil are you?" he snared. "A hold-up man?"

"Worse than that for you," I retorted. "A detective."

He bolted from my grasp and madly, desperately, began racing down the cobblestones. Easily I caught him.

In half an hour he admitted his guilt. The aristocratic teller, Severn Walton, was the invisible man.

But there was little need for his confession. For a few hours before, when I had made my last rigid examination of the vault, I had found the truth. Each of the tiny but all-important pins hidden inside the time lock, the pins which set the mechanism, had been so filed that with the proper pressure they could instantly be sprung out of place and the time lock rendered useless. From Saturday night until Monday morning the time lock of that vault might as well have been removed, for it never functioned.

To build up the ghost myth had required infinite study of time locks and tireless labor. But all this and more the evilly clever Walton was willing to give that he might rob the institution of which he was a pillar. He had associated constantly with the rich and fashionable, supposing himself to be the rich son of a rich mother; but, as it turned out, he was actually the pauper son of a mother who left nothing but debts. Gradually he had felt the love of money sweep through his being until it had become a burning, unconquerable passion. Constantly scheming and plotting, he had contrived that it should be he and no other man who was left each Saturday night to lock the great vault. As his fellow tellers anxiously made ready to depart, he set the useless time lock and pushed the vault door shut. But he did not close it tight. Instead, it was left ajar a fraction of an inch, not enough to be perceived, but ample to prevent the heavy lugs from slipping into their sockets.

After turning off all the lights except the one that shone constantly upon the vault, he had clicked the bronze gates at the entrance to make the watchman in the rear believe that he had followed the others home, but instead he had dodged stealthily into the high locker a few feet from the door. Here he waited until 2 o'clock, when the watchman was in the rear comfortably eating lunch.

At that time he would creep out from his hiding place and crawl flat along the floor to the vault, certain that he could not be discerned from outside because the wall masked the base of the vault for the height of a foot, while his prone body rose to a height of only seven or eight inches.

With a thin-bladed knife he wedged open the door of the vault until his thin finger could squeeze between the edges of the metal and withdraw a sack of $200 in gold.

Here again his diabolical genius entered. On the plea that the glare affected his tender eyes when he worked long in the teller's cage, he had arranged the light over the vault in such fashion that its dazzling rays would tend to blind any observer and make detection of a slight movement of the door impossible. Though my gaze had never left the door, when it was opened my eyes had detected only the faintest twinkle. Thus, secure, with the sack in his hand, the outstretched Walton would close the safe, tightly this time, and wriggle off with his spoils, leaving behind him mystery and panic.

The two sinister figures who had shambled past the bank in the tropical darkness were not accomplices, but two laborers in a steel mill who peered through the window each morning on their way to work for a chance glimpse of their withered but genial crony, Janterre, the watchman.

The dapper Severn Walton still spends his Saturday nights within a cage. But above that cage is no bronze sign reading "Teller," and through its steel bars no one can walk gayly to his home, even though he has once been an invisible man. For most penitentiary officials, like myself, do not believe in ghosts.

And Now That the Income Tax Is Made Public —!

percentage of his actual income.

It has been shown that the men who make the laws and guide the Government are in the capitalistic class and that the income tax law has been twisted so as to favor the holders of immense fortunes.

Who, then, is to speak for the great exempt? Who is to speak for the army of men whose income-tax payments range from $2 to $100, and who never possess enough to pay for one little tax-exempt security? Who has their interest at heart? What horny-handed man of the people is there who will cry out against this farce of taxation?

Not Henry L. Mencken, editor of the American Mercury, who has cried out against a great many current American absurdities. Mencken paid a tax of $267, and it is alleged that he possesses several tax-exempt securities. The critical Heywood Broun settled with the Government to the tune of $2177—which, according to the scale, would make his income about $18,000 a year. Franklin P. Adams, the columnist, who alternately defends and laughs at the man in the street, paid $1303. Christopher Morley, an ex-columnist, handed over $7078 to the Government.

Not among the prominent writers of the day is one who can claim democratic poverty. Mary Roberts Rinehart reported $42,612. Edith Wharton paid $16,876. Zane Grey listed an income tax of $22,112.

Nor are the publishers of America in the class to which an appeal for stricter application of the income tax law would naturally be welcome. Conde Nast paid $31,588; Horace B. Liveright, $116; Cyrus H. Curtis, $586,654; Ogden Reid, $15,228; Ralph Pulitzer, $83,619; Edward W. Bok, $246,504; James M. Cox, $2481; Adolph S. Ochs, $65,692; Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., $3100, and William Randolph Hearst, $40,537.

Would J. P. Morgan, who paid only $98,643, be interested in a straight percentage basis for the income tax, with all dodges ruled out? Would John D. Rockefeller, who paid but $124,266, be interested in a campaign to tax big fortunes out of existence? How about Bernard M. Baruch, who paid $45,729, and Frank A. Vanderlip, with but $56,704?

Generally speaking, the motion picture stars whose income taxes have been published have almost lived up to press-agent reports as to their salaries, but not quite. Jackie Coogan paid $505 and his parents $4255. They apparently collected for Jackie. Douglas Fairbanks reported an income tax of $225,769. He has been both an actor and a producer. His wife, Mary Pickford, reported $2444.

Other actors and actresses paid income taxes as follows: William S. Hart, $22,654; Charlie Chaplin, $6863; Will Rogers, $5966; Ann Pennington, $1091; Al Jolson, $45,070; Richard Barthelmess, $29,995; Peggy Hopkins Joyce, $1069; Jeanne Eagels, $1886; Leonore Ulric, $10,325; David Warfield, $9482; Ethel Barrymore, $1298; Pola Negri, $14,861.

And Socialists? Those long-haired, hungry fellows who want everybody to chip in all they have and divide up equally? Morris Hillquit, for example, paid an income tax of $2688. His income, therefore, is around $25,000 per year.

Spokesmen who oppose publication of income tax returns argue that it is a betrayal of the private affairs of the individual, and that the moral effect is bad, tending to spread dissatisfaction and unrest among the great exempt. But what interesting reading the lists make! What ironies and absurdities in the lists of figures!

The Bride Had Consented

insisted on having the story. It was a good one, and took some minutes to tell. Before it was over, another step came unheard on the stairs, and Mrs. Bruce's pale, anxious face appeared in the stairwell at their feet.

"Well, Bishop," she said, "is this your idea of hurrying Mr. Rawley's departure?"

If the Bishop had not been the possessor of a strangely sweet smile, he would have looked extremely foolish, but he smiled instead; without however, melting the heart of Mrs. Bruce, who continued: "While you have been chatting with him up here, she has been trying to get away to his automobile. Fortunately I met her, and I don't think she will try that again."

"I can't imagine," said Rawley, who had made a nice little pile of the things he wished to take with him, and now was replacing everything on the shelves, "I can't imagine why you should wish your daughter to marry a man she doesn't want to marry."

"She does want to," said Mrs. Bruce. "She loves him—at least she did until just the other day. It's just hysteria—lots of girls go through it before their marriages. She could never live down such a scandal—besides, what could I tell people?"

"Nothing more complicated than that she had changed her mind," answered Rawley.

"I suppose that might be done," said the Bishop.

"Nonsense! Come away, Bishop. This man is upsetting even your judgment," said Mrs. Bruce, and the Bishop followed her reluctantly.

They went down, leaving the door open behind them, so that Rawley could hear the orchestra, now fully prepared for action, practicing in the lower hall.

Another footstep sounded on the stairs, like the pattering of rain on the roof, and Sybil herself appeared.

"I don't know what you'll say to me," she began, delightfully intimating by this form of words that he had now become the arbiter of her destiny, "but I'm afraid I'm a coward. I can't do it."

"Oh, yes, you can," he said.

"Once I turned back because Freddie is sitting there in the garden and wants to go all over it again, and I can't do that; and once mother met me—and, oh dear, I never saw her so upset! She keeps saying it will kill her. Oh, what ought I to do?"

When she came in he had been turning an old waterproof hat about in his hand, wondering whether to leave it out or put it away, and now he suddenly placed it on her head and fastened the strap under her chin. Then he looked and laughed. Sybil asked quickly:

"Why are you laughing at me?"

"Because you're so pretty."

"Is it comic to be pretty?"

"Yes—as pretty as that." He made her put on the rain coat and a pair of boots—not the wading boots, another pair, large but not high, to conceal her small feet.

"Now," he said, "take this gun case in one hand, and this bag in the other—it's heavy, can you manage it?" (She picked it up as if it were a feather.) "Walk downstairs and through the garden—not too fast, but not looking to right or left, and get into my car, which is waiting at the foot of the garden steps. Tell the chauffeur to drive a hundred feet up the road and stop. I'll be with you in three minutes."

"What will your chauffeur think?"

"My chauffeur is a man of great experience"——

"Oh!" said Sybil, as if someone had hurt her.

——"Acquired in the employ of others."

"Oh!" said Sybil, as if she had not been hurt, after all.

He watched her down the stairs, the rain coat trailing a little on the step behind, and the bag bumping from stair to stair. It could not be said she looked like a chauffeur, but then neither did she look like the slim bride-to-be of a few minutes before. Unfortunately, the garret had no windows; he could not watch her progress across the garden.

He finished his arrangements, locked the closet door and ran downstairs. In the lower hall Mrs. Bruce was receiving the congratulations of a group of relations, who had evidently arrived a little early—such phrases as, "I hear he is such a delightful young man," and, "I'm so glad the dear child is so happy," reached him as he passed.

The Bishop detached himself from the circle, and said, severely: "I will see you to your car, Mr. Rawley." Nothing told Rawley whether or not the girl had run the gantlet of all those eyes. Of course, if she were not in the car before him, he should be obliged to come back and fight it all out in the open.

He and the Bishop moved into the garden, side by side, maintaining a stiff silence. Then the Bishop said:

"You are not taking your gun, after all?"

"I sent it down by my man," said Rawley, and glanced quickly at the Bishop's face. It was a mask.

As they approached the cedars, Freddie looked up. "Oh, are you going, Mr. Rawley?" he said, without enthusiasm.

"I think so," said Rawley. He couldn't be quite sure.

The boy rose and said with a mixture of aggressiveness and timidity: "You weren't a very successful messenger, Mr. Rawley. I don't think I should advise anyone to depend on you to help them out."

"Miles Standish was never one of my favorite heroes," answered Rawley.

"I don't know what you mean by that," said the boy. But, Rawley, noticing that the Bishop understood him perfectly and was taking alarm, changed the subject rapidly.

"Tell me, Severidge," he said, "did you notice my chauffeur passing by with my gun?"

"No," said the boy, "I don't think so—or, yes, I believe someone did go past, but he looked more like a fisherman than a chauffeur."

"He dresses a trifle oddly, I know," said Rawley, "but he's very valuable to me—more valuable than anyone I ever had." His manner grew noticeably brisk and gay. "Good-by," he said.

"And one other thing," said the boy, with a certain swagger, "I don't think that I care to go on your African trip, either."

"Of course not," said the Bishop. "You're going to stay here and be married."

"In any case, I shouldn't care to go with this gentleman," said Freddie. "Doubtless he can find someone in my place."

"Yes," said Rawley, "I think I can. I think I know just the person," and waving his hand with unusual gayety, he ran down the garden steps and disappeared.

The Search for a Power That Might Even Destroy the World

supposed, the release of a vast amount of energy.

"Further, if it were in some way possible to blow an electron out of its orbit near the nucleus, sooner or later its place would be taken by an electron from one of the outer orbits of the atom. When this occurs, a great amount of energy will be radiated out in the form of very high-frequency waves."

Then Dr. Wall takes up the theory of the work upon which he is engaged in that Sheffield laboratory.

"The essential feature of the method by which the author is attempting to interfere with the structure of the atom, and particularly with the orbits of the electrons, is the use of extremely intense magnetic fields produced artificially and impressed on the atom. In accordance with well-known principles of electrical engineering, if very intense magnetic fields are impressed on the rapidly revolving electrons, they become subjected to a disturbing force, and consequently their orbits will be correspondingly affected.

"In other words, electrons from the inner portions of the atoms may be blown out of their paths, with a corresponding release of energy in the form of high-frequency waves.

"If the disturbance of the electronic orbits also results in the penetration of the nucleus by some of the electrons, transmutation of the element will be accomplished. If the expulsion of some of the excess positive charge of the nucleus is affected, it will be accompanied by the release of some of the atomic energy."

At first, Dr. Wall concentrated his efforts on developing a new method for producing extremely intense magnetic fields and impressing them in a suitable manner on the atoms of the material under test. At the present time he can obtain magnetic fields which are approximately 20 times more intense than any hitherto produced.

Why was a piece of steel chosen for the test? Dr. Wall explains the reason. It is known that the peculiar property of magnetism which is associated with steel (and also with iron) is due to special groupings of the rapidly revolving electrons in the atoms of the steel. The electrons speeding round in their orbits are identical in their effects with electric currents circulating within the atoms, and thus the fact is accounted for that steel can be magnetized. He says:

"Now, if the result of the author's experiments is that the peculiar groupings of the electrons in the atoms are disturbed, the magnetic qualities of the steel will be modified—that is to say, the steel may be rendered capable of much greater magnetization, or, on the other hand, its magnetic qualities may be impaired. In any case, if the magnetic qualities do alter, it is a clear indication that the grouping of the electrons is being disturbed."

Round about the four-inch length of steel tubing are wound several layers of thick, insulated copper wire, and the whole is immersed in a large glass tank filled with transformer oil. A group of static condensers—apparatus for storing large quantities of electricity—is charged to a high voltage, and then suddenly discharged through the oil-immersed copper coil, which is called the solenoid.

The result is that for the small fraction of a second an extremely powerful oscillating current flows in the coil. This current gives rise to a correspondingly intense magnetic field, which passes through the material of the steel tube in a longitudinal direction. The apparatus is powerful enough to permit of 200,000 horsepower being supplied to the coil for a very small interval of time.

Dr. Wall never expected that a single application of even such tremendous power would suffice to produce any appreciable effect on the atomic structure. So he devised apparatus by means of which the power can be applied at regular intervals over prolonged periods of time. This is done with an oscillating lever switch, driven by a small motor. The gearing between motor and switch is variable, and such that the lever of the switch may make one complete oscillation in about three minutes.

When the oscillating lever switch is in position for the charging process, the electric generator sends a current from its positive terminal through a buffer resistance, through the mercury cup contact of the switch and so to one set of terminals of the static condensers. The negative terminal of the generator is connected to the other set of terminals of the static condensers. The oscillating switch maintains this connection, say, for about one and one-half minutes, so that the condensers become fully charged with a large quantity of electricity.

The switch then snaps over to the other side, with the result that the circuit of the electric generator is first opened, and then the switch closes into the other mercury cup. The static condensers are thereby connected to the oil-immersed coil which embraces the piece of steel tube. Consequently, an extremely heavy current flows through this coil and produces a very intense magnetic field through the steel tube.

So much for the technical side of the Sheffield experiments, which Dr. Wall describes in a recent issue of the Illustrated London News. Of more general interest is his comment:

"The peculiar fascination of the problem of disrupting the atom lies in the well-founded belief that vast stores of energy would thus be rendered accessible for useful purposes. It is believed that the energy so obtainable would be sufficient to drive all the machinery in the world for an indefinite period. The immediate consequence of this would be that coal and oil fuel would become practically obsolete.

"The experimental results so far obtained by the author indicate that at least one remarkable incidental effect is taking place—namely, when the very intense magnetic fields are produced inside the copper coil, a kind of instability of the electric resistance of the coils appears. This phenomenon is being examined and may lead to far-reaching practical applications."

There has been much speculation concerning the way in which the internal energy of the atom would become evident if the atomic structure were disrupted. Would the manifestation be in the form of catastrophic disturbances of matter, or as rays of energy of some type at present unknown? No satisfactory answer can be given at present, says the author, and it is only by cautious, direct experiment that any definite knowledge can be obtained.

And Dr. Wall concludes the discussion of his research as follows:

"From a practical point of view, perhaps the most important matter, if disruption were obtained, would be the possibility of controlling the energy so released. The solution to this problem may not be easily found, but it may be said with almost absolute certainty that there will be no insuperable difficulty.

"Probably one of the most promising methods of controlling the energy would be by intense magnetic fields, and it is conceivable that, by these means, the released energy may be concentrated and manipulated in the form of a beam or ray, so as to be available for use in any desired direction."

How I Ended Superfluous Hair At Once And For All

Without Unpleasant Wax, Pastes, Powders, Liquids, Shaving or the Electric Needle

Only a woman who has felt the horror and humiliation of a disfiguring hairy growth on the face, neck, arms and limbs can possibly know what joy and happiness came over me when first I realized that at last all trace of superfluous hair had gone and my skin was clear, soft and smooth like that of a babe. And this after years of disappointment with almost every depilatory, liquid, paste, powder, wax and other methods, including razors, that I had ever heard of. Before I hit upon the simple, easy, harmless new way which has given me such amazing and lasting relief from my affliction, the ugly hair always came right back thicker and heavier than ever. When I confided to some of my friends how I had at last solved the age-old problem of getting rid of superfluous hair—at once and for all—they said it would be selfish not to share my secret with others. So I have decided to explain to anyone interested exactly how I succeeded. ABSOLUTELY FREE if you will simply send me your name and address with a stamp for sealed reply.

Electricity Needs You Now
I Will Train You at Home

Stop right here. This is Your Big Opportunity. Electricity is calling you. The Electrical Industry is the fastest growing thing in the world. It is expanding at the rate of a billion dollars a year. But it needs more trained men—big-pay men. With My Home Study Course in Practical Electricity I can quickly fit you to fill one of these big-pay jobs. Electricity needs you now.

Earn $70 to $200 a Week—That's $3,500 to $10,000 a Year—It's Easy

You've always had a liking for Electricity and a hankering to do Electrical jobs. It's the most interesting thing in the world. Now is the time to cash in on your talent—There's big money in it. Even if you don't know a thing about Electricity now, I can make a real Electrical Expert out of you in a few short months' time. I have put thousands of men into big-pay jobs—$3,500 to $10,000 a year. I have started hundreds in successful businesses of their own. I will do the same for you.

You Have Ambition—Let Me Show You How to Make Money Out of It

What are you doing to prepare yourself for a real success? At the rate you are going where will you be in ten years from now? Have you the specialized training that will put you on the road to success? Have you ambition enough to prepare for success, and get it?

You have the ambition and I will give you the training in the greatest business on earth. So Get Busy. I am offering you success and all that goes with it. Will you take it? I'll make you an ELECTRICAL EXPERT. I will train you as you should be trained. I will give you the benefit of my advice and twenty years of engineering experience and help you in every way to the biggest possible success.

Step out of your $20 to $30 a week job—you can earn from two to ten times that much in Electricity.

Age or Lack of Experience Makes No Difference

You don't have to be a High School Graduate— it isn't even necessary that you should have finished the grades. As Chief Engineer of the Chicago Engineering Works, I know exactly the kind of training you need, and I will give you that training. My Course in Electricity is the most simple, thorough, successful and practical in existence, and offers every man, regardless of age, education or previous experience, the chance to become, in a few short months, an "ELECTRICAL EXPERT" able to make from $70 to $200 a week.

Electrical Outfit Free — Earn Extra Money While You Learn

Shortly after you enroll for my Home Study Course I will give you a complete Outfit of tools and electrical apparatus and special instructions on how to get and how to do simple electrical jobs in your spare time without interfering with your regular work. You can easily make several times the amount of the monthly payments on my course this way. Some of my students make as high as $30 a week this way in addition to their regular salaries.

Satisfaction Guaranteed — Your Money Back If You Want It

I absolutely guarantee to return every penny paid me in tuition if, when you have finished my Course, you are not satisfied in every way with my instructions. And back of me, in my guarantee stands the Chicago Engineering Works, a million dollar institution. I give you this guarantee in the form of a signed bond when you enroll.

Act Now—Investigate!

The Season's Most Brilliant Wedding in St. Louis

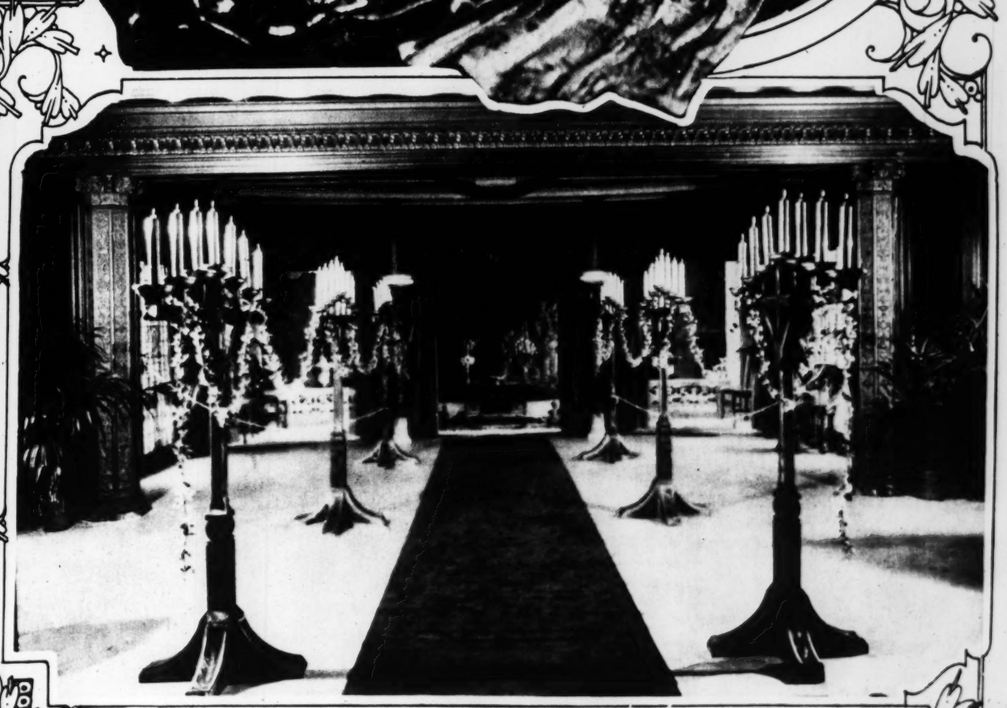
Photographs Copyright 1924 by W. T. Kandeler.

Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Brookings Wallace Jr. (Miss Audrey Busch Faust) and their bridal party. In the above group are: Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Hock, Mr. and Mrs. Leicester Faust, Mr. and Mrs. Asa Brookings Wallace, Misses Eleanor Simmons, Elizabeth Cook, Mary Denman Clark, Catherine Louise Crunden, Grace and Janet Wallace, Frances Collins and Mary Taylor Allderdice of Pittsburg; Messrs. Marion Niedringhaus, Boyle Rodes, Garneau Weld, John Curlee, Albert Bond Lambert Jr., Samuel C. Capen Jr., Ira E. Wight Jr., and Frederick Gardner.

Mrs. Mahlon B. Wallace Jr., the bride. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Faust of 1 Portland place.

A scene in the colorful Venetian garden built under canvas adjoining the house. Dinner for the bridal party was served in the gondola.

The luxurious entrance from the Venetian garden.



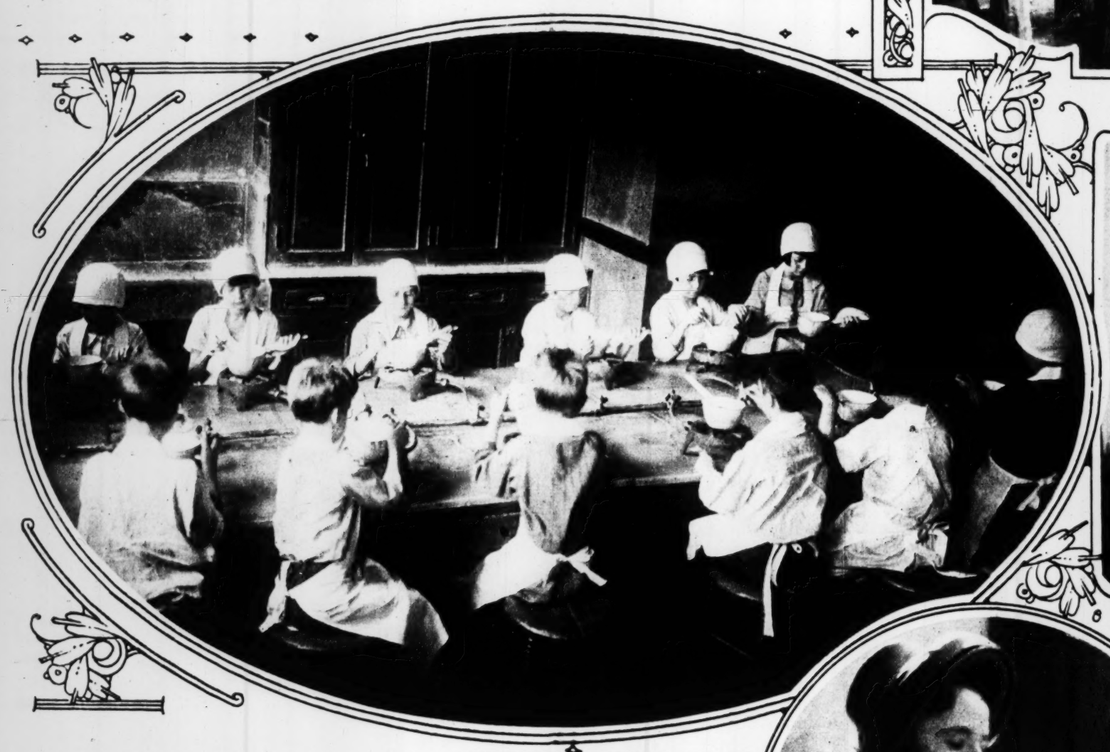
Part of the long aisle for the bridal party. It extended from the marble reception hall to the Fifteenth century art gallery, where the ceremony was performed. The altar can be seen in the distance.

A FEW OF MANY ACTIVITIES OF THE ST. LOUIS COMMUNITY FUND

Photos by Charles Trefts

Children learn "first aid" to their own clothing, and many other useful things, at the Mission Free School, 369 N. Taylor avenue, supported by the Community Fund.

All of the men in this picture are blind. They are making brooms in a workshop at 1625 N. Jefferson avenue, operated under auspices of the Missouri Association for the Blind, a member of the Community Fund.



At the Mission Free School both boys and girls learn to prepare palatable food, domestic science classes being a feature.

Unmarried mothers and their infants are cared for at the Salvation Army Rescue Home, 3740 Marine avenue, supported by contributions of gifts to the Community Fund. One of the kindly Salvation Army lassies is shown here holding a fatherless baby.

Their mothers are working out, so these children spend their weekdays in the day nursery at Kingdom House, 1033 S. Eighth street, a Community Fund enterprise. "Table manners" are observed.

The free ward in the Children's Hospital is supported from the Community Fund. The Missouri Association for Occupational Therapy, which provides pleasant and useful work to help convalescents while away the long hours, also is kept going by donors to the fund. This boy is happy, operating a small loom.

This aged lady in the St. Louis County Old Folk Home, at Kirkwood, is enjoying one of the latest comforts added to the home—that of hearing the news and entertainment programs by radio. Community Fund contributors help to make happier the declining years of the aged and the infirm who live here.

This little ward of the Methodist Orphans' Home for Girls, 4385 Maryland avenue, has a "thank you" smile for all who contribute to the Community Fund.

Some member of this nine may be a second Babe Ruth some day. They are in the Methodist Orphans' Home for Boys, at Clayton, supported by the Community Fund, and for the present are emulating football heroes.

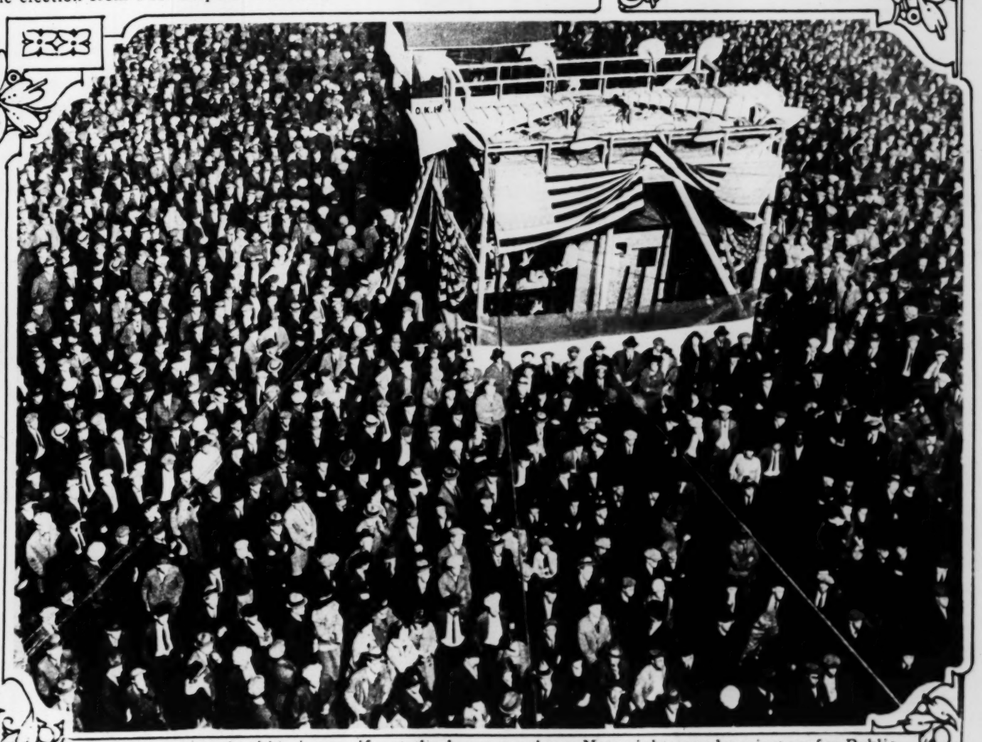
Flashlight photograph of part of immense throng which came to see and hear Post-Dispatch election returns in Twelfth Street Plaza.

If you can identify yourself in this illustration, write and tell the Rotogravure Editor so. This photograph includes but a small fraction of the total number of people who got their first information of the result of the election from Post-Dispatch bulletins.

Another view showing two screens on Post-Dispatch Building, housing in Twelfth Street Plaza for projectors, and, on top, battery of loud speakers which gave election bulletins and music from K S D studio.



Perhaps you are in this picture, if not the large one above. Note eight sound projectors for Public Address System, which gave music and election news to those not within range of vision for the screens.

Lieut. Erik Nelson, one of the U. S. Army officers who piloted three airplanes in first around-the-world flight, is engaged to marry Miss Ruth Butler of Dayton, O. The announcement was made in Los Angeles, at the home of Major and Mrs. C. C. Mosley, on Oct. 30.

The Lingette

Everybody thinks it's silk

Once you had to choose between silk's beauty and muslin's wear — Now you find Both in Lingette!

BUT—until Lingette was created—you could not have both beautiful underthings and freedom from laundry worries! Silk was exquisite—but the effects of warm, cleansing suds, of hot irons, had to be worried about—guarded against. Muslin was durable but not exquisite!

Then, with the creation of Lingette, the beauty of silk and the sturdiness of cotton were combined—for this fabric meets the test of modern laundry methods and comes back with its shimmering loveliness unimpaired!

You must make sure, however, that what you buy is Lingette, and see that the word Lingette is on the selvage, or that the Lingette label is stitched in the ready-to-wear garment!

A Lingette Label may read: Slip, Bloomer, Vest, Step-in, Garment, Chemise, Shirt, Lining, Pajama, Quilt, Gown, Camisole, Creeper, Brassiere. The Garment label is shown below.

Slenderness will make you more attractive-
Are you worried because you are overweight? Afraid you are losing your charm, your youthful figure?
Stout women are at a disadvantage. Pretty clothes no longer fit them, their movements are awkward, their attractiveness deserts them. Friends are sympathetic.
But many of these friends have a secret method of keeping slender! They use Marmola Tablets (thousands of men and women each year regain slender figures this way). These tablets will make you slender again, too. Try them. No exercises or diets—just a pleasant, healthful way of becoming slender.
All drug stores have them—one dollar a box. Or they will be sent in plain wrapper, postpaid by the Marmola Co., 1700 General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

Vigorous, Glowing Health again!

THESE remarkable reports are typical of thousands of similar tributes to Fleischmann's Yeast.

There is nothing mysterious about its action. It is not a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense. But when the body is choked with the poisons of constipation—or when its vitality is low so that skin, stomach and general health are affected—this simple, natural food achieves literally amazing results.

Concentrated in every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast are millions of tiny yeast-plants, alive and active. At once they go to work—invigorating the whole system, clearing the skin, aiding digestion, strengthening the intestinal muscles and making them healthy and active.

CONSTIPATION, skin and stomach troubles yield naturally and permanently to the powerful action of this simple food. Doctors, nurses, farmers, lawyers, policemen, business girls—people of every age and in every walk of life have found the road to health with Fleischmann's Yeast.

Dissolve one cake in a glass of water (just hot enough to drink)—before breakfast and at bedtime. Fleischmann's Yeast, when taken this way, is especially effective in overcoming or preventing constipation. Or eat 2 or 3 cakes a day—spread on bread or crackers—dissolved in fruit juices or milk—or eat it plain.

Write us for further information, or let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Address: Health Research Dept. 537, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

"Until six months ago I was virtually a hermit, only going out to work every day and then spending the evening reading in my room. I was an extreme example of a pimple-faced youth. It seemed nothing could remove these eruptions. Then I tried the Fleischmann treatment. In one month my face had indeed cleared up greatly. I continued the treatment for three months, and by that time my face had become as clear as anybody's. I go everywhere now and bless the day I started to use Fleischmann's Yeast."*
(Mr. Bernard Kliman of Philadelphia, Pa.)

"For years I suffered from habitual constipation. Cathartics gave but temporary relief. I could not enjoy my favorite dishes without fear of flatulence, disturbed sleep, etc. I read of the merits of Fleischmann's Yeast. In despair I took the Yeast haphazardly — later — three times daily. Today I hardly know myself — face all aglow with the pink of health — no constipation annoyances. Again I eat my favorite New England boiled dinner without after discomfort!"*
(A letter from Mr. G. Henderson Coyle of Detroit, Mich.)

"I did not eat six cakes of Yeast and feel myself improving immediately. In fact for one month I used 3 cakes a day without any visible improvement. But by the middle of August, 1921, my chronic constipation commenced to give way*—I again consulted our family physician, who told me to use no other remedies but Fleischmann's Yeast. Today my stomach troubles have become ancient history, and my skin eruption a thing of the past — thanks to the remarkable effects of Fleischmann's Yeast."*
(Miss Ruth Rollband of Utica, N.Y.)

"Fleischmann's Yeast gave me everything that four years' chronic constipation, with its then continual purgative taking, took from me. As a rifle man I saw active service on four fronts, and constipation undermined my constitution until I became a nervous wreck, invalided from the service, classified neurasthenic, I was awarded a pension with disability 40%. Life was hell. After persuasion I tried Fleischmann's Yeast and now eat well, sleep well and what's better, work well and cheerfully.*

"A month ago, I wrote the pension authorities asking for a final award. I don't need my pension any longer."
(A letter from Mr. Charles H. Ward of Halifax, N.S.)

"From the time I was twelve years old until I was thirty-three, every year I had an attack of boils. No remedy or treatment had any effect. My profession was teaching. Seven years ago my annual attack of boils began. The school physician examined me and told me to buy Fleischmann's Yeast and take it daily for ten days. In those ten days my boils disappeared.*

"The doctor told me to repeat this treatment once every three months for a year and that he was sure that I would have no boils. He was right. For the past seven years I have been free from them."
(Miss Elsey H. Irwin of Pittsburgh, Pa.)

FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST FOR HEALTH comes only in the tinfoil package—it cannot be purchased in tablet form. All grocers have it. Start eating it today! You can order several cakes at a time, for Yeast will keep fresh in a cool, dry place for two or three days.

SUNDAY MORNING — Two Comic Sections — November 16, 1924.

ST. LOUIS SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH

8 Pages of Funny Pictures — 8 Roto Pages — 3 True Life Stories — 16 Page Magazine

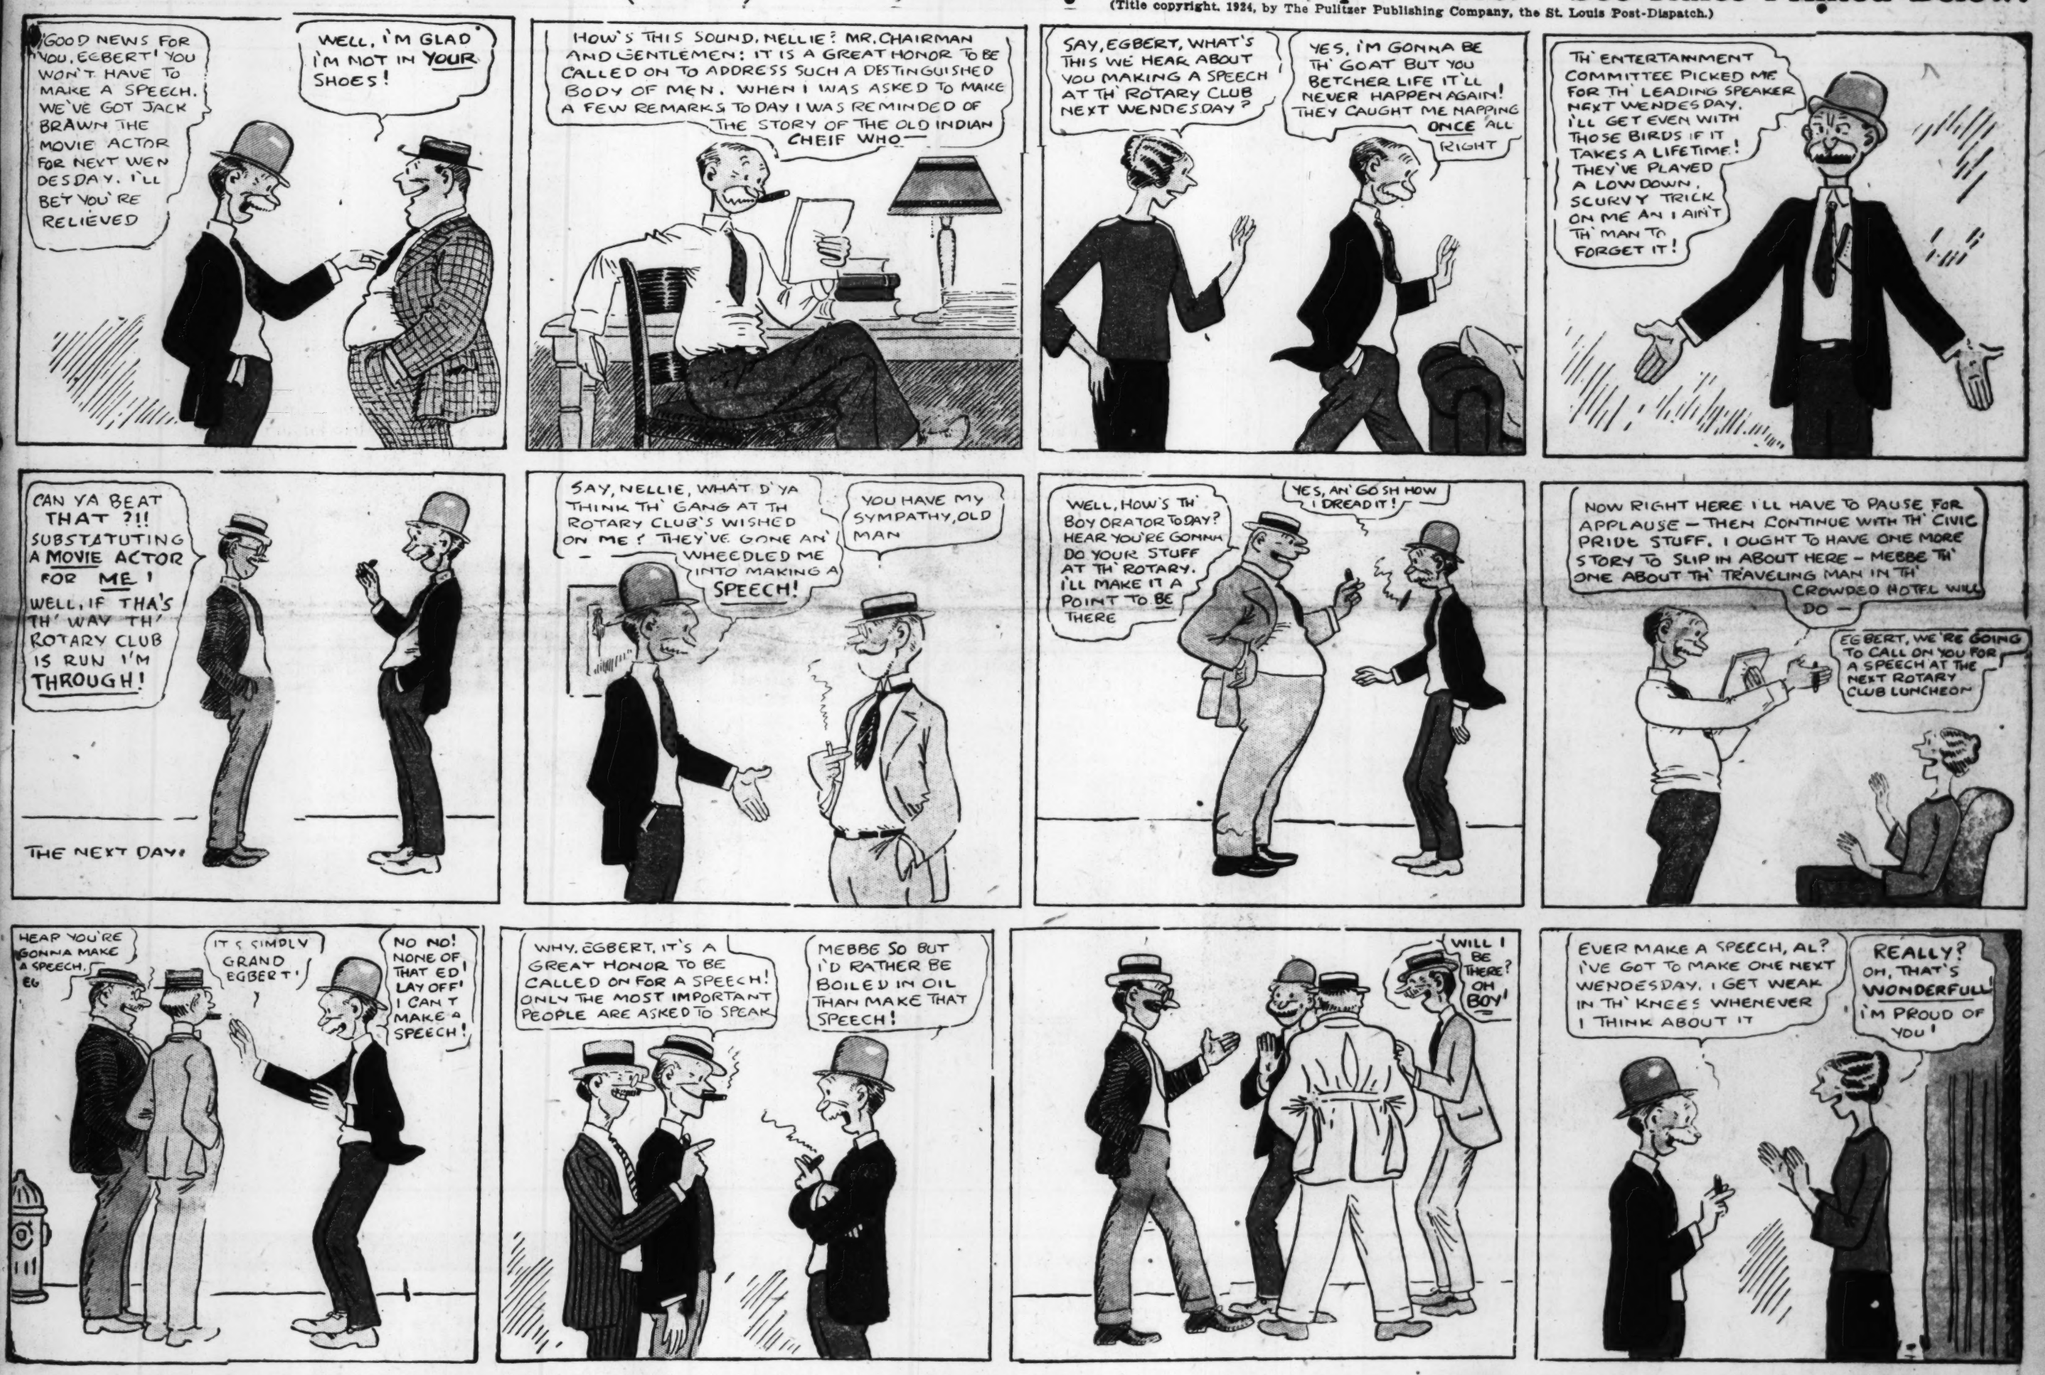
THE TANGLED COMIC (No. 3) Put Everything Back in Its Proper Place. See Rules Printed Below.

(Title copyright, 1924, by The Pulitzer Publishing Company, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.)



A "TANGLED COMIC" will appear every week for twelve weeks as a Comic Section feature of the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

Captions, characters and scenes will be disarranged as if the artist had torn the completed picture into scraps and reassembled the scraps without regard for the original drawings. The artist does not always spell correctly, and you must correct his misspelled words.

Cash prizes will be awarded to Post-Dispatch readers who rearrange the Tangled Comic and submit their solutions to the Tangled Comic Editor.

331 prizes totaling $1100 will be awarded each week.

Four Grand Prizes totaling $1800 will be awarded after the solutions of the 12th Tangled Comic problem have been received here.

Weekly prizes will be awarded in the order of merit, solutions submitted being judged according to—

1st—Accuracy of rearrangement of the Tangled Comic in its original state, having regard for position of characters, sequence of scenes, the "conversation" of the characters and the correction of misspelled words, etc.

2d—Neatness of the finished solution submitted.

3d—Skill, originality or unique method of rearrangement, as disclosed by the solution submitted.

After twelve weeks, grand prizes will be awarded by the same tests. Any solution, of any of the twelve different Tangled Comics, submitted within the required time limits, is eligible for a grand prize.

RULES

Solutions must be submitted every week by mail, addressed to Tangled Comic Editor, the Post-Dispatch, 12th and Olive Streets, St. Louis, Mo., and must be received here not later than noon of Saturday, the sixth day after date of publication.

All solutions must be accompanied by an identifying note, giving name and complete address (including P. O. Box, R. F. D. route and box or street and number, town, state, etc.) of the sender. No solutions will be acknowledged and none returned.

Awards will be announced in all editions of the Sunday Post-Dispatch of date two weeks after date of publication, of each Tangled Comic, together with a black and white reproduction of the correct solution.

Everybody may compete for a share of the prizes offered, excepting only employes of the Post-Dispatch and members of their families.

In the event of a tie for any of the prizes offered, the amount of the prize will be paid to each participant in the tie.

Only one solution may be submitted by any person for one of the weekly prizes.

The right is reserved by the Post-Dispatch to accept the decision of the Tangled Comic Editor and his art staff associates as final in the award and payment of the cash prizes offered, and the submission of solutions will be construed as acceptance of this condition by those who compete for prizes.

YOU MAY GAIN A GENEROUS SHARE OF THE $15,000 IN CASH PRIZES

WEEKLY CASH PRIZE DISTRIBUTION—

$100.00 in cash for the most meritorious solution submitted.
50.00 in cash for the solution next in order of merit.
100.00 in four prizes of $25 each for solutions next in order of merit.
250.00 in twenty-five prizes of $10 each for solutions next in order of merit.
300.00 in sixty prizes of $5.00 each for solutions next in order of merit.
100.00 in forty prizes of $2.50 each for solutions next in order of merit.
200.00 in two hundred prizes of $1.00 each for solutions next in order of merit.

$1100.00 Weekly Total for Twelve Weeks.

GRAND PRIZE DISTRIBUTION—At end of competition.

$1000.00 in cash for the most meritorious solution during the 12 weeks' period.
500.00 in cash for the solution second in order of merit.
200.00 in cash for the solution third in order of merit.
100.00 in cash for the solution fourth in order of merit.

$1800.00 GRAND PRIZE TOTAL.

Apart from the opportunity to earn a share of the $15,000 in cash prizes, the Tangled Comic will prove an alluring and entertaining weekly problem. Every member of the family can help in the solution, but it should be submitted in the name of an individual.

Here's fun for Dad and Mother—for Junior and Sister. Here's a challenge to the ingenuity and wit, the originality and resourcefulness of man or woman, boy or girl.

GIRLS — OH! SUCH A PRETTY DOLL!!

She Walks! She Talks! She Sleeps!

And She Even Winks! Girls! Girls! Here is the DOLL that we have been looking for for years. If you let her drop, she won't break—neither will her eyes fall out. And say, you should hear her say:

Ma! Ma! Ma! Ma! Ma!

Sounds just like a real, live, laughing baby in the room. And hold her by the arms, like the little girl in the picture, and she walks along with you. A real baby couldn't do more. She will also sit up all by herself. Picture her at a little dinner party sitting up at your little table. Now, don't forget the Eyes, pretty, and they actually move. When she lies down they really CLOSE; when she sits up and you shake her just the least bit, she winks. This doll is dressed to perfection in a little play dress with a pretty bow around the neck; socks, patent leather shoes, and all the fixings. When standing she is over 12 inches tall. A lady was in our office the other day; someone happened to move the doll and it said so plainly and so loud that the lady looked around to see where the Baby was. You want this Doll—I know you do—read how you can get her for yourself, all your own.

"MAMA"

How to Get This Walking, Talking, Sleeping, Winking Doll

Our FREE OFFER DON'T STOP READING. Here is how you can get this wonderful big Walking, Talking, Sleeping DOLL:—Send your name and address—that is all. Write your name and address very plainly. Mail at once. As soon as I receive your name and address, I will mail you 10 handsome colored premium Pictures, manufactured for us by one of the largest color printing houses in the United States.
